JAP NOTE SPURS NAVAL RACE

IGOE IN SENATE RACE; CALLS FOR PARTY HARMONY

Accedes to Demand of Downstaters.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Michael L. Igoe, United States district attorney, yesterday put himself into the race for United States senator from Illinois. He directed that a nominating petition to put his name on the Democratic ballot in the primary April 12 be filed at Springfield tomorrow.

Completion of his plans was made known through a letter he wrote to Thomas P. Sinnett of Rock Island, former majority leader of the Illinois house of representatives. Sinnett is chairman of a downstate committee which ten days ago presented to Igoe a petition signed by 50,000 downstaters urging him to run. To that plea Igoe replied:

"I am not only willing but eager to enlist in the service of the state and party by becoming a candidate in the senatorial primary."

Action Surprises Skeptics.

Up to this time there have been skeptics who refused to believe that Igoe would take the big step. They have argued that Washington would hold him back from running against the present senator, William H. Dieterich, whose term expires this year; that he would not run in the face of Gov. Horner's indorsement of Congressman Scott W. Lucas and the postponement of action by the Cook county organization headed by P. A. Nash, Democratic national committeeman.

That he has announced his decision to enter the contest is considered evidence of his certainty on three points: [1] That neither the national administration nor the Democratic national committee has any serious objection to his running against Dieterich; [2] that he will receive substantial backing from within the Horner forces, although the governor personally will back Lucas, and [3] that he will be given the formal indorsement of the Cook county organization, probably some day this week.

Horner Backs Lucas.

In Springfield, Gov. Horner received the news of Igoe's candidacy with the observation that he still believes the senatorship belongs downstate, as Chicago already has one senator [James Hamilton Lewis].

"I am for Congressman Scott W. Lucas for United States senator, and I will be for him unequivocally and all the way," he said.

The same skeptics who questioned whether Igoe would run also have been saying that if he did Senator Dieterich would drop out of the race, because he will be left without organized support. Politicians regard Dieterich's chances in the present setup as nil, but the most recent word from him was that he would file his petition soon.

Stories that State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney of Cook county will become a candidate for the senatorship are still in circulation. But it is understood Courtney would not enter the race without Horner's indorsement, which already has been given to Lucas and which, it is said, will not go to any one but a downstater, even if Lucas should decide to step out of the way of the Igoe drive.

Igoe opened his letter to Sinnett with a statement of his appreciation to the downstate committee officers who called on him, and said he was ready with his answer "to the call from downstate Illinois."

Grateful for Downstate Help.

"After consultation with my family and with many Chicago friends," the letter continued, "and after having read your committee's report attached to the petitions carrying the names of 50,000 Democratic voters in the 101 counties in Illinois outside of Cook county, I can only say that it is tremendously gratifying to me that downstate Illinois thus sets its seal of approval upon the public service I have been privileged to render.

"To win that approval by contributing in every way I know to the welfare of the people of Illinois has been my constant goal. Between the great agrarian and industrial sections of central and southern Illinois and the teeming metropolitan community of Chicago in the north, I have recognized no boundary lines, no partition of interests, and no separation of objectives.

"In the years of my legislative service I encountered no sectional move-

Britain Also Ready to Keep Pace.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—A frantic naval race with the sky as the limit on the size and armament of men of war was foreseen here tonight as the inevitable result of Japan's refusal to reveal her navy building plans to the United States, Great Britain and France.

In a reply to the three powers' demand that she declare whether she is building or plans to build battleships of more than 35,000 tons, Japan failed to see "any logical reason" for the assumption that she is building or will build beyond the limitation of the 1936 London naval treaty. The evasion of the direct question was interpreted as a tacit admission of such an intention on the part of Japan.

Hull Expresses Disappointment.

The disappointment and dissatisfaction of the United States over the Japanese reply was expressed in one sentence by Secretary of State Hull. After a study of the Japanese reply and consultation with the White House and state department experts, he said:

"This government seeks constantly to coöperate in advancing the policy of limitation and reduction of armaments and regrets any development which has the effect of encouraging rather than discouraging races in armament building."

This declaration that Japan's attitude could have no other result than to give impetus to world armaments was shared throughout official Washington. Upon it was based the prediction that the nations of the world will engage in a mad scramble of naval construction far beyond the heavy armament program already under way.

Britain Prepares to Build.

Dispatches from London state that Japan's refusal to reveal her naval program is regarded there as the starting gun of a naval race in which Great Britain must join no matter how reluctantly. Britain has the resources and with the aid of United States steel and supplies can construct the big battleships which Japan's attitude now appears to make inevitable.

The Japanese note came in reply to the American note of last week which demanded a showdown on the size and armament of Japanese ships. The note was inspired by reports that Japan is building 42,000 ton battleships and contemplating 18 inch guns in excess of the 35,000 ton and 16 inch gun limitation of the 1936 London naval treaty.

Japan Not Party to Treaty.

Japan is not a party to the London treaty, but the three powers which signed it—the United States, Great Britain, and France—also agreed that if any other power builds battleships larger than the 35,000 ton limit set by the treaty these three powers would also be relieved of the 35,000 ton limit.

The statement in the Japanese note that Japan stands ready to discuss naval limitation on a quantitative, not qualitative basis—the size of the fleet and not the size of vessels—struck only one responsive chord in Washington. Senator William H. King [D., Utah] announced that he will introduce a resolution in the senate Monday calling upon President Roosevelt to invite the nations of the world to an armament limitation conference which would cover land, sea, and air armaments.

Tokio Seeks Full Parity.

The state department interpreted the note from Tokio as a statement that Japan will enter into no limitation conference, except one which would freeze the fleets of the United States and Great Britain at a level to be determined by the conference and allow Japan to build up to that level. Officials are convinced that Japan will not surrender in her demand for full parity with Great Britain and the United States unless she is beaten in a naval race.

The only course for the United States under the Japanese note is to keep pace in naval construction with

THE HEALING INFLUENCE OF TRAVEL UPON THE ECONOMIC JITTERS

The third day out, after the influence of travel gets in its splendid work.

Faces 5 to 10 Year Term in Each Slaying

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Paul A. Wright was convicted on two counts of armed manslaughter today for the slaying last Nov. 9 of his wife, Evelyn McBride Wright, and his friend, John Bryant Kimmel, in the Wright hilltop home in Glendale.

Paul Wright awaiting verdict. [A. P. Wirephoto.]

The verdict of a jury of eight men and four women was returned in the Superior court of Judge Ingall W. Bull after three hours of deliberation over the month-long murder trial.

Monday morning the same jury will begin hearing evidence on Wright's supplementary plea of not guilty by reason of insanity. This is estimated to require two days.

Burden of Proof on Wright.

When the case is called Monday, the prosecution immediately will rest, throwing the burden of proving Wright's insanity upon the defense, Chief Prosecutor S. Ernest Roll said.

If the jury finds Wright was insane at the time of the slayings, but is sane now, he will be freed. If it finds he was insane then and is still insane, the court can commit him to an asylum or parole him to an institution for treatment and care.

If he is found to be sane, Wright is liable to a sentence of five to ten years in prison on each of the two counts, to run consecutively or concurrently, as Judge Bull may order. Under California law the penalty for armed manslaughter is five to ten years, instead of one to ten years, as in ordinary manslaughter.

Courtroom Scene Tearful.

Tears filled the eyes of Joseph M. Stokes, the jury foreman, as he read the verdicts, and the other eleven men and women showed that they had been weeping in the jury room.

For almost the first time since the trial began, Wright's hands left his chin and dropped to the counsel table, where Jerry Giesler, chief defense attorney, gripped them in sympathy.

Between bursts of tears, Mrs. Edith McBride, mother of Mrs. Wright, said, "I feel vindicated. I don't see how any one could believe that terrible story about Evelyn."

"I don't consider the verdict a vindication of my husband," said Mrs. Marrene Kimmel, widow of the slain

SCIENTISTS ASSIGN GARLIC BREATH TO JOB OF LIGHT WORK

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Engineers seeking a better artificial light reported today in the Journal of Franklin institute the discovery of a method to change an odor resembling garlic into a brilliant, sunshine-like light.

The discovery was made by three research engineers of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company laboratories in Bloomfield, N. J., in a year's experimentation with tellurium vapor as a source of artificial light.

J. W. Marden, N. C. Beese, and George Meister said they had demonstrated that tellurium, a semi-metallic element which produces a garlic breath if inhaled, gives off a continuous spectrum like sunlight instead of a line spectrum ordinarily found in metallic vapor lamps.

OLD EENY, MEENY, MINY, MO TURNS TO STREAMLINING

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The old familiar counting out rime which started "Eeny, meeny, miny, mo" has been modernized, Miss Florence Maryott of the University of Nebraska English department reported today.

Miss Maryott, who conducted an extensive study of the counting out rimes which are handed down from generation to generation, found the newest version to be:

"Sally ran
"Don't you look,
"You nasty man!"

Most of the old counting out rimes, the teasing rimes, the guessing rimes, and the tongue twisters of several generations ago have remained unchanged, however, Miss Maryott says.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 12.—(AP)—That fantastic adventure in baby bearing known as the Millar stork derby—"the mother who bears the most babies gets the money"—took a long step nearer the payoff window today.

Mr. Justice W. E. Middleton of the Ontario Supreme court accepted the claims of four mothers as being equal, and indicated that the prize of about $500,000 would be shared equally by them unless two other claimants are able to produce additional legal substance for their claims.

Accept Claims of Four.

Missing too was Mrs. Pauline Mae Clarke who, though as prolific as the others, has not been so successful in proving her offsprings' legitimacy—a point on which the Ontario courts have expressed themselves as being very particular.

The mothers whose claims were accepted today by Justice Middleton are:

Mrs. Isabel Mary MacLean, 34, wife of a provincial employé; Mrs. Lucy Alice Timleck, 38, wife of a city employé; Mrs. Annie Smith, about 34, wife of a city fireman, and Mrs. Kathleen Ellen Nagle, 35, wife of an unemployed carpenter.

Each mother proved to Justice Middleton's satisfaction that she had borne nine children during the ten year period dating from Oct. 31, 1926, the day on which Charles Vance Millar, eccentric and wealthy lawyer, died.

Question of Legitimacy.

Under the Millar will [nobody knows whether it was serious or weirdly jocular] the bulk of his fortune was left to that Toronto mother who bore the most children in the city during the ten years immediately subsequent to his death. The will provided birth registration statistics of the city should be the basis of determining the winner.

Millar neglected to state whether babies to be counted must be legitimate. The Supreme court has ruled they must. This is a point on which the claim of Mrs. Clarke hinges.

During the period prescribed by the will Mrs. Clarke bore nine children. For a considerable part of the decade, however, she was separated from her husband. Five of the nine children were born after the separation, and the father of one was named as a man other than her husband.

Her counsel argued also that inasmuch as all nine children were born while the Clarkes were married to each other, they were born "in wedlock"; that the Clarkes never lived far apart and were in frequent meeting with each other.

Sets Hearing Date.

Mrs. Kenny claims to have borne eleven children in the ten year period, and her lawyers state she can produce registration certificates for nine. Her claim is challenged, however, because she has not as yet produced death certificates for those of her children who did not survive, and it is contended therefore that some of them may have been still born; and a still born babe would not be counted.

The court fixed Feb. 25 as the date for a hearing on the claims of Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Kenny. At that time, the court indicated, decision will be made as to whether these two mothers are to be grouped with the other four.

IT'S THE GROOM THAT WEARS THE PANTS AT WEDDING IN KENTUCKY

Prestonsburg, Ky., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The custom of a bride wearing her mother's wedding gown was reversed in a marriage at Wheelwright, thirty-eight miles south of here. The Rev. J. D. Payne, who performed the ceremony, said today the groom, Amox Tackett, wore the pants worn by his father at his wedding thirty-six years ago. Young Tackett married Ethel Rogers.

POPE JOYOUS AT CELEBRATION OF CORONATION DAY

DEMAND POLICE TRACK STRIKE TERROR KILLERS

Business Men Act After Slaying.

At 2 p. m. last Thursday terrorists smashed Lloyd Rourke's skull with a club in a campaign of lawlessness in Hyde Park that police say resulted from the strike now in progress at the Del Prado hotel, 5307 Hyde Park boulevard.

Yesterday Rourke died.

But last night not a suspect was in custody in the murder of Rourke, a laundry truck driver who had the contract for delivering laundry to other hotels served by the Del Prado's laundering plant.

Thomas J. Courtney, state's attorney, promised to investigate.

Hyde Park police said they were looking for the assassins, but they had no one under arrest.

Demand Official Action.

Business leaders, meanwhile, were demanding official action to end the terrorism.

Courtney's promise to look into the murder came after Manager R. E. Langford of the Del Prado and the managers of other hotels appealed to the state's attorney for protection against further terrorism.

In their appeal, the hotel men were backed by the Association of Commerce and the Employers' association. Oscar G. Mayer, packer, and president of the association of commerce, headed the delegation calling on Courtney.

Reasons for Murder.

Capt. Ray Crane of the Hyde Park police said the reason for the murder of Rourke lay somewhere in the labor troubles involving the laundry business and the attempt to organize hotel workers in the Miscellaneous Hotel Employés' union.

Capt. Crane said he is investigating the activities of the Laundry Workers' union, organized last November by William J. Donovan. Donovan is former owner of the Bon Air Country club and, according to Manager Langford, is secretary and treasurer of the Trades and Crafts council, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, which is trying to unionize hotel workers not otherwise organized. in the Miscellaneous Hotel Employés union.

Other Fields of Inquiry.

Crane said he would also inquire into the affairs of the council, which he said is headed by George McClain. Another organization Crane said he would look into is the Laundry and Dyehouse Drivers' and Chauffeurs' union, of which Ray O'Donnell is an executive.

While the law enforcement authorities awaited developments the murder victim's relatives, in their home at 5533 Blackstone avenue, were reticent about speaking of the terrorism or even supplying a picture of the murder victim.

Rourke, warned by the strike pickets at the Del Prado hotel against making his deliveries, had for some time been traveling with a bodyguard in order that he might fulfill his contract.

Drives Away from Hotel.

Shortly before 2 p. m. Thursday he drove away from the Del Prado to deliver laundry to the Fairfax hotel at 1369 Hyde Park boulevard. A little later Adolf Bradshaw, colored doorman at the Fairfax, noticed a man at the rear. Helga Berglund, a chambermaid at the Fairfax, said she looked out an upstairs window about that time and saw a man, carrying a club that resembled a ball bat, race from the rear of the hotel out into Hyde Park boulevard, to be driven away by a man waiting in a parked car.

Rourke was found beside his truck. His skull had been crushed and he died in the Illinois Central hospital without regaining consciousness.

Investigation disclosed that Rourke had sent his bodyguard on an errand just before making the fatal trip. This led to speculation that the assassins had been trailing Rourke, awaiting their chance.

Rourke was 31 years old, married, and the father of a girl of 11. Police investigating the case said he had given up his union membership, but his brother, Policeman Daniel Rourke of the Woodlawn station, insisted he was a paid up member of the expressmen's division of the Piano and Furniture Movers' union.

Police arrested six union business agents at the Del Prado: Maurice Peterson, Abe Rosen, and Charles Lindgren of the laundry wagon drivers; George Schmidt and Frank Main of the miscellaneous hotel workers; and Marshall Dubach of the coal teamsters. They were charged with disorderly conduct and freed on bonds of $25 each when they said they knew nothing of the attack.

The strike began Feb. 3 after the Del Prado manager refused to let the miscellaneous hotel workers' official solicit members in the hotel while the employés were at work, according to Capt. Crane. The seven stationary engineers and stokers quit work and, as Langford told it, put out the hotel fires. He replaced the strikers.

Union Attempts Continue.

Police records show the police were called when pickets interfered with coal and food deliveries, and with taxicab service. Picketing has gone on continuously.

The story of activities at the Del Prado, the killing of Rourke, and intimidation they said was practiced against other outlying hotels was told by the hotel men at the conference with Courtney. They said the miscellaneous hotel workers' leaders have organized the employés of most of the loop hotels and are concentrating now on hotels outside the loop. After visiting Courtney the hotel men went to see James P. Allman, police commissioner, who promised the police protection they asked.

The hotel laundry business, authorities said, is a lucrative one. Capt. Crane said he was told that strangers have frequently called upon hotels patronizing the laundering plants of other hotels and advised them to give their business to other laundries.

GALE SWEEPING BRITAIN; WATER INVADES LONDON

LONDON, Feb. 13 [Sunday].—(AP)—The Thames river, swollen by an 80 mile an hour gale driving water up it from the North sea, began to overflow its banks in the heart of London today. Scores of families living along the waterfront were warned to be ready to evacuate. Police and hundreds of constables remained on emergency all-night duty from London to the river's mouth.

The threatened inundation of London was only part of a picture of destruction at sea and in the interior as the third storm in a month lashed the British Isles. The storm, described as the worst in forty years, disrupted shipping and piled up floodwaters along the English channel coast that caused train service to be suspended in several areas. Two persons were killed by falling trees in the interior.

The 1,100 ton British destroyer Walrus, broken adrift while under tow in the North sea, was blown aground in North bay. Her four man skeleton crew managed to reach shore in an exhausted condition on a rubber raft. Several other vessels were reported in distress. Scores more raced for shelter in the nearest harbors.

FERNEL CHARGES MEDICAL SOCIETY PUSHES HIS TRIAL

Dr. Jean Paul Fernel, plastic surgeon, asserted yesterday that officials of the American Medical association were influencing his trial before the state department of registration and education on charges of gross malpractice. The hearing was held in the department's office at 360 North Michigan avenue.

The charge against Dr. Fernel is brought by Miss May Morrill of Worcester, Mass., who said she was permanently disfigured by a face lifting operation he performed.

SALESMAN SLAIN IN AUTO; KILLER TAKES HIS CAR

Canton, Ill., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Harold D. Cleary, 39 years old, a plumbing supply salesman of Peoria, was shot and killed in his automobile tonight near Duncantown by a man riding with him, known only as "Brownie," believed to be from Peoria.

The story of the shooting was told to authorities by Harold Politie, also of Peoria, who was hitch-hiking to Peoria. He said the men picked him up about an hour before near Duncantown. He said the men had been drinking. They quarreled over whether they should go to Peoria or to East St. Louis. "Brownie" suddenly drew a revolver and shot Cleary in the temple.

Politie, who was taken to Lewistown, said the gunman forced him to lift the body from the auto and place it at the side of the road. "Brownie" then drove away in Cleary's new car he said.

CRISTOBAL, C. Z., Feb. 12.—[U. Agents of the 9,412 ton British vessel announced that the blaze was reported in the No. 2 hold among the general cargo. The ship advised it could reach Cristobal tomorrow without assistance. The Cristobal fire department was ordered to stand by on the docks.

ADMIT ERRORS, SEN. VANDENBERG TELLS PRESIDENT

Blame for Depression Put on Administration.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—There can be no let-up in the Roosevelt recession until the administration frankly admits its errors and corrects them, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [R., Mich.] said tonight.

In a Lincoln's birthday address before the Middlesex club, he called for a showdown between collectivism and the American system. He asserted the government itself and not business must take the primary blame for current business conditions. He said there has been too much "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde-Park" in dealing with business.

Senator Vandenberg's address was one of several Lincoln day speeches made throughout the country by Republican leaders who invited dissatisfied Democrats to vote with them in the next congressional and presidential elections.

New Alignment Forecast.

Before his speech Senator Vandenberg, who has been considered a possible Republican presidential candidate at the next election, said he had no aspirations in that direction.

The senator forecast a realignment of political parties and predicted: "We can win in 1938 and we can win in 1940."

Pointing out that Lincoln himself was a coalitionist when temporary emergency required, the Michigan senator indicated plainly he would not oppose a change of identity of the Republican party if necessary.

Among the numerous things needed to put this country on its feet, Senator Vandenberg said, are a balanced budget, repeal of the surplus profits tax, a decent chance for small business, a side-stepping of entangling foreign alliances, and a balance between capital and labor.

He denounced the government's dealing with business and asserted that occasional, dramatic gestures of executive good will had been nullified by demonstrations of hatred for the American system.

In Anteroom to Prosperity.

"We are in the anteroom to prosperity—with the door needlessly locked against this happy destiny," he declared.

"The Roosevelt pattern—if it can be called a pattern more than 24 consecutive hours at a time—is the pattern of federal paternalism. It is the pattern of centralized dictation—whether in business or in government."

Senator Vandenberg decried the loss of confidence in the government which has followed the activities of the administration, particularly in its dealings with business.

"If vindictive business had wanted to sabotage the New Deal and itself at the same time," he said, "it would not have increased the number of wage earners in industry by 39 per cent between 1933 and 1937. It would not have shortened the work week by 16 per cent. It would not have driven production within 3 per cent of the peaks of 1929.

"Business is not the culprit in the tragedy of today's recession. It is the unwilling victim. Government itself must take the primary blame."

Bridges Offers Program.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 12.—(AP)—United States Senator H. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire tonight outlined a Republican program to end what he termed the depression of 1937. He called for a balanced budget, cut in expenses, repeal of the profits tax, and a sound farm program.

Utica, N. Y., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Senator Warren R. Austin [R., Vt.] attacked administration measures before congress and commended the public for blocking some of them. St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Representative Clare E. Hoffman [R., Mich.] branded the civil liberties committee, the Committee for Industrial Organization, and the national labor relations board destructive agencies which are driving steadily toward the destruction of the government.

Gov. Aiken Hits Domination.

New York, Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Gov. George D. Aiken of Vermont tonight counseled Republicans to look to the hundreds of thousands of laborers, white collar workers, and farmers who are hungry for leadership. He defined the present issue as one between federal leadership and federal domination.

Halleck Urges Crusade.

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Representative Charles A. Halleck [R., Ind.] called for a new national crusade of patriotism to reestablish the fundamental principles of American government under the constitution. He said that the split in the Democratic party forecasts gains for the G. O. P. this fall.

STRANDED POLAR SCIENTISTS SIGHT RESCUERS' LIGHT

MOSCOW, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Hopes for the early rescue of four soviet Russian scientists adrift on an ice floe were buoyed today as the party discovered flat ice suitable for airplane landings and sighted searchlight rays from the icebreaker Taimyr, 40 miles away. Ernest Krenkel, radio operator of the stranded party, reported the rays were seen from the floe this morning.

Planes aboard the icebreaker were prepared for flight after the scientists, headed by Ivan Papanin, radioed the discovery of flat ice near their floe as they drifted along the east coast of Greenland. The Taimyr's crew could see the coast of Greenland. Both the ice camp and the icebreaker were between Greenland and Jan Mayen Island.

The Taimyr emerged from a storm as two other icebreakers seeking to rescue the scientists, the Murman and the Murmanets, reported a gale had halted their progress. The scientists, who established their camp near the north pole on May 21, have been drifting southward steadily. Their position became dangerous this month.

A DOCTOR FINDS GOLDEN FLEECE WILL FADE AWAY

He Makes Money for All but Himself.

The only person who failed to fleece money from Dr. A. Mercer Parker, chiropractor, was Yellow Kid Weil, Attorney Francis V. Healey said yesterday. The Yellow Kid, he added, simply had not heard of Parker.

Dr. Parker, Attorney Healey told Master in Chancery Thomas W. Flynn, was a fine man and a good husband, but a spendthrift. Consequently, he was wont at rare intervals, when some new mountain of gold was melting away from him, to entrust the residue to his wife, Lena.

That, Healy added, is how Mrs. Parker, who is suing her husband for return of $85,000 in securities, cash, and real estate she claims he took from her while she was in a sanitarium, got the $85,000.

Controls Waterways Center.

"Gold mine, oil well, and waterways salesmen—all took his money," Attorney Healey related sadly. "Once he even paid $50,000 for some dump land beside the Calumet river—land not worth over $1,800—because some one told him it was the new waterways center of America."

As Dr. Parker ran through one inheritance he would come into another, Attorney Healey continued. Thus, when his mother's latest gift ran out in 1928, a "good aunt" came through with about $75,000. This was about the time of his marriage to Mrs. Parker. But before they could be married the $75,000 had melted to $25,000.

Only $1,000 for Honeymoon.

"Because of his wife's business sagacity," Healey said, "Parker agreed to turn over to her the remaining $25,000. After he had done that he was penniless. His mother had to give him another $1,000 for his honeymoon."

In 1932 Parker's mother gave him $175,000 in stocks and bonds, Healey said. He lost all but $10,000 on the grain market. This $10,000 he gave to his wife.

And so it went.

But Attorney Frank E. Cantwell, beside whom sat Mrs. Parker, a chubby, demure figure in dark blue, differed. Mrs. Parker, he said, had $15,000 from her first husband, as well as lump sums for the education of her two daughters. Moreover, anything she received from Dr. Parker was a "gift" and not a "trust," he contended.

PUZZLE PUZZLES PUZZLE LEAGUE; HOW ABOUT YOU?

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Members of the National Puzzlers' league, wading through charts, maps, and blocks at their convention here today, were stymied for a few minutes by Cipriano Farraris, champion number juggler. Here's the problem Farraris propounded:

"I have a certain amount of money. If you give me dollars for cents and cents for dollars added to the amount I have, I could buy a $79.20 second hand automobile and still have left the amount I now possess. How much have I?"

The puzzlers puzzled and Farraris said: "Any high school algebra student should solve that."

Finally one of the puzzlers gave the answer as $20.79 and said he could prove it.

SELFISH CITIZENS CALLED A PERIL TO CONSTITUTION

Judge Evans Speaks at Lincoln Memorial.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Judge Evan A. Evans of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago tonight declared that only the greed and selfishness of the people could cause a decay of the constitution.

"When our citizens are sordid and selfish, seeking soft snaps and shirking responsibilities, the constitution runs on the shoals," he said in a speech at a meeting of the Abraham Lincoln association in commemoration of the civil war President's 129th birthday anniversary.

"Always there are those who would undermine the constitution and still others who would use it for selfish purposes," he said. He assailed as "the cheapest thing in history" the individual who "wraps himself in the flag or in the constitution and proclaims himself a class A patriot."

Citizens Must Be Sincere.

"Genuine respect for the constitution never can be created by lip tributes or meaningless ceremonials," he continued. "The test of belief in and support of it can be found in service by the citizens. It is an instrument of man, depending on the sincerity and integrity of the citizens for its growth and strength."

In silvered Roman characters on a black background the name "A. Lincoln" once again adorns the modest frame dwelling that was the only home the rail splitter-lawyer-President ever owned.

During the ceremony in which the doorplate, missing several decades, was attached to the doorframe, Gov. Henry Horner disclosed that the donor was Jesse Jay Ricks, former Taylorville, Ill., schoolboy who rose to the presidency of the Union Carbide and Carbon corporation.

Doorplate which was restored to its place at Lincoln home.

With the recovery of the doorplate, Lincoln's home virtually has been restored to the condition it was in on that historic day of his first nomination in May, 1860.

Services at Tomb.

Memorial services at Lincoln's tomb, during which wreaths were placed in behalf of President Roosevelt and the American Legion, highlighted the two day observance of the emancipator's 129th birthday anniversary.

Daniel J. Doherty, national Legion commander, who led a pilgrimage to the shrine, called for a "return to the principles of Lincoln and those of our forbears."

Lucas Hits Enlistment.

Congressman Scott W. Lucas of Havana, Democratic candidate for the United States senate, struck at enlistments of American youths in the Spanish war.

Lucas said at a ceremony in nearby New Salem State park, where Lincoln once lived, that he "witnessed with horror" the efforts of un-American men to obtain enlistments in the "Abraham Lincoln brigade," which he said was a communistic group who went from America to fight for the loyalist cause in Spain.

Gov. Horner made several addresses in connection with the anniversary celebration. Speaking in Lincoln, Ill. the governor said Lincoln "typified the opportunity which lies before every American." He said Lincoln was honered because "he believed passionately in the American ideal that men should govern themselves."

President Pays Homage.

Mr. Roosevelt, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and his military and naval aides, motored to the memorial and participated in the services which included the laying of a wreath at the base of the Lincoln statue.

Col. Edwin M. Watson, senior White House military aide, acted for the president in placing the wreath.

Lincoln Souvenir

WAVERLY WOMAN DIES.

Jacksonville, Ill., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Miss Anna Maher, 58 years old, of Waverly, Ill., died today. She had been employed for thirty years as a clerk in the Star store and appeared in god health when she retired last night.

RUG MERCHANTS MEET COUPLE OF STAR CUSTOMERS

Two men carrying rugs met two strangers yesterday in the 3100 block on South Halsted street, described the rugs as genuine orientals and offered to sell them for $100 each. The strangers beat the price down to $50 each and then asked the vendors to accompany them.

The four walked into the Deering street police station where the prospective purchasers disclosed themselves as William Dugan and John Trinka, plain clothes policemen, and arrested the rug sellers, Harry Jacobs, 33 years old, 3440 West 15th street, and Abe Asher, 48, of 3620 West 16th street. The rugs were of grass and of little value. Trinka said his wife had been victimized by back door rug sellers several weeks ago and he had been on the lookout since.

Salute Memory of Their First War Chief.

Twenty old men were young again yesterday, soldiers saluting the memory of their first commander-in-chief, Abraham Lincoln.

While the city's school children, war veterans and civic leaders gathered for Chicago's largest ceremony around St. Gaudens' figure of Lincoln in Lincoln park, the score of G. A. R. veterans held their Lincoln birthday service in Memorial hall in the public library building. There they heard Dr. William Clyde Howard, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, commend their valiant deeds and their loyalty to Lincoln.

"By the prowess of your arms, for which we salute you," Dr. Howard said, "Lincoln has left us the legacy of a united nation. Because you men in blue counted not your lives dear, he left us parity, equality, and the promise of a glowing future."

Difference in Ceremony.

There was a difference in yesterday's ceremony from the first memorial program 39 years ago, though the order of the service was unchanged. As before James Crugom, the little white haired drummer, beat his usual sprightly call to ranks, and the comrades stood erectly to hear Milton Myers, goateed chaplain of the post, invoke blessing upon them and their martyred compatriot, Lincoln.

But no mild eyed soldier braced against the rostrum to read again "The Gettysburg Address"; the advance of colors this year was to the lighter step of R. O. T. C. boys; Maj. George Mason, 98 years old, patriarchal president of the Grand Army post remained seated and silent, having relinquished his duties to the younger vice president, Thomas Ambrose, and there was only one irrepressible cane tapping the floor when the band played "Marching Through Georgia."

The American Story.

They all listened intently, though, when Dr. Howard told a story that can happen only in America, the story of a boy who went from a log cabin to the white house.

"What made Abraham Lincoln great?" he asked, "You, his friends, know. These things made him great. He came from the common people. He was a rugged individualist—how we need that quality today. He was gentle, strong of character, and humorous. He was patient, laboring to bring peace to his beloved land. He was morally just. With your help, he stopped slavery."

PLAYMATE FOR SU-LIN REACHES AMERICAN SHORE

VICTORIA, B. C., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Little 3 months old Diana, also called Mei-Mei, one of the world's two captive giant pandas, arrived today from the orient. Her captor, Mrs. W. H. Harkness Jr., New York, said she would take the animal to Chicago to join Su-Lin, the other member of the species, in Chicago's Brookfield zoo.

Full of fight and fun and now weighing 21 pounds, the rare creature, on the way across the Pacific, occupied Mrs. Harkness' suite, had a room with twin beds to herself, but preferred to play in the bathtub hours at a time, playing with the plug and sliding down the sloping side.

The animal's eyes are set in two black patches and her paws are black. The rest of her body is a rusty white. Mrs. Harkness said she hoped the zoo would finance a third expedition into Tibet, in an attempt to find a male of the species.

ILLINOIS WOMAN RECALLS LINCOLN BOUNCING HER ON KNEE

"Silverhair" was Lincoln's pet name for little towheaded Rose Whipp when he bounced her on his knee in his Springfield office. Silver haired in a serene old age is this same person, now Mrs. Rose Northrup of Bloomington.

"How well I remember," said Mrs. Northrup, "Mr. Lincoln had great long legs and he used to sit with his feet on his desk and I often sat on his lap in this position, and he stroked my blond hair—I was a regular towhead—and he called me 'Silverhair.' My hair, of course, was a great contrast with his own shaggy black hair."

John Hay, then a young man, afterward private secretary of President Lincoln, was another close friend of Mrs. Northrup.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Every time Lincoln's birthday rolls around R. C. Slendy of Sioux Falls and all his relatives feel sort of proud. That is because Slendy's great-grandfather, Nathan Dow Thompson, once pinned Lincoln's brawny shoulders to the mat in a wrestling match, one of the few men ever to best Honest Abe, who was famed as a wrestler in his youth.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

GREEN ASSAILS DICTATORSHIP OF CIO BY MINORITY

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, told a group of union men affiliated with his organization yesterday that the difference between the A. F. of L. and its competitor, the Committee for Industrial Organization, is the difference between majority rule and minority dictatorship.

In elaboration of this point, he later charged that labor's cherished principle of collective bargaining had been flouted by secret agreements between two men which led to the renewal of the contract between the United States Steel corporation and the C. I. O.

Points to Secret Conference.

The men affected by this contract, the steel workers themselves, Green declared, did not participate in the negotiations. Although the renewal was announced Wednesday, the A. F. of L. head declared that Myron C. Taylor, chairman of United States Steel, and John L. Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O., had arranged the terms weeks before at a secret meeting in a New York hotel.

Green was in Chicago yesterday receiving congratulations upon his speech before the University of Wisconsin Alumni association at the Palmer house Friday night in which he declared that labor recognizes and demands that business be permitted to operate without government fiat and be allowed to make a fair profit.

Wants to Keep Majority Rule.

On a visit to the Chicago Federation of Labor offices at 666 Lake Shore drive yesterday, Mr. Green was invited to address a meeting of several hundred members of the federal unions. He took the C. I. O. as a topic.

"What we in the A. F. of L. are fighting for," he said, "is the retention of majority rule, as against a dictatorship by the minority.

"We have had to do with dual movements before. There were the Knights of Labor and the Industrial Workers of the World—the I. W. W. Each challenged the A. F. of L. and each passed out of memory. In my opinion that is what will happen to the C. I. O.

Talking later of the C. I. O. steel contract, in which the $5 per day minimum wage for eight hours' work is continued, Mr. Green declared that the negotiation displayed a new technique in collective bargaining which practically nullified it.

Calls Approval a Farce.

"Information now discloses that the agreement, as announced, was negotiated several weeks ago by Taylor and Lewis. Its approval by the steel workers committee was a farce to give window trimming.

"Collective bargaining, as we understand it in the American Federation of Labor," Green continued, "means that representatives of the workers formulate their demands in open conference, then submit them to the employers and eventually arrive at a decision.

"But in the steel contract, the workers had nothing to say, and no opportunity to present their views or raise their points.

"One section of it that would be highly objectionable to dues paying members of any organization provides that there shall be no solicitation of membership on the company property. This limits, hinders, and hampers the building of a collective bargaining agency. That is representative of a form of autocracy in which the A. F. of L. will have no part."

At the same meeting which Green addressed earlier in the day R. G. Soderstrom, president of the state federation of labor, declared that labor will sponsor an investigation of the liability insurance field at the next session of the legislature.

"Employers of this state," he said, "last year had paid in $22,000,000 in liability insurance, but only $7,000,000 had come back to the injured and $3,000,000 in hospitalization."

Misses Own Premiere

SIGRID GURIE.

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Samuel Goldwyn brought Sigrid Gurie, Norwegian actress, here two years ago to play Princess Kukachin in "Marco Polo." He kept her carefully guarded. He was going to make another mysterious Garbo of her.

Last night Miss Gurie was to attend the premier of "Marco Polo," her first public appearance. But influenza played a cruel trick. Miss Gurie had to stay home in bed with a 103-degree temperature.

PROMISES DATA TO BACK CHARGE RELIEF IS RACKET

Thomas E. Courtney of De Kalb, who became a member of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission in December, said yesterday he would produce ample evidence to support his charge that Illinois relief is a political racket costing a needless $1,000,000 a month.

Mr. Courtney made his charge at a meeting of the IERC Friday. As a result, the commission ordered a report on the comparative costs of administrating relief under the former state control and under the present local unit system. Work on this report will begin tomorrow.

The public must be fully informed on relief problems before a solution can be reached, Mr. Courtney said.

man. "He never needed vindication, as everybody who knew him has known all along."

They were referring to Wright's story, told on the witness stand, that he killed the two after he found them embracing on a piano bench in his home.

The slayings occurred after Wright, who is 38 years old, and Kimmel, his associate at the Union air terminal at Glendale, had made the rounds of Hollywood night clubs the night of Nov. 8. Wright induced Kimmel, who was 32 years old, to accompany him home, where they arrived about 2 a. m.

Mrs. Wright greeted them as they came in, and the three sat before the fire in the living room and had some drinks. Feeling tired, Wright then went to a bedroom off the living room for a nap.

"Some time later I woke up," he said, "and heard John and Evelyn talking. I walked to the door, and I never will forget what I saw.

Comes Out Shooting.

"Everything went white—like a flash of flame. I went back to the bedroom, got my gun, and came out shooting."

In his plea to the jury his attorney said the shots were fired while Wright was in a state of unconsciousness induced by seeing the embrace and therefore, under the law, Wright was not responsible for his actions.

The state did not ask the death penalty, but concluded its address to the jury by declaring that the slayings had been premeditated.

Man of 70 Falls in River; Saved by Bridge Tenders

George Meier, 70 years old, 3748 Lakewood avenue, was rescued by two bridge tenders last evening after he fell into the Chicago river at Halsted and Division streets. The tenders, John Weckler and Jack Morrison, heard Meier's cries, threw him a life preserver, and then brought him ashore in a rowboat. Meier was revived by a fire department inhalator squad and was taken to the Alexian Brothers' hospital, suffering from exposure.

IGOE IN SENATE RACE; CALLS FOR PARTY HARMONY

Accedes to Demands of Downstate Group.

ment that might not better have been compromised in neighborliness. I heard no proposition for dissociation as between downstate and upstate that promised any profit to the people of either section comparable to the gains that have come from unified endeavor since the far-flung prairies of Illinois were brought to statehood under a constitution fashioned by the founders to govern all races and creeds and geographical divisions.

Refers to Factional Conflict.

"You have represented to me and to Chicago political leaders that state and party progress are threatened at this time by factional conflict. You have reported it as the judgment of your representative committee that my candidacy would promote party harmony and serve state solidity, and you have called attention to my loyalty to the Roosevelt national administration, and have indorsed my qualifications for the high office to be filled.

"Believing as strongly as I do that Illinois can best be served through maintenance of its singleness of entity and purpose, and encouraged by your committee's confidence in my ability to attract the united support of all Democratic factions, I am not only willing but eager to enlist in the service of the state and party by becoming a candidate in the senatorial primary."

Signs Candidacy Declaration.

Igoe told Sinnett he had signed the declaration of candidacy required by the primary law and had forwarded it to Peter F. Rossiter, secretary of the downstate committee at Springfield, with a request that it be attached to the Igoe nominating petition and filed at the secretary of state's office tomorrow.

"With pleasure and confidence," said the letter, "I look forward to the campaign and I heartily subscribe to the proposal of Gov. Horner made at your recent conference with him that we shall have a primary contest in the true spirit of the law, without bitterness or rancor."

Igoe wrote that he had received pledges of support from "many friends equally enthusiastic here in Chicago."

Although the movement to bring Igoe into the senatorial contest was started downstate, he has been a resident of Chicago since boyhood. He now lives at 5434 Cornell avenue with his wife and one son, Michael L. Jr., 7 years old. Mrs. Igoe, whom he married in 1928, was Miss Ruth O'Connor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. O'Connor of Galesburg, Ill.

HAMMER KILLER ESCAPES PRISON WITH 2D MANIAC

Make Keys and Open Cells at Chester.

Chester, Ill., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Paul Harrison, hammer slayer of three men and a woman in Chicago six years ago, escaped from the Illinois State Hospital for the Criminal Insane here tonight. With him escaped Peter Florek, another Chicagoan.

Both men were described by Dr. James McManus, hospital superintendent, as "insane criminals of the worst type." He called Harrison a "dangerous hammer killer."

A searching party of 150 guards and state and county officers was immediately organized to search for the men. Warnings were broadcast by radio to police departments in the surrounding area as far as St. Louis.

Unlock Own Cell Doors.

Dr. McManus said Harrison and Florek had apparently fashioned keys in some manner to open their cell doors and two outside doors. He said they walked out some time after 7 p. m. without being noticed by the guards.

Both men were dressed in the regulation hospital attire—white shirts and blue denim trousers.

Harrison, 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighing 180 pounds, was described as a handsome man. He is dark complexioned. Florek, 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighing 160 pounds, has blond hair and blue eyes. He has small scars on his forehead, back and left thumb.

Both men, though insane, are considered clever by prison officials who said Harrison might try to make his way to Chicago. Police in Chicago were asked to keep a watch on his old haunts there. Harrison is 35 years old, and Florek only 22.

Harrison's Crimes Recalled.

Harrison went on his maniacal hammer killing forays in March, 1931, and January, 1932. His victims were Dr. James Shaffer, a dentist, slain in his office at 3801 Broadway on Jan. 23; Earl Davis, a watchman, killed in a garage at 3740 Sheridan road a few days later; Charles Pagel, beaten to death at 27 East Harrison street on Jan. 9, and Mrs. Norma Newby, murdered in the Elk Grove forest preserve in March, 1931.

Police arrested Harrison in a flat on Harrison street, and he finally confessed the killings. He was found insane by alienists and committed to Chester.

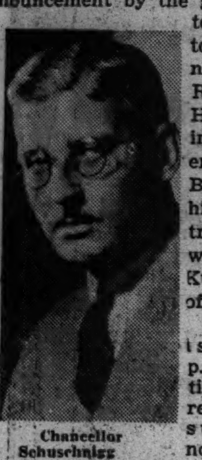
HITLER DICKERS WITH AUSTRIA; NEW MYSTERY

Parley with Schuschnigg Veiled in Secrecy.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—A curt announcement by the government late tonight disclosed to the German nation that Reichsfuehrer Hitler had been in secret conference all day at Berchtesgaden, his mountain retreat in Bavaria, with Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria.



Chancellor Schuschnigg

The statement, issued at 10:30 p. m., gave no intimation of the reason for this surprise conference, which, when it became known, set loose a new flood of rumors in European capitals. The statement said merely that Schuschnigg came to Germany upon the invitation of Hitler, and that the "unofficial meeting was inspired by the desire of both parties to discuss problems affecting the relations of Germany and Austria."

Reports on Results Conflict.

The reticence of German officials convinced diplomats that Hitler had failed to come to an understanding with Schuschnigg.

[Dispatches from Vienna said Austrian officials had reported Hitler and Schuschnigg reached an agreement which included: Nazis in Austria would end their campaign of sabotage; Hitler promised he would reaffirm in his speech before the reichstag on Feb. 20 that he respects Austrian independence; negotiations would be continued, particularly in the economic field, to cement better relations; Hitler agreed to grant a 25 per cent export premium to reduce the cost of German exports to Austria.]

It was understood that German government officials were displeased by a statement issued in Vienna by Dr. Walter Adam, Austrian press minister, while Hitler and Schuschnigg still were in conference. They saw in Adam's statement an effort by Austrian cabinet ministers to "restrict the freedom of action of their chancellor in his negotiations with the Fuehrer."

Vienna Suppresses Statement.

[Dispatches from Vienna said Adam had declared the Fatherland Front, Austria's only legal political party, would continue to enjoy a monopoly in forming public opinion on political problems and that there could be no question of permitting the Nazi or any other party in Austria to do so. He said Austria would retain full freedom of action regarding the Austrian Nazis. The Austrian government was reported to have issued a statement branding Adam's declarations as incorrect and to have confiscated an edition of a newspaper which printed them.]

Schuschnigg's arrival in Germany was kept a closely guarded secret. He entered Germany from Kitzbuehel via Salzburg, Austria. He traveled in one of Hitler's automobiles and was driven directly to Berchtesgaden, where he arrived at 11:30 a. m. The visit was announced at noon in Vienna, but was kept secret in Germany all day.

Accompanied by Foreign Chief.

Schuschnigg was accompanied by Dr. Guido Schmidt, his secretary of state for foreign affairs. Flanking Hitler was Joachim von Ribbentrop, Nazi foreign minister, and Franz von Papen, whose recall as ambassador to Vienna was announced on Feb. 4, when Hitler shook up the army command and his cabinet and diplomatic corps.

These five began their conversations immediately. The meeting lasted until 3:30 p. m., interrupted only by an hour for lunch. The Austrians then left immediately, driving back to Kitzbuehel via Salzburg.

The conference had been prepared in November when Schmidt visited Berlin to see the Nazi hunting exhibition. Since then Austrian authorities have raided the homes of officers and members of secret associations which they claimed were working to overthrow the government and introduce Naziism into Austria.

The Austrian government contends that the activities of secret Nazi organizations are a direct violation of the Austro-German agreement of July 11, 1936, and Schuschnigg had planned to protest energetically against these activities in his conversation with the Fuehrer.

[In the agreement of July 11, 1936, Hitler promised to respect the sovereignty of Austria.]

Diplomats had noted with surprise that Von Papen, though he was said in the official Nazi announcement of Feb. 4 to have been relieved of his post, returned to Vienna last Monday and immediately started negotiations with the Austrian foreign office.

Given "Last Chance" by Hitler.

Friends said that in his conversation with Hitler on Saturday, Feb. 5, Von Papen had succeeded in inducing the Fuehrer to give him another chance to bring about conciliation between Germany and Austria. Hitler allotted Von Papen a short time in which he could bring about Schuschnigg's visit to Germany.

Friends of Hitler say he hoped to "enlarge the Austro-German peace understanding" to show the world that all the rumors about German designs for any anschluss [union] with Austria were untrue.

Schuschnigg's visit to Germany at the present moment came as a surprise to Hitler's closest ally, Premier Mussolini of Italy. Italian sources said that Mussolini, when in Berlin last September, urged Hitler to confer personally with Schuschnigg, but that the date of the interview was uncertain.

Fall of Goga Blow to Nazis.

Diplomats believe one reason Hitler sought the conference with Schuschnigg was the downfall of Octavian Goga, Germany's friend in Rumania. Goga's anti-Semitic government resigned last Thursday and, it was believed, Hitler wished to make up for this loss of prestige by coming to terms with the Austrians. The Nazis still hope that should the new dictatorship in Rumania fail to be as sympathetic with Germany as Goga was, it will be replaced soon by a strong Iron Guardist [Fascist] government which will be even closer to the Nazis than was Goga.

With unanimity revealing official inspiration, the German press tonight made bitter attacks against France and, to a lesser degree, against England, accusing them of causing Goga's downfall.

"Political gangster methods caused Goga's fall." "European scandal of the first order." "Scandalous French meddling in Rumanian home politics." Those were some of the headlines in Nazi papers.

Guard Austrian Railway.

VIENNA, Austria, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Security measures reminiscent of those taken for Premier Mussolini's journey across Austria to Berlin last year were inaugurated tonight on a railroad line from the Italian border to the German frontier.

Hundreds of gendarmes were summoned hurriedly from the Tyrol to guard the route from Kufstein to the Brenner Pass by way of Innsbruck.

Just why the preparations were made could not be established officially at once, but the resulting flood of rumors added to the tension surrounding the conference at Berchtesgaden, Bavaria, between Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Chancellor Schuschnigg. These included: that an Italian official was going to Berchtesgaden; that some one was going from Berchtesgaden to Rome; that the authorities had heard of plans to derail an express train on that route tomorrow.

Europe Eyes Secret Parley of Dictators

REBEL CAVALRY OPENS NEW PUSH IN EASTERN SPAIN

HENDAYE, France [at the Spanish Frontier], Feb. 12.—(AP)—The Spanish insurgent army north of Teruel dug in today on both banks of the Alfambra river and sent cavalry patrols east from newly conquered territory in preparation for a new drive. It is intended to sever communications between Valencia and Catalonia.

The offensive which began last week has moved so swiftly that the bridges across the Alfambra were left undamaged by fleeing government forces, enabling Gen. Francisco Franco's commanders to move motorized forces and supplies on the heels of the advance lines.

Insurgent military dispatches placed great importance on the reported capture yesterday of Zalamea hill in the Cordoba sector of Southern Spain, calling it the most important position on the Estremadura front. Government advices admitted the insurgents were attacking in this region but said Zalamea still was held by the government.

The government said three mines destroyed a part of the insurgent defenses in University City at Madrid and killed 200 soldiers.

U. S. Prepares to Build Superwarships.

Japan and other powers, in the opinion of state department officials.

The officials are certain that the Japanese decision will hasten the construction by this country of a fleet of the largest floating fortresses in the world. The navy can be expected to ask for three super battleships of between 43,000 and 44,000 tons as the nucleus of such a fleet, it was said. It is not believed that the navy will mount 18 inch guns on the super battleships, although the department has plans for the heavy caliber guns. The largest guns now carried by battleships are of 16 inch caliber.

New Policy Predicted.

The adoption by the navy of the basic policy that the maintenance of a fleet big enough to protect both the Atlantic and Pacific at the same time and protect all this country's possessions may be another result of the Japanese refusal to make public her naval building plans. The policy may be added to the 800 million program for a 20 per cent increase in the strength of the navy now pending before the house naval affairs committee.

The administration also expects to amend the navy expansion bill to declare non-aggression as fundamental policy of the American navy. Earlier in the day Secretary Hull declared the United States is following "simple common sense" in building up its defenses at a time when other nations are arming, and is preparing for defense, not aggression.

Hull made his statement in a letter which held the American foreign policy is moderated between extreme internationalism and extreme isolation. The letter was addressed to Representative Louis Ludlow [D., Ind.], author of a proposed constitutional amendment which would require a popular vote on a declaration of war.

Hull Outlines Goal.

In his letter to Ludlow explaining the American foreign policy relating to the naval construction program, Hull said that this country is increasing armament with the sole desire to keep this country out of war.

He reiterated denials made earlier in the week that this country has any alliances or understandings with foreign nations in the event of war. Nor does the naval construction program contemplate the use of any units of the American fleet with the navy of any other nation in the world or a division of the seas in patrol areas in the event of war.

The secretary asserted there has been no change in the American foreign policy since his declaration of the attitude of this nation on July 16 and subsequent statement of the principles underlying international relations. There should be no disturbance over affirmations contradictory to his official expressions, he said.

Second Note Renews Pledge.

The Japanese government dispatched another note to the United States today, replying to an American protest against disregard of American property and rights in China by Japanese troops. This note said that in addition to reëmphasizing previous instructions for respect of the American flag the government took the following steps:

1. Dispatched a high officer to China to insure full execution of instructions.

2. Stationed special officers at important points in China to supervise the rights of foreign powers.

3. Reinforced military police in China.

Text of Japan's Reply

TOKIO, Feb. 12.—The text of Japan's refusal to divulge secrets of her naval construction in reply to demands for information by the United States, France, and Great Britain follows:

"It may be recalled that at the last London naval conference the Japanese government proposed in earnest their desire to bring about a drastic reduction in naval armament, the total abolition of capital ships and aircraft carriers which are aggressive in their nature, and at the same time contended that qualitative limitation, if unaccompanied by quantitative limitation, would not be calculated to achieve any fair and equitable measure of disarmament.

"Unfortunately the views of the Japanese government were not shared by your government and other governments concerned. The Japanese government always were prompted by a spirit of nonmenace and nonaggression and have no intention whatever of possessing armament which would menace other countries.

"At this juncture, when as a result of the nonacceptance by other countries of the reasonable desires of Japan in the matter of disarmament there is as yet in existence no fair disarmament treaty to which Japan is a party, the Japanese government is of the opinion that mere communication of information concerning the construction of vessels will, in the absence of quantitative limitation, not contribute to any fair and equitable measure of disarmament and regret that they are unable to comply with the desire of your government on this point.

"The Japanese government fails to see any logical reasoning in the assumption on the part of your government that this government must be deemed to entertain a scheme for constructing vessels which are not in conformity with the limits provided by the London treaty of 1936, from the mere fact that they do not dispatch a reply giving the desired information; and they are of the opinion that it is not a matter which should concern this government if your government, on the basis of whatever reason or rumor, should exercise the right of escalation provided in any treaty to which Japan is not a party.

["The right of escalation" is the escape clause permitting signatories of the London treaty to exceed the 35,000 ton limit if it is exceeded by nonsignatories.]

"It is to be added, however, that as the Japanese government did not fall behind other governments in their ardent desire for disarmament, they will be ready at any moment to enter into any discussions on the matter of disarmament which gives primary importance to a fair, quantitative limitation."

PLOT TO MURDER HITLER REPORTED BY LONDON PAPER

LONDON, Feb. 13.—[Sunday.]—[U. P.]—The Sunday Referee said today in a dispatch from Paris that a prominent member of the Prussian aristocracy had disclosed that three German officers plotted to assassinate Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

The three officers, members of historic families of the Prussian nobility, were said to have been arrested in Munich by the Nazi secret police while they were en route to Berchtesgaden, Hitler's Bavarian retreat, to carry out the plot.

The Prussian aristocrat, who was reported to have revealed the scheme, was said to have arrived in Paris Friday night from Berlin.

SINGAPORE BASE OPENS; WARTIME SECRECY TO RULE

SINGAPORE, Feb. 13.—[Sunday.]—British naval authorities today virtually clamped wartime secrecy on Great Britain's new naval and air force bases here as they prepared Monday's formal opening of the mammoth $100,000,000 "Gibraltar of the Far East."

Only a half dozen selected photographers and three newsreel companies will be permitted to take pictures of the big concrete fortifications. These have been authorized under written approval of the admiralty offices in London.

JAPS RUSH NEW TROOPS TO AID RAILWAY DRIVE

Open Attack Upon 3,000 Mile Road to Russia.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 13.—[Sunday.]—(AP)—The Japanese announced today that two vital railways into the heart of Shantung province had been re-opened. This made it possible to rush reinforcements to Japanese troops driving southward toward the important east-west Lunghai railroad, they said.

The Tsingtao-Tsinan and Tientsin-Tsinan railways, put out of commission by fleeing Chinese soldiers several weeks ago, have been rehabilitated completely, the Japanese claimed.

They asserted Japanese offensives along the Tientsin-Pukow and Peiping-Hankow railway lines were continuing, but said they were no reports on the progress.

Pinch Chinese Flank.

Reports last night stated Japanese forces clamped a pincer movement on the western flank of China's central armies simultaneously with the start of a northward drive aimed apparently at the 3,000 mile Chinese highway artery to soviet Russia.

[Peking dispatches told of heavy Japanese troop movements toward inner Mongolia, and said they gave credence to persistent reports that Japan is concentrating forces at Paotow, in western Suiyuan province. From there, the Peking advices said, it is expected the Japanese will begin the drive on the Russian highway.]

Attempting to bottle up 400,000 Chinese soldiers defending the Lunghai railway zone, which separates the two areas of Japanese conquest in China, Japan's armies struck from the north and south at the same time. Eight Japanese columns are trying to close in the Chinese central defense forces. The corridor the Chinese are fighting to hold is a rich agricultural zone.

60 Miles from Lunghai Line.

Moving south from the walled town of Nanlo, captured in last week's fighting, Japanese troops were said to have occupied Puyang, an advance of about forty miles. They are now sixty miles north of the Lunghai line.

Another Japanese column, moving north, was said to have crossed the Hwai river north of Pengpu after a fierce battle. It was reported to be advancing steadily toward Suchow, junction point of the Lunghai and the Tientsin-Pukow railways and principal objective of the North China campaign.

These reports said the Japanese had reached a place known as "Little Pengpu" and were threatening Hsinmachiao, sixteen miles north of Pengpu.

[Chinese dispatches from Hankow said more than 1,000 Japanese troops were wiped out in a futile attempt to cross the Hwai river near Pengpu. They admitted some Japanese units reached the north bank of the stream, but said most were annihilated in hand-to-hand fighting and all others were made prisoners.]

Chinese planes bombed Pengpu and set fire to a British owned flour mill, it was reported by the Domei [Japanese] News agency.

American Woman Killed.

[Copyright: 1938: By the New York Times.]

HANKOW, China, Feb. 13.—[Sunday]—An American woman missionary was among eight persons killed last Thursday during a Japanese bombardment on the Lunghai railway at Lanfang, about twenty-five miles east of Kaifeng, a semi-official report said today. Sixteen other persons were said to have been injured.

Delays His Wedding

MR. AND MRS. F. W. KRUMSEE.

The wedding was delayed six hours, but at last, at 11 o'clock last night, Frederick W. Krumsee, 26 years old, and Adeline Vogel, 25, became man and wife.

The ceremony had been set for 5 p. m., in the Gethsemane Evangelical church, Belle Plaine and Monticello avenues. Relatives and friends were at the church at that hour, but the bride waited vainly for the bridegroom to call for her in her home at 3822 North Richmond street. A telephone call to Krumsee's home at 3605 School street brought no answer.

The police were notified by the Rev. Richard R. Fillbrandt, who was to perform the wedding ceremony and feared that the bridegroom had met with violence. At 8 p. m. Krumsee, an insurance broker, telephoned from Milwaukee saying he was on his way back to Chicago.

On his arrival at the church the marriage took place. Krumsee could not or would not explain what caused him to miss the earlier date nor why he had gone to Milwaukee.

CAPT. EDEN URGES FRIENDSHIP WITH DICTATOR STATES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Capt Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, in a speech to 2,500 members of the Junior Imperial league at Birmingham, stressed the need for international co-operation, and the benefits of "the spirit of the league of nations," which Capt. Eden said, "has always inspired us in this country."

Supporting Prime Minister Chamberlain's policy of conciliating the dictatorships at all costs, Capt. Eden remarked:

"Democracy has its own objectives and must pursue them in its own way. Friendship between democracies and dictatorships must not become impossible. We do not wish to see a lasting cleavage of democracies ranging themselves against dictatorships."

Praise of the British method rather than any suggestion of policy was the keynote of the speech.

He warned his listeners against allowing the world to think that England is decadent or effete, and advised them to "go home tonight resolved to combat all forms of defeatism in every walk of life; to make your faith in democracy alive and practical, and to cherish above all a belief in England and her people.

"Wrong deductions about this country have done great harm in the past," he said. "They can do still greater harm in the future."

The foreign secretary criticized "pessimism and fatalism," asserting that there was no reason for pessimism.

BRITAIN REDUCES MARCHING LOAD OF ITS SOLDIERS

Equipment Now Weighs Only 41 Pounds.

BY SAM BREWER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Foot slogging still is very tiresome, but it has been nearly eliminated from the lives of British soldiers. Nearly every day brings word of some new comfort provided for Tommy Atkins.

The latest is reduction of his marching equipment to a total of 41 pounds, instead of the old load varying between 70 and 80 pounds. That includes uniform and rifle.

Of course, most of the marching now involves more wear and tear on tires and engines than it does on the infantry's feet. But even for advanced work, where the trucks cannot follow and each man has to carry his own equipment, 41 pounds is all he need carry.

Streamline Equipment.

Besides the weight reduction, the equipment has been "streamlined" to get rid of all the accessories and appendages that dangled from the belt and batted against the thighs and added to the discomfort of marching.

The long and cumbersome 1908 model bayonet with its 11 inch blade has been replaced by another with an 8 inch blade. Ammunition, once carried in 10 round pouches on the belt, now goes into two sacks that can be slung up out of the way.

These same pouches serve for hand grenades or magazines for the Bren light machine gun or Boys anti-tank gun.

British army leaders have realized that a soldier's efficiency grows as his load decreases. The day has passed when each man must have on his person everything he needs for weeks at a time in the field.

Pack Carried By Truck.

His pack proper travels on a truck. So does his overcoat, and so do entrenching tools. Under normal conditions, he will carry only a light haversack, with his canteen inside it instead of dangling on his hip.

One of the chief gains in lightening the pack is that the men can carry more weapons forward. One man can carry a Bren gun, weighing 21 pounds with its stand. To split the load, the stand can be given to another man. That gun can turn out 550 rounds a minute.

Two men can carry the 35 pound anti-tank rifle, which fires from five to eight .50 caliber shells a minute. Three men can carry the new 3 inch light mortar, can mount it in less than 30 seconds and fire 40 10-pound shells a minute from it.

Italian Army Ordered to Adopt Goose Step

ROME, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Gen. Alberto Pariani, undersecretary of war, today directed the army to adopt the "Roman step," or goose step, which has been taken up by the Black Shirts. His circular containing the order cited Premier Benito Mussolini's belief that the difficult stride served to cultivate the proper attitude of mind among soldiers.

BUILDING OF TOLL ROAD ON LAKE ST. 'L' ROUTE URGED

Mayor Weighs Proposal to Get U. S. Loan.

BY HAL FOUST.

Mayor Kelly made known yesterday that he is considering a proposal to convert the Lake street elevated line into a bus and automobile superhighway with a $10,000,000 federal loan. To qualify for such a loan a toll would have to be charged so that the project would be self-liquidating.

The mayor, in a telephone interview from Miami Beach, Fla., where he is on a brief vacation, said this toll road study is entirely aside from and has no relation to the $27,000,000 Congress street superhighway proposal now in the hands of the city council. The new project does, however, coördinate with plans for a modernization of Chicago's entire transportation system.

Could Start Work Promptly.

"Proponents point out that with a federal loan," said the mayor, "construction on this Lake street job might be started promptly. This work could be underway while negotiations and litigation are prosecuted for a unification of bus, 'L,' and street car companies and a betterment of transportation to all sections of the city.

"With a successful termination of these negotiations the Lake street superhighway would be a unit in the general transit modernization project. The toll could be removed and the federal loan retired with part of the $160,000,000 which can be made available for the traction program.

"If, notwithstanding the city's best efforts, the traction negotiations are unduly protracted, the Lake street superhighway might be completed as a federal project and placed in service as a toll road pending eventual solution of the whole transportation problem.

Ten Cent Toll Suggested.

"A toll of 10 cents per passenger car and perhaps 3 cents from each bus fare would probably be sufficient to make a federal loan self-liquidating. The elevated lines might be amply compensated by permitting them to operate the bus lines with a 10 cent fare. These are surmises on my part, subject to accurate determination by engineers.

"From an engineering standpoint this federal loan project is simple and sound. Most of the physical details have been worked out by engineers for the city council local transportation committee in connection with the traction program. City attorneys may have a more difficult task in ironing out the legal wrinkles.

Court Approval Necessary.

"With the elevated lines in a receivership, the federal court would have to approve the scheme. It is also possible that legislation would be necessary to authorize Chicago to operate a toll road. The legislation might be obtained at a special session which, according to press reports, Gov. Horner is contemplating calling to raise funds for relief.

"From all these factors you can see that the plan to apply for a federal loan for the Lake street superhighway project is still in a tentative state. However, if Washington is looking favorably again toward self liquidating loans to create employment, Chicago should not overlook any opportunities to share in the disbursement of government money."

A recent dispatch from Washington reported that President Roosevelt approved a bill introduced in the senate for an 8 billion dollar system of transcontinental toll roads.

Plans Regarded as Adaptable.

The physical plans for a Lake street superhighway are fairly well covered in a report to the council local transportation committee on Nov. 22, 1937, signed by Philip Harrington, city traction engineer; R. F. Kelker Jr., the committee's engineer, and Charles E. De Leuw, consulting engineer. Their designs and estimates for the Lake street job were drafted as part of the comprehensive traction program. Only a few changes would be necessary to adapt this section of the general program for construction with a federal loan. Toll gates would be necessary and the number of connections with surface streets would have to be reduced.

The engineers reported that the Lake street elevated structure could be converted into a four lane elevated highway from the Chicago river to Long avenue, three fourths of a mile from the western city limits, for $6,750,000. This price would include ramps and approaches at the western terminal. It also would include terminal facilities at the eastern end on the present stub of elevated railway in Wacker drive at Washington street.

Add Randolph Improvement.

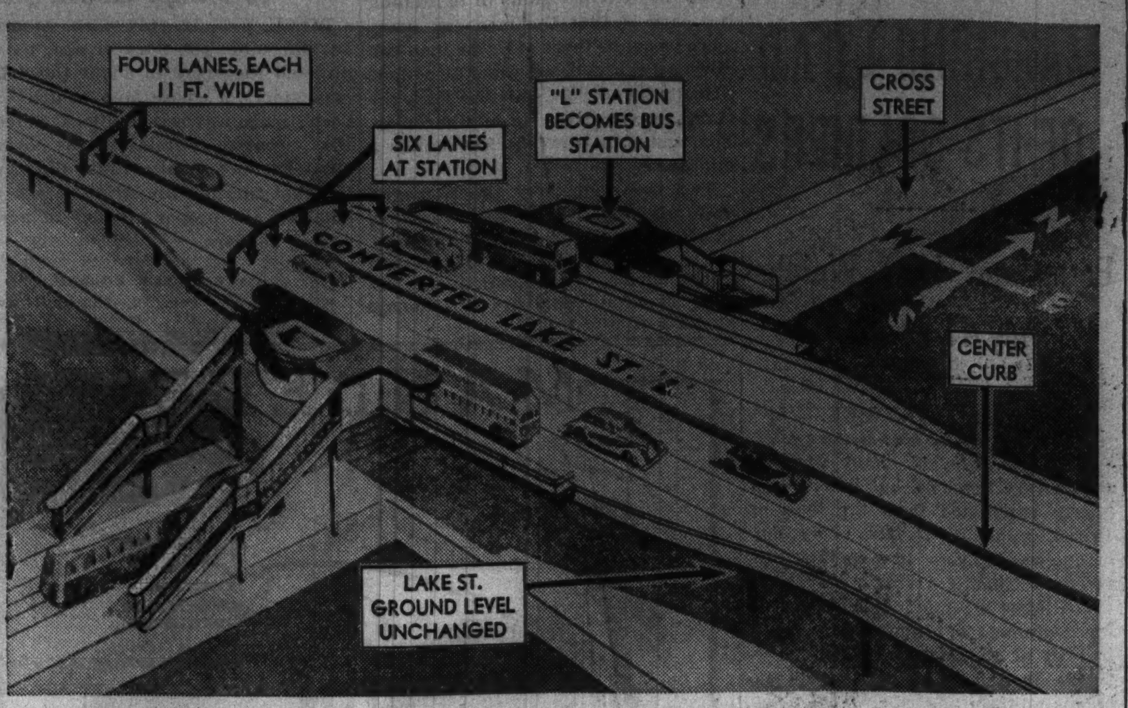
Additional terminal facilities on the eastern end are planned for Randolph street. The engineers estimated that for $3,250,000 a six lane elevated highway could be built in Randolph street, connecting with Lake street at Union park, 1600 west.

The Randolph street structure on its eastern end at about Jefferson street, would have ramp connections with the Lake, Randolph, and Washington street bridges, all included in this $3,250,000. The estimate also covers the cost of connections on the west with Washington and Warren boulevards.

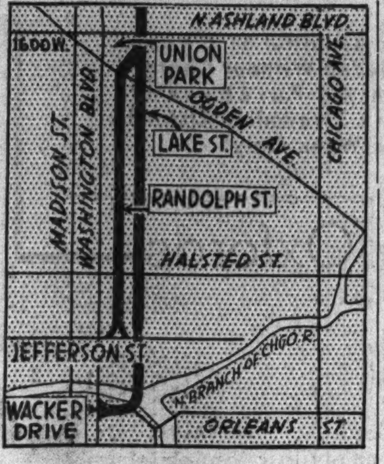
In reducing the number of vehicular approaches to this west side elevated highway so that it could be operated economically as a toll road there would need be no reduction in the number of bus stations planned for the route by the city's engineers. At these stations, under the proposed design, the highway would be widened from four to six lanes so that two lanes in each direction would remain free for moving trafic while buses were stopped and while they were accelerating and decelerating.

Unlike the Congress street proposal, which includes an expenditure of more than $17,000,000 for land and buildings, the Lake street job involves no acquisition of real estate for right of way.

Consider Rushing Lake Street Superhighway



Drawing of section of elevated highway proposed to be built on the trestles of the Lake street rapid transit line. Note that at the bus station and on the approaches the pavement would be widened from four trafic lines to six so that two lanes in each direction would remain free for travel while buses paused.



Location of eastern termini of proposed Lake street and Randolph street elevated highways. From the convergence of the two routes at Union park the Lake street superhighway would extend to Long avenue, near the city limit.

Beloit, Wis., Feb. 12.—[U. P.]—I. K. Lewis, a Duluth, Minn., attorney, tonight believed that his daughter Margaret was suffering from a nervous breakdown when she disappeared from the Beloit college campus two days ago.

Lewis said he received a telegram from the girl today, saying she was safe in New York City. He said he would go to her as quickly as possible.

Miss Lewis, 21 years old, was disciplined ten days ago for violation of a campus rule against smoking in her room. As president of the Women's Self-Government association, Miss Lewis was intrusted with enforcement of the rule. She resigned the presidency shortly before she disappeared.

Moving Forward

Marshall Field & Company presents here each day observations and opinions intended to be of interest and value to those it seeks to serve.

WAR

By CALEB

A SUDDEN outbreak of war talk causes a curdling and convulsion of all the manifold activities of man. So-called civilization is too young a shrub to have grown away from the savagery which was its roots. When the modern tom-toms begin to sound, all of the innate selfishness in men begins to poison their thinking.

Patriotism of a sort is a truly noble thing. Carried too far, it becomes dangerous provincialism. It is a kinetic anaesthetic making dead the while they dance, the people's sense of right and wrong. It stimulates hatred and dulls all sense of values.

In our more naive moments we talk of the benefits of war—the stimulus to research and invention—the galvanizing effect which brings about feverish production efficiency—the purge which drowns in a surge of greater importance the lesser things of life. If the world had never had the Great War we might have fewer chemical compounds in industry and the tempo of our last season of prosperity might have been less rapid, but there might be more equitable governments over the world and we might have today a citizenry richer in leadership, intelligence, and the humanities.

A hundred years is a short time as against eternity. Therefore, our thinking advances but insignificantly in a hundred years.

A little book published in London a hundred years ago says: "See her (Glory) in the breach of that cannon-rent rampart: up, sword in hand, fly her worshipers. The smoke-wreathed phantom (Glory) beckons them. 'On, heroes, on—fight, fight, think of your colors, your country, and your king.'

"In a minute he is reposing after his toil without any legs on.

"Who was it spoke—Glory or Humbug?"

THIS might have been written in the current revulsion of public sentiment against the folly and uselessness of war. The point is—today more people relatively than a hundred years ago can distinguish between humbug and glory.

Each century makes some gains in this regard. The more enlightened the peoples of the world become, the more careful will their leaders become in side-stepping and avoiding what war entails.

Meanwhile, there is no humbug to the world's present wars or threats of war. Only reasonable preparedness is insurance against possibly overwhelming disaster. This is so obviously good policy when it comes to other threats, such as flood, fire, and burglary—to name a few—it should appear obvious in the broad connection.

STATE PAPERS OF ROOSEVELT TO BE PUBLISHED

One Syndicate Declines $100,000 Bid.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Disclosure of the $100,000 newspaper syndication of the forthcoming publication of the Roosevelt state papers suggests that the President after all may carry off the lion's share of the financial bonanza he and his family struck in the White House.

For a time it looked as if the President had been put in the piker class by other members of his family. He published two or three books of his public addresses but they brought in only a fraction of the incomes the other members began to enjoy as soon as the family was established in the White House.

From writing and broadcasting Mrs. Roosevelt has received a large revenue comparing not unfavorably, it was once disclosed, with the presidential salary of $75,000. The greater part of the broadcasting revenue Mrs. Roosevelt has given to charity.

Son James Prospers.

Next largest profits were reaped by the President's son James in the insurance business. He is popularly supposed to have "cleaned up a fortune" in less than four years writing insurance for individuals and corporations who, according to Representative Allen T. Treadway [R., Mass.], found it desirable or advisable to ingratiate themselves with the administration. As a member of the house ways and means committee Mr. Treadway examined young Roosevelt's income tax return and reported that the income was extraordinarily large for a young man just breaking into the insurance business.

Elliott Roosevelt, the President's second son, capitalized his position and influence in several quarters but principally in the radio field, his services being early enlisted by William R. Hearst. Her newly acquired prominence as the daughter of the President put Anna Roosevelt into newspaper and magazine writing in a big way even before she married John Boettiger whom Hearst snapped up for editor of his Seattle Post-Intelligencer the moment he read the November, 1936, election returns.

Issued in Five Volumes.

Now it looks as if the President will top them all. "The Public Papers and Addresses of Franklin D. Roosevelt" is the title of the work that is to be issued in five volumes next month. The opus will contain messages and other official documents and speeches pertaining to Mr. Roosevelt's four years as governor of New York and the first term of his Presidency.

In addition to royalties from sale of the books themselves the President will receive a large share of the proceeds of the sale of the syndicate rights to newspapers and magazines which are to publish prior to publication of the books excerpts from the prefaces Mr. Roosevelt has written for the five volumes.

Just what the syndicate terms are has not been disclosed, but some idea is conveyed by the statement of the North American Newspaper Alliance that it turned down the offer of the serial, for which $100,000 was asked. Of this amount $35,000 was to go to Samuel I. Rosenman, Mr. Roosevelt's legal counsel at Albany, who edited the work, and $10,000 to a New York literary agent. Presumably the remaining $55,000 would be the President's share.

Fat Royalties Predicted.

That the President will profit enormously from the royalties also is not doubted, for the five volume work is expected to go into the best seller class, what with the popularity of Mr. Roosevelt, the tens of thousands of job holders and would be job holders and the business men and corporations eager to be in good standing at the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt is highly critical of high pressure salesmanship, but it is notable that he never interfered with the high pressuring of corporations by the Democratic national committee to buy his autograph for $250 per. The committee cleaned up several hundred thousand dollars in that deal. If a selling campaign of that character and magnitude should be undertaken to dispose of the President's opus the profits would be incalculable.

Retired Coolidge Profits.

Mr. Roosevelt is the first President to cash in on the sale of a collection of official documents of the presidency while still occupying the office. Some Presidents, notably Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover, regarded it highly improper to capitalize the position for private gain by so much as writing for the newspapers and magazines while they were in the White House.

Mr. Coolidge turned a deaf ear to tempting offers to write for publication right up to the last few weeks of his tenure. Then he prepared to cash in on magazine articles with the understanding that they were not to be published until after March 4, 1929.

His first article Mr. Coolidge sold to the Cosmopolitan for $25,000. Ray Long, editor of the magazine, pleaded with Mr. Coolidge to let him use it in his March number when, with the exit of the President, it would have been most timely. But Mr. Coolidge refused.

So Mr. Long sent the Coolidge article to press late in February for the April number. One day he received a telephone message from the White House that Mr. Coolidge wanted to see him. He went trembling with fear that Mr. Coolidge was going to cancel the whole deal, compel him to stop the presses and "kill" the article. He approached the presidential desk with his knees quaking.

Sells Second Article.

Mr. Coolidge looked up blandly at Mr. Long and said: "I've got another one for you." And he had. He lifted the manuscript as he spoke and handed it to Mr. Long. And the price was $25,000 and Mr. Coolidge got it on the spot.

Mr. Long escaped from the executive office a few minutes later with the perspiration of his brow steaming the wintry air. He had paid $50,000 for two articles—pretty expensive, he thought, even if they were authorized by Silent Cal. He tore into the first telephone booth he could find, got his office, and stopped the presses. Then he split the first article into two to run in April and May and the one he had in his pocket he later split into two for June and July. Then he felt better about that $50,000.

The joke turned out to be on Collier's and the Ladies Home Journal to which Mr. Coolidge had sold articles to run after conclusion of the Cosmopolitan's. So they found they could not publish till August.

Fight Over Boy's Pay

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Judge Ruben S. Schmidt will rule Monday on the plea of Freddie Bartholomew, child movie actor, to quit sending his parents in England 20 per cent of his salary. His petition set out that he can no longer afford to maintain his sisters, his mother and father in the luxury to which they have become accustomed since he became a star. He said he had been sending them $19,000 a year, but that he must pay $67,000 income tax, $15,000 to his lawyers, $5,000 to his agents, and $44,300 in various overdue debts. Freddie himself gets $1 a week spending money, and his aunt, Miss Myllicent Bartholomew, gets $100 a week as his manager and foster mother.

KEEPING DOCTORS UP TO DATE TO BE CONGRESS TOPIC

Educators, hospital executives and licensing officials will report tomorrow and Tuesday on what the medical profession is doing to produce better physicians and keep them up to date after they leave school. They will meet at the annual congress on medical education and licensure in the Palmer house. The congress is sponsored by the council on medical education and hospitals of the American Medical association, and is the occasion for the annual meeting of the Federation of State Medical Boards of the United States. Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford university, is chairman of the council and will open the program.

TWO FUGITIVES CAPTURED.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 12.—[U. P.]—Two of five youths who escaped from an Eldorado, Okla., reformatory Tuesday were held by Minneapolis police today. They were identified as William Mitchell, alias Taylor, 21 years old, of Peoria, Ill., who was serving a term on larceny charges, and Ray Kinsel, alias Ted Northrop, also 21, of Milwaukee, Wis., who was serving a term for rape.

SENATE GETS ACT TO REORGANIZE U. S. GOVERNMENT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—A bill permitting President Roosevelt power to reorganize governmental departments provided that he finishes the job by June 30, 1940, was reported to the senate today.

Chairman James F. Byrnes of the select committee on government reorganization indicated that the measure would be taken up soon after the anti-lynching bill is disposed of.

Some last minute revisions were adopted by the committee today. The original section substituting a department of conservation for the interior department was eliminated. The new bill also provides that the budget director, now appointed by the President without senate approval, must in the future be confirmed by the senate. The bill abolishes the office of controler general and substitutes an auditor general.

As requested by the President, the measure establishes a new government department and an eleventh member of the cabinet as its head. This is the department of welfare.

RETIRED RAILROADER DIES.

ASK 250 MILLION MORE RELIEF IN HOUSE MEASURE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Passage early next week of a bill appropriating $250,000,000 as an emergency relief fund was predicted tonight after a house subcommittee approved the request of President Roosevelt for this amount.

An anticipated move to cut the appropriation in half did not develop. Such a proposal had been expected from Representative Clifton A. Woodrum [D., Va.], but the final committee vote was 5 to 3 in favor of the appropriation, Woodrum voting with four other Democrats against three Republicans.

The full committee will meet Monday with the purpose of permitting congressional action that day if house leaders so desire. If the house should pass the bill Monday a new record would be set for speedy approval of a huge appropriation measure inasmuch as President Roosevelt made the request for the money only last Thursday.

REVIVE WOMAN GAS VICTIM.

FISCAL PARLEYS POINT TO NEW PUMP PRIMING

Feverish Conferences Are Held at Treasury.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Feverish activity in the treasury department in a series of mysterious conferences of fiscal officials during the last 24 hours today gave rise to reports that a revision of the administration's fiscal policy is impending.

Belief was general that the conferences are centering on renewal of administration pump priming. It was believed the meetings are concerned with means of raising large funds for government expenditure toward recovery.

This belief was strengthened by the attitude the White House has taken during the new depression. Although business, big and little, has urged scrapping various administration policies to clear the way to recovery, President Roosevelt has displayed reluctance to admit he was wrong in any part of his program.

Pump Priming Starts.

Pump priming already has started, in the belief of many congressional leaders, with the demand for 250 million dollars more to carry the Works Progress administration through June 30. Observers are convinced that the White House attitude toward pump priming is that because it worked in 1933 there is no reason why it should not work now.

For this reason it is believed the mysterious conferences are concerned with scraping the barrel to get money to finance new pump priming. Fiscal officials confess it will be much harder to obtain funds for big scale federal financing now because of the heavy outlays of the administration to date.

Report Business Gain.

As the treasury officials continued their conferences, the United States Chamber of Commerce in a survey of the business situation declared that conditions are more ready for the upward turn than may be generally recognized. The chamber found evidences during the first six weeks of 1938 that declines in production are flattening out and some advances are under way.

"Whether such advances will hold and grow remains to be seen," the chamber reported. "There is reason to believe that if business conditions could be free from domestic influences outside business itself, developments would be favorable."

8,000 TO ATTEND CHICAGO DENTAL SOCIETY MEETING

More than 8,000 visitors, many of them dentists from all parts of the United States and Europe, began arriving yesterday for the midwinter meeting of the Chicago Dental society which opens today in the Stevens hotel. A five day program has been arranged.

The first day will be devoted to clinics at which the latest products of research, new materials, and new methods will be demonstrated by 200 clinicians. The first general session will be opened by Representative Samuel B. Pettengill of Indiana, who will speak on "The Individual in a Free Society."

Executive officers of the United States section of the International College of Dentists also will meet at the hotel today. An honorary fellowship in the college will be awarded to Dr. Chares R. Reynolds, assistant United States surgeon general, and fellowships for outstanding contributions to dentistry will be conferred on 54 members of the profession.

MRS. CATHERINE SINGLETON

Pontiac, Mich., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Suit for separate maintenance has been filed here by Mrs. Catherine Moylan Singleton, who won an international beauty contest in 1926. She represented Dallas, Tex. Her husband is John H. Singleton, heir to an estate in St. Louis. He is accused of nonsupport and cruelty in the suit.

A cheery and engaging robber, believed to have been accompanied by a woman who stayed in an auto while he worked, held up a hotel clerk, a filling station, and a meat market early yesterday.

He waved a friendly hand and bade a good morning to Robert Holly, clerk of a hotel at 1166 Milwaukee avenue, then took $28.50 and fled after ordering the clerk to get in the elevator and take it up.

A half hour later he entered a service station at 530 North La Salle street, asked Ray Wheeler, the attendant, to search for a pair of gloves left there, then robbed him of $40. Another half hour later, two men, one of them answering the same description, took about $195 from Dominick Sokolski in a meat market at 1065 Milwaukee avenue.

WINNETKA FINDS 4 FUGITIVES BY FINGER PRINT LAW

Four men wanted on criminal charges have been discovered among some 200 applicants for solicitors' permits in Winnetka since Jan. 1 when a fingerprinting ordinance went into effect, it was announced yesterday. Six other applicants had police records. The ordinance requires two sets of prints, one of which is sent to the federal bureau of investigation in Washington. Lake Forest has a similar police regulation, and Evanston has an ordinance requiring solicitors to carry permits bearing their photographs.

FIND SYPHILIS CUTS LIFE SPAN BY 17 PER CENT

Health Service Argues for Insurance Tests.

Between the ages of 30 and 60, the probable life span of a man suffering from syphilis is cut 17 per cent. In the case of colored men the life span is reduced 30 per cent.

A survey of the United States Public Health service, cited yesterday by Lida J. Usilton, the service's statistician, offered these figures as a reason why life insurance companies should make blood tests for syphilis.

Miss Usilton declared that the difference between normal and syphilitic death curves is sufficient to merit consideration in establishing insurance rates.

Suggests Different Rates.

"If a syphilitic is a poorer risk than an uninfected person," she said, "he should not be able to buy insurance as cheaply. If they both get insurance at the same rate, the man who is a good risk helps bear the cost of insuring the syphilitic who has a subnormal life expectancy."

Insurance company officials admitted that syphilis is an unknown factor in determining an applicant's acceptability for insurance, but were inclined to discount its importance.

They pointed out that the health of the client at the time of his medical examination becomes a negligible factor by the time his policy is five years old, since he may have declined from good to bad health for any number of reasons, including newly contracted syphilis. Thereafter, he is considered a mathematical risk, which is the long-range basis in figuring rates.

Holds Tests Advantageous.

Insurance companies generally believe that syphilis tests are advantageous, but only if the company is absolved of all responsibility in drawing the blood. Otherwise, rejected applicants might claim injury, they say.

The health service's syphilis death curve is based on a study in five syphilis clinics of 5,200 white males and 1,055 colored males over 30 years old. The deaths among whites ranged continuously upward from 8 per 1,000 at the age of 30, to 23 per 1,000 at 60. Among colored men, the rates were 11 in 1,000 at 30 and 26 per 1,000 at 60, but reached a peak of 36 per 1,000 between the ages of 40 and 44. This was attributed to the Negroes' greater susceptibility in this age period, to that type of syphilis that attacks blood vessels of the heart.

Life Span Cut 4.8 Years.

Among whites the life expectancy was shortened an average of 4.8 years or 17.3 per cent, whereas the colored syphilitics' average loss was 7.1 years or 30.5 per cent.

The syphilitic white's life expectancy ranged from 30.6 years at the age of 30 to 13.2 at 60 as compared to normal expectancies of 37.5 years and 14.7 years. Negroes in general had life expectancies of 30.7 years at the age of 30 and 13.7 years at 60, which for colored syphilitics the figures were 22.9 years and 8.2 years.

Syphilis' Life Toll

Comparison of degree to which syphilis shortens the lives of its male victims, as revealed by United States public health service survey of total of more than 6,200 sufferers of white and colored races.

HUNGARIAN NEWS WRITER ORDERED TO LEAVE ITALY

Expect Fascist 'Purge' to Drive Others Out.

ROME, Feb. 12.—[U. P.]—The government ordered today the expulsion of the Hungarian newspaper man, Imre Barcs, for five years the correspondent of Az Est and other Budapest newspapers, because of his "general attitude."

Barcs left for Budapest tonight. During his stay here he had been awarded a medal for bravery in recognition of his work as a correspondent in the Ethiopian war.

For several days some members of the foreign press corps have been under intensified governmental supervision and there was a belief in some foreign quarters that the government intended to "revise" the list of correspondents welcome here and at the same time seek to eliminate those who might be considered undesirable.

Swedish Writer To Go.

Mme. Madeline Angles, correspondent for the Paris Figaro, has been advised that she would not be permitted to return to Italy. She received the news in Paris, where she was visiting.

The government, it was reported, issued and then withheld temporarily an expulsion order against a Swedish woman correspondent, resident in Italy for fifteen years. Her name—withheld temporarily—begins with a "B." Some quarters professed to see in the order against Mme. Angles—"A"—and "Mme. B.," an alphabetical perusal of the correspondent list.

Other Correspondents Scolded.

Some correspondents have been called before government authorities and reprimanded severely for remarks made in private conversation considered to be derogatory to the Fascist régime.

[In June, 1935, David Darrah, correspondent for THE TRIBUNE, was expelled from Italy by special order of the ministry of the interior, a portfolio held by Mussolini. No reason for the expulsion order was given and Mr. Darrah was allowed only three hours in which to leave the country. Prior to that time five other newspaper correspondents had been expelled from Italy for telling what they conceived to be the truth about the Mussolini dictatorship.]

Two Women Cashiers of L Stations Holdup Victims

A gunman held up two north side "L" station cashiers within 30 minutes last night, getting a total of $12.32 in loot. He first held up Miss Catherine Sullivan, 65 years old, cashier at the station at 1540 Larrabee street, but an approaching train frightened him and he got only 32 cents. His next robbery, that of Miss Elizabeth Bonner, cashier at the 1614 North Halsted street station, was more profitable. He obtained $12.

Await Father's Action on Son Who Broke Into Tavern

James Callero Jr., 19 years old, who was shot early yesterday by police while breaking into his father's tavern at 7537 North Clark street, was being held in the Bridewell hospital last night. Callero's companion, Duncan Finn, also 19, of 2429 Adams street, was held at the Rogers Park police station pending decision by James Callero Sr., 7719 North Hermitage avenue, whether to prosecute.

Takes 3 Blue Trafic Tickets to Make Evanstonians Blue

Evanstonians needn't feel blue just because they get one of their town's new blue trafic tickets. It's only a warning that they've committed a minor trafic indiscretion, and they don't have to go to the station until they've had three blue tickets. But the green one still means a serious offense, according to Kenneth R. Dickinson, assistant director of Evanston's accident prevention bureau.

Ex-Football Player Tackles Thief After Open Field Run

Football training at St. Rita's High school stood William Murphy, 24 years old, 5753 South Peoria street, in good stead yesterday when he chased a colored youth for three-quarters of a mile through yards, alleys, and over fences. The captive, tackled at last, is John Carr, alias Card, 19 years old, 6038 Lafayette avenue, who admitted stealing bedding and other articles from the Murphy basement. Young Murphy is waiting on the civil service list to win a post as a policeman. His father is Police Sergeant Malachy Murphy, retired.

Colonial Mahogany Reproductions

BY KINDEL

all reduced for the February Sale

In the days of the great master designers of the 18th century, Chippendale, Hepplewhite, Goddard created each piece of furniture to individual order. Each piece had a separate identity. Matching "suites" were an innovation of the future.

Yet there was a close family resemblance in 18th century pieces which is far more interesting than today's "matched" designs.

Kindel reproductions preserve those authentic details and features which made Colonial furniture so charming and livable.

Each piece in this extensive collection has an authentic pedigree and a chronological relationship. You will be proud to own Kindel reproductions and eager to add to your ensemble from time to time. The unique Oxford finish has an aged effect comparable to that found on well-cared-for antiques, and will grow more beautiful through the years.

Drawers are hand-fitted and thoroughly impregnated with a special moisture-resistant compound to prevent sticking. Chest drawers are deep enough to accommodate laundered shirts. All hand-carved motifs are adapted from authentic sources.

February prices offer you a splendid opportunity to start or to add to your Kindel bedroom ensemble—at important savings.

THE AMERICAN COMMUNIST FRONT.

Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, has been trying for months to get the communists out of this C. I. O. organization. Both he and Gov. Frank Murphy have said that the outlaw strikes, violations of agreement and much of the lawlessness in Michigan, including the anarchy at Lansing, were caused by communist incitement. C. A. Hathaway, member of the communist party central committee, says that Martin's purge doesn't get anywhere because the communists took the lead in organizing the automobile workers and will be upheld by them.

David Dubinsky, head of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, recently said that the communists in the C. I. O., with the support of John Lewis, had defeated the efforts of the American Federation of Labor to reunite the unions and restore a labor peace. Dubinsky helped Lewis with the Committee on Industrial Organization and himself has said that he would not expel a communist who was a good union man.

Mme. Perkins of the department of labor has been avoiding a full explanation to the senate, giving her reasons for protecting Harry Bridges, the Australian communist, from deportation. Bridges, an alien, has done enough damage to American shipping on both seaboards to entitle him to a decoration and a lordly pension from an enemy nation. In New York, where the party has its headquarters, the communist strength and influence in the popular front which supports Mayor La Guardia are well recognized.

An analysis of the communist party progress and success in affiliation with radical American labor and political movements and with departments of federal government made by Earl Browder, head of the party in the United States, for the communist internationale in Moscow, has been relayed to THE TRIBUNE from Riga after the receipt there of the official publication containing it. Browder confirms what Americans have observed in the turbulent scenes of the last year and supplies the theory which lies behind the activities.

Communism has become domesticated in the United States. The Socialist party under Norman Thomas has been pushed into the background. Although the socialistic projects undertaken by the government are of a monumental character, Mr. Thomas and his party cannot find any pride of accomplishment in them. He does recognize the almost perfect state socialism in T. V. A., but cannot perceive that he had anything to do with it. The origins were elsewhere. The leap was made completely over the period which socialist thought represents. There are new frontiers.

Browder and Hathaway, who defies Homer Martin, and their associates are not hidden in cells of underground work. Browder's opinions are given respectful hearing. He has a public platform value. He has acquired a bourgeois respectability. Lenin would have denounced him and his party managers as petty bourgeois reformists and adventurists, but these are days of Stalin and not of Lenin, not even of Trotsky. The new American communist shirt fronts are not revolutionaries in pose. They do not publicly advocate the overthrow of democratic government. They do not even make public expositions of Marxism. They present themselves within the framework of American government and the American political system. They form a legally organized party and there is nothing wolfish in the visage. It is intended not to be alarming. There may be something alarming in mercantile marine disorders, in the tieup of freights, in the runaway strikes, in the forced closing of plants, the steady warfare against basic industry, but little of it seems to emanate from the party front office.

Martin says that the party policy is to make the United States an enemy of Japan and a friend of Russia. Browder and Hathaway confirm that, but say that the communists support the policy announced in the President's Chicago speech in October. Communism here now poses as nonrevolutionary radicalism. In seeking the popular front the party is not audibly growling as it is in France when it offers to coöperate politically with socialists and radicals and form a government.

The garments of democracy can be worn here. In them the party can take its place as an American political institution ostensibly interested in the democratic problems of representative government, in foreign relations and economic issues. The line of action was given by Stalin and his politburo in Russia. It admirably suits the present needs of the soviet government in its own foreign relations. In the United States it has been the line of the greatest respectability, largest opportunity and least opposition.

The line has been followed with success on the most radical and militant labor fronts, into the greatest industrial disorders and with a degree of governmental support, not only federal but in several states and many cities which may have exceeded communist expectations. The attitude is opportunist, watchful and prepared.

Opportunity may recede. It may grow and expand. Whatever comes of it the communists know for their own encouragement that the only difference between what the Russians have built at Dneiperstroy and what has been built by T. V. A. in the Tennessee valley is the probability of T. V. A. being larger in its operations. It may be extended all over the country by the creation of seven more identical authorities to capture for the government the production of electric power. In the electric power program, in the scheme of taxation, in the management of currency, in the control of agricultural production, and in the proposed federal incorporation of and licensing of industry the communists can recognize the beginning of what they know as the expropriation of the expropriators.

Their hopes may rise high and be dashed out, but they would be unintelligent not to recognize the approach to their formulas.

THE COAL CRISIS.

Every line of business has its busy and dull seasons. Farmers are most actively engaged in the spring when they are planting and in the fall when they are reaping. December is the big time of year for retail business. Coal mining is most active through the winter months.

But coal mining in Illinois is anything but booming right now. William Bromage, a reporter for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, recently completed a tour of the mining section of Illinois and found the industry seriously affected by the operation of the Guffey-Vinson coal act. An order of the national bituminous coal commission, created by that act, established a fixed minimum price for coal from Illinois mines at a point which makes it impossible for them to compete with the mines of Indiana and Iowa. For Illinois miners the present, which should be a period of the greatest activity, is instead one of stagnation.

If miners get the opportunity to work only nine days in January, when the need for coal for heating is greatest, what may they expect in June and July? Yet that is all the opportunity to earn a living, Mr. Bromage found, the miners of Staunton had last month. Mines in Randolph county reduced operations by 50 per cent, the survey showed, and in Perry county there was a shutdown, with the miners going on relief. At Harrisburg, in the heart of the state's finest coal mine deposits, where things are always booming through the winter months, production has been curtailed and relief costs have mounted.

The unemployment which has come to southern Illinois is man made. It exists because of the order of a commission created by a mistaken law. On that commission, although the state of Illinois was highly interested, it had no representation. The states which have benefited from the act did have representation.

Old customers want to buy Illinois coal. The coal mine operators can produce coal and make money at it at a price the old customers are willing to pay. But a government commission refuses to permit the coal producers to sell at that price. At the price the government fixed the old customers won't buy. That means those who draw their livelihood from coal mining are being forced on the relief rolls. Unless there is immediate action, good times for Illinois miners are gone for a year, at least.

People are going on relief at the time of the year when they ought to be having great prosperity. Soon a group of congressmen are coming home to Illinois to ask for renomination and reëlection. They had better have their answers ready. For they are going to be asked what they did about removing the government blight on one of Illinois' greatest industries.

MR. FARLEY'S MEMOIRS.

James A. Farley, according to an interesting report from Washington, is writing his memoirs. If not proof this is at least acceptable evidence of a widespread literacy among the more practical or empirical workers in Washington. Mr. Farley had an unexpected experience with best sellers as chairman of the Democratic national committee when he and his associates published and sold the de luxe campaign book at $250 a copy to corporations which are forbidden by law to make political contributions.

With the aid of Mr. Cummings, the attorney general, Mr. Farley and his associates were able to skirt around the corrupt practices act, a notable bit of thin ice skating which might have won them something at the Olympic games, and escaped prosecution, although some of the corporation officials who were induced to buy books were not so easy in their minds. Under the act the guilt, if any, was principally their own even if they were guilty unwillingly.

Mr. Farley will not expect to get $250 a copy for his memoirs. They might be worth it if he actually went down to the bottom of his trunk and took all the old lace out of the lavender. The chances are against that. Tammany, the New York prize ring, the postoffice and the national committee will retain many confidential and reticent aspects when Mr. Farley has done with them. That's too bad, because Mr. Farley is surely a rare Tammany character who having the ability to write has the inclination to do so.

His life and works are to be published, it is understood, in the fall. Here again we have confirmation of the suspicion that all is not to be told. Authentic memoirs are always sealed to wait the death of all the characters whom they concern.

FINGER PRINTS ON FILE.
[Peoria Journal-Transcript.]

The American Business club claims only to be an alert group of ordinary business men, and if there be a malefactor in its ranks, his double life has thus far escaped the notice of the membership committee. Yet, all who attended the last meeting of the club have had their finger prints taken.

Let it be explained without delay that the speaker of the day was Chief of Police Kamins and that another visitor was Julius Donnell, identification officer of the Peoria police department. Mr. Kamins extolled the benefits of universal finger printing, explaining how civil files are useful in identifying accident victims and persons afflicted with amnesia, and in many other circumstances unconnected with crime. Members of the club showed their approval of the chief's remarks by themselves submitting to finger printing.

There is no stigma attached to finger printing. It is a sane, sure means of identification. Every man, woman, and child should have his or her prints in the civil files.

EUROPE'S NEXT BATTLEFIELD?

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
FOURTH ARTICLE.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia.—Up to the beginning of last December Czechoslovakian military courts had handed down 106 sentences for espionage totaling, according to a German source, 1,108 years and altogether 926 suspects had been jailed since the first of the year. Most proved or suspected spies were Sudeten Germans. This naturally is exploited by the followers of Konrad Henlein, the Sudeten German leader, as an example of barbarous political persecution.

Reasonable Czechs admit that the secret police are quick in jumping to conclusions, especially with Germans or Hungarians living in fortified areas near the border, but they also can give you plenty of reasons for being suspicious. Good reasons, too, because fortifications and racial minorities create spies as well as spy myths.

* *

Civilized Czechs—nearly all Czechs are civilized—likewise admit and deplore the ruinous cost to the nation of these elaborate fortifications. The millions spent on them have lowered unemployment and pulled some industries out of the red for the time being, but this has reduced buying power in an already overtaxed country and halted for years to come the program of social welfare and modernization for the backward parts of the country on which the Czechoslovaks justly prided their fledgling republic.

But independence comes first—before progress, before enlightenment, and even if some citizens must go hungry. You can't blame the Czechs for that; rather you admire them. Naturally, though, you ask why they feel themselves so gravely menaced. Of course, next door neighborhood to a Nazi Germany, armed to the teeth, is the obvious answer.

Like Denmark and Holland, unlike Belgium and Switzerland, the frontiers of Czechoslovakia do not connect with those of any other great power, and the little entente [Rumania, Czechoslovakia, and Jugo-Slavia] isn't what it used to be—especially now that Rumania has gone quasi-Fascist.

* *

The Poles, who should be their natural allies, hate the Czechs worse than the Hungarians hate them. The Poles have never forgiven the Czechs for appropriating Teschen with its 70,000 Poles, and for refusing help during the war with the bolsheviks, the two monumental blunders of Czechoslovak foreign policy.

Proximity to Germany and bad relations with Poland and Hungary do not explain everything, however. All Germany's small neighbors—and even the big ones—are uneasy, but they do not all have the same cause for alarm as the Czechs.

It is some comfort to the Czechs, but not much, to tell themselves that however greedy and unscrupulous the potential enemy may be he will think twice before attacking a small power that has fortifications, a good army, and powerful allies. The Czechs hope they have the diplomatic and strategic cards stacked in such a way that if Germany attacks them it will mean another European war and they will be on the winning side in the end, even if they are overrun at first.

* *

In one way they are almost as much afraid of peace as of war. They fear that Germany, without resorting to military attack, may succeed by means of propaganda, diplomatic intrigue, and threats in isolating them from their allies and reducing them to a state of vassalage.

They are pretty nearly isolated now, but not yet vassals. They would rather fight than even be the well treated vassals of Germany, providing they had the faintest chance of winning—that is, getting French and Russian support.

This may sound like just pigheadedness, but experience has taught the Czechs that vassalage to a foreign power in the end means loss of independence within their own frontiers and the return of the Sudeten Germans in the republic to the position of ruling social class. This, together with reasons of democratic principle, is why the Czechs refuse to switch allegiance and become diplomatic allies of Germany in return for a pledge to respect their territorial integrity and independence.

Why so much pressure on Czechoslovakia rather than on any other small country? Look at a large scale relief map of Europe and you will see. Czechoslovakia's unique strategic situation is the key to most of the international problems of Europe today. It is also one of the keys to the prevailing attitudes toward internal problems of the republic and to the Czech view of life in general.

* *

War always has occupied the thoughts of men to a high degree and strategic necessities or possibilities have shaped the characters of peoples in the same way that economic, racial, and other factors have shaped them.

Neither Czechs nor Germans have ever forgotten Bismarck's dictum that whoever was master of Bohemia [the core of present day Czechoslovakia] was master of Europe. The map indicates that he was right—at least when a great power is master of Bohemia.

And the addition of Slovakia and Ruthenia, tacked on to Bohemia-Moravia like the tail of a tadpole, has further increased the strategic importance of the Bohemian position. Czechoslovakia lies along the backbone of Europe, on the watershed between the Baltic and North seas and the Mediterranean and Black seas.

Since the dawn of history armies on the march have followed water courses. Today the arterial highways and railway lines of Europe follow these same water courses, and armies are more dependent than ever upon good lines of communication, precisely because they are motorized—you can't forage for gasoline.

Being on the continental watershed, Czechoslovakia controls several passes leading through or over the mountains from one drainage system to another—some 800 miles of mountain wall stretched across the middle of Europe.

The possible and historic routes of invasion in central Europe, through or around this wall, are as follows: The valley of the Danube, leading down to the Balkans from France and Germany or up to Germany from the Balkans or from Russia via the Black sea coast; the Brenner pass, leading north from Italy and vice versa; the Uzok pass across the Carpathians, the line of communication between the Hungarian and Ukrainian plains; the Moravian gateway, the gap between the Carpathians and the Sudeten mountains leading to Germany and Poland.

Czechoslovakia controls or dominates all these routes, those that lead directly through her territory and the others. Look at the map again and notice the depression in the western part of Czechoslovakia. This is the Bohemian basin. Ringed about by the Sudeten mountains, it constitutes a natural fortress.

* *

Many things have changed in warfare since the days when the Roman legions, the Slavic and Teuton tribes, the Hun and Magyar hordes, fought their way along these routes, but the value of a strong flanking position has not changed and mountains still are obstacles, when properly defended.

When pressed by these various invasions or migrations, the Czechs throughout history have withdrawn inside their natural fortress, and no attack from without has ever dislodged them. They lost their independence in the seventeenth century because they had let the Germans into their citadel by electing a Hapsburg prince as their king.

This lesson the Czechs never have forgotten, nor have they forgotten the innumerable assaults of warlike peoples who found the Bohemian fortress an obstacle in their march toward continental domination. German ranting about expansion to the east and southeast has stirred recollections in the Czech national consciousness and the historic reflex is seen.

HEADACHES AND THEIR ORIGIN.

FEW of us have failed to experience at some time or other what is termed a headache. Among a hundred people, however, no two episodes may come from the same cause. In other words, the ache may start from so many sources that it is difficult to identify its exact origin. It is a symptom, not a disease, and means that there is trouble somewhere—often quite distant from the site of the pain. Most of us, unfortunately, resort to aspirin or other drugs for relief, without giving much thought to the whys and wherefores. Only when the annoyance persists, or when it recurs periodically and becomes incapacitating, do we begin to investigate.

Certain types can be classified. For example, sick headache—or, as it is frequently called, migraine—is associated with a nervous temperament, great fatigue, or undue strain both mental and physical. If the pain occurs in the front of the head, it may come on because of infection within the sinuses, too much acid in the stomach, or eyestrain. A boring pain through the temples may be due to errors of refraction, sinus infection, or trouble in the gastro-intestinal tract. Distress that is obstinate and general—not confined to any particular portion of the cranium—may be traced to high blood pressure, kidney disease, or an acute infection. It is not uncommon to note intense symptoms as the first sign of kidney failure, with uremia [accumulation of urinary waste products] in prospect.

I have questioned several physicians who have studied the phenomenon exhaustively. They seem to be in agreement that the most usual causes are, [1] poor ventilation in home or office, [2] too much food with too little exercise, [3] constipation, or [4] too much alcohol or tobacco. As one doctor said, "Correct body hygiene and headaches will disappear, except those arising from eyestrain or organic disease."

It is not hard to understand that pus around the teeth, within the sinuses, or in the tonsils or other parts of the throat may bring about enough nerve poisoning to cause misery. We know that this is expected in infectious diseases such as influenza, where the patient will invariably complain—early in the course of the ailment—of extreme pain in the head. The same manifestation has been observed in the first stages of malaria, smallpox, typhoid fever, etc.

Whenever the digestive tube is obviously upset, toxins may be generated with or without constipation, which will disturb the sympathetic nervous system with reflex signals in the upper part of the body. In fact, 80 per cent of those with severe grades of constipation will have considerable discomfort located chiefly in the back of the head. Intestinal toxemia, which may include gall bladder disease, is a routine cause.

We must be certain to rule out neuralgia which, after all, is responsible for much agony. The trigeminal variety [tic douloureux], for example, which appears suddenly and comes and goes in waves, is easy to "spot."

I have encountered many individuals whose symptoms were remedied by the adjustment of proper glasses. Every patient whose troubles are not traceable directly to absorbed poison of bacterial origin, or to an organic deficiency, should be subjected to a careful eye examination with testing for muscle weakness.

In the opinion of many authorities, far more attention should be paid to the digestive tract, combating stubborn constipation as well as infection. A chronic appendix may grumble along for years with only an occasional flareup, and the absorption from the inflamed area be sufficient to bring on lassitude and even fatigue, with a typical headache. While a few writers are inclined not to accept the theory of intestinal toxemia, nevertheless at least half of those who have periodic recurrences will be relieved entirely by the use of a low protein diet, including buttermilk. Indeed, some reports claim 85 per cent of permanent cures as the result of regulative measures aimed at the bowel.

It goes without saying that so-called headache powders throw a mask over an important danger signal. Pains and aches are warnings of catastrophe. It is far wiser to replace a rotten rung on a ladder than to bolster it temporarily and risk a fall.

MIGHT REVACCINATE.

S. G. writes: A man, 56 years old, has been vaccinated against smallpox three times—the last twenty-five years ago. They all "took." Should he be vaccinated again?

REPLY.

The chances are that he is immune, but revaccination is advisable if he is at all likely to be exposed.

BETTER BE EXAMINED.

C. I. writes: What causes excessive falling of hair from all parts of the body, including eyebrows and lashes?

REPLY.

FOLLOW DOCTOR'S ADVICE.

REPLY.

If the danger of hemorrhage has passed, moderate exercise may be helpful. The best plan is to go about your business, forget your troubles, and follow the advice of your physician.

Diet is important.

CLAIM ON ESTATE.

Cicero, Ill., Feb. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I have just been informed that the man whose promissory note I hold passed away six months ago in Ohio.

1. Can I in any way recover my loan by presenting a claim against the estate before probate?

2. How do I file the claim?

3. Must I employ counsel?

4. How can I get a copy of the will?

E. A. S.

1. No, the only way to force matters would be by filing your claim in probate proceedings. A creditor is entitled to force probate.

2. We suggest that as a first step you write to the clerk of the court asking whether the estate is being probated and if so, whether he will send you the necessary forms and instructions.

3. Depends largely on the attitude of the personal representative handling the estate and on your experience and resourcefulness in such matters.

4. The first step would be to ask the personal representative to give you a copy. Another possibility is to obtain a copy from the clerk of the court by paying him.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

RIGHT TO ESTATE.

Portland, Me., Feb. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My wife died on Dec. 20 last in the state of Illinois. During the time she was in the hospital where she passed away, we stored our furniture and other personal effects with her sister to be held until called for. They now claim that my wife gave them all these things before she passed away. Her brother volunteered to take care of all expenses, including medical and hospital fees, which he has paid. They [her sister and brother] now claim that my wife gave them everything. Can they hold these things? I was out of the city at the time, so will have to take their word for it. I have no receipt for anything.

C. A.

Under Illinois law a party in interest is not permitted to testify in his own behalf as against the estate of a deceased person. Hence it seems probable that they might be unable to prove the gift. If the value is substantial we suggest that you have a personal interview with an attorney.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PROPERTY DISPOSITION.

Evanston, Ill., Feb. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I would like to know the answers to this problem: I married and had two girls. A few years later my husband died. I was left with some money and bought stocks and [1] had it made in their names. I did this so in case I died the property would belong to them. Now they are young ladies and married.

2. In case one of the two or both died before my time, can their husbands claim this money or would the law give it to them?

3. It is my money, but I wanted to protect them and see they were taken care of when little.

4. What do you think the best thing for me to do? I do not want to take it away from them, but [5] if they should die I would like to claim it, as it is mine.

C. C.

1. It is not clear whether you mean that it was placed in the names of the two girls or in the names of the three of you, nor whether the proper steps were taken to create a joint tenancy.

2. Probably yes.

3. The presumption would be that you had intended a gift for them.

4. If your daughters are willing to coöperate in a new arrangement it should be comparatively simple. You do not indicate whether they are willing nor what you wish to do.

5. If this is your desire you might consider placing the certificates in joint tenancy between the three of you. Take this matter up with the transfer officers of the corporations.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON. — A custom by which midnight Romeos scramble up ladders into the bedrooms of young women in the Orkney Islands, off the north coast of Scotland, was revealed in a paternity case recently in the Court of Session at Edinburgh. The court reversed a previous decision given in favor of the 25 year old girl plaintiff.

Evidence had been given by her that when she was 18 to 20 years of age, she locked her bedroom door at nights and boys of about the same age climbed a farm ladder to enter her bedroom. The man she was suing had paid her about fifty visits in nearly six years, she said.

Lord Mackay, in giving judgment, said that the couple concerned, whose identities are not revealed, their law agents, and the sherif who had handled the case previously, seemed to treat the bedroom calls as illustrations of a perfectly innocent social custom. The man frankly admitted his visits, but said that never was he alone in the room with the girl. The judge held, in view of the disclosures of social habits in the Orkneys, that there was insufficient evidence of identification.

The case cast a spotlight on strange old time customs surrounding love making in the remote highlands and islands of northern Scotland. Courtship and marriage is an elaborate process there, invested with what might appear to be almost pagan ritual.

Except in the most outlying parts, much of this ritual has been dropped since the war, but the customs are still observed in a modified form.

As soon as a prospective Highland bridegroom has made up his mind to seek the hand of the girl, it is usual for him to arrange with an elder brother or other male relative to accompany him one night to the home of her parents.

The girl is tipped off beforehand on the impending call, but her swain's appearance is invariably greeted with a maidenly flutter of pretended surprise. The young man's sponsor recounts his praises to the girl's father or mother, and when the parents signify approval the prospective bridegroom takes the plunge and asks outright for their daughter's hand in marriage.

There and then the wedding day is fixed, and all arrangements for the nuptials decided.

A few days before the wedding there is a "contracting night," when relatives and friends gather in the bride's house to celebrate the engagement.

A tub full of water is placed in the center of the room and the bridegroom's feet are washed by girls. He must, according to custom, throw a gold ring or coin into the water and pieces of coal and peat.

Immediately after the washing ceremony the girls rush to the tub. She who gets the ring or coin is supposed to be the next bride. To complete the process, fibres are drawn from the sodden peat, used for fires, to show the color of the prospective husband's hair.

UTOPIA.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—The Hon. Earl Browder, as reported by your Correspondent Day in today's TRIBUNE, is very apt in talking reverse English. We are all learning it. It is the official language in America today. We talk about balancing the budget, reducing taxes, and in the same breath we demand heavier largess from the government. In time we will adopt the soviet system of voting with a bayonet back of us and a marked ballot for one man only in front of us, and we will call it democracy.

But, in case we discard the Supreme court and accept a Stalin dictatorship, who would send bundles of old clothes to the soviet employed? How long would Comrade Browder go unpurged? What would become of our dwellings if four or five families would get just enough wages to live in one room? What are we going to use for prisons? A dictatorship can thrive well on a shortage in every human necessity, but it must have prisons. The soviets are lucky. They inherited an abundance of dungeons from the czars. But poor America!

At the bottom of the page where the Red wisdom of our Browder is reported there is a news item in obsolete capitalistic English. It says: "Caught while smuggling concealed currency in their violin into Russia, David Oistrakh, 30 years old, was sentenced to death, and Bussy Goldstein, 15 years old, was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment." Why should one conceal currency in a Utopia? How could young people and artists, educated exclusively in a communistic atmosphere, commit a capitalistic crime? Does not Socialism teach us that crime is due to capitalism and would automatically be eradicated with the abolishment of the profit system?

J. L.

WE PLANNED IT THAT WAY.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—As near as I can figure out, our President is concerned with only three things—going on fishing trips, soaking the rich, and helping the working man.

Now I'm not bothered about the fish, and the rich are perfectly capable of taking care of themselves, but I am somewhat disturbed over the results of Mr. Roosevelt's efforts to help the working man.

Take the Social Security act, for example: The general manager of a company employing 1,000 men at an average monthly salary of $150, studies the pay roll:

1,000 men at $150	$150,000
Social security tax	6,000
Total monthly expense	$156,000
Then he fires forty men, and isn't it odd that the pay roll reduction is exactly	6,000
New pay roll figure [including tax]	$150,000

What has happened? The company's monthly expenses have been reduced by $6,000. The government has received its $6,000, and forty of the working men whom this law was intended to help have received a kick in the pants!

That is just one company, and assuming that practically all business men are reasonably good at arithmetic—well, you figure out how many kicks in the pants will be handed out as a result of this law.

As one of the working men I can't help thinking that we would be better off if Mr. Roosevelt would devote all of his time to fishing. If he insists on continuing his efforts to help us we will all be on relief before long.

THOMAS V. DONNELLY.

GLASS IN TRAIN WINDOWS.

Downers Grove, Ill., Feb. 9.—Last night a young lady, while riding home on a suburban train, suffered injuries to her hands and face caused by flying pieces of glass from a shattered car window. Some one had hurled a stone through the window.

This is not the first time a passenger car window has been crashed by a flung stone. It is not the first time a person has been injured. I can recall a period, not so long ago, when, alongside the tracks of one of our suburban lines, a group of boys stood daily and flung stones at the train. Commuters were daily in imminent danger of being injured. At present, the situation is as acute, and concern so grave, that the railroad saw fit to station watchers along a certain stretch of the road.

Now, of course, the railroads cannot very well build walls along the sides of their tracks, but there is something they can do. They can install heavy wire guards on the car windows. Or, they can replace all glass with shatterproof glass. I believe one of these measures of protection can be effected if enough pressure is brought to bear.

Commuters, riding to their work and back every day, ought not be unnecessarily exposed to the danger of losing their sight, or of severe lacerations of face and hands, or even more serious injuries.

REGINALD GRENVILLE.

SUBSTITUTE FOR WAR.

Park Ridge, Ill., Feb. 9.—Since it costs several thousand dollars to kill each man in a war, and even then neither side is satisfied with the score, why not have each country select an equal number of their best men, and a good firing squad, and meet with their opponent, who would also bring their best men and a firing squad. Then let each firing squad execute all of their opponent's best men.

This, it seems, would bring about perfect results. The killing cost would be several cents, instead of thousands of dollars. The saving could be given to the widows of the slain men.

TED DAY.

ROMANY RACKET.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—I have just read with much interest the letter on "The Romany Racket." May I add the following information to that printed in the letter?

My father was walking on Stewart avenue near 60th street late one afternoon some six weeks ago. He noticed a large limousine driving slowly near the curbstone and also that the occupants, two gypsy women and a man, were beckoning to him. He thought they wanted to inquire directions and so came closer to the car. As he neared it, the woman suddenly flung the door open and started to pull him into the car. Dad jerked free and ran away. Our house happened to be close by.

Added to the fact that dad is 66 years of age, he only has one arm and has heart trouble. What these women practice is indeed vicious robbery!

IN MICHIGAN CITY.

Michigan City, Ind., Feb. 4.—Chicago is not the only town which has been visited by those gypsies. The same woman, old car, man driving, etc., have been seen in this town, also.

Last fall two people, both elderly gentlemen, were robbed in the same manner described by T. J. R. One of these men carried very little money. The other carried a few hundred dollars and was on his way to the courthouse to pay his yearly taxes. Of course, upon arriving, he found he had no money with which to pay them, having encountered this strange gypsy looking person on the way.

B. MILLER.

WEST OF KENOSHA.

Kenosha, Wis., Feb. 4.—In regard to the letter "Romany Racket," this same incident occurred in a small village west of Kenosha about a month ago. The victim was an old man, the amount of money taken about the same, and the occupants of the car the same.

In this case the gypsies escaped, also.

THE CONGRESS STREET PROPOSAL.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Regarding the $26,000,000 for opening up of the new Congress street boulevard: In view of the fact that the city cannot balance its present budget, and taxes are so high that thousands of taxes are not paid, it would seem the best judgment to delay improvements of this kind till taxes can be lowered and budgets more easily balanced.

Furthermore, this will only intensify the blight of the closer districts because the opening up of this boulevard will make it easier for loop workers to go farther distances into the suburbs.

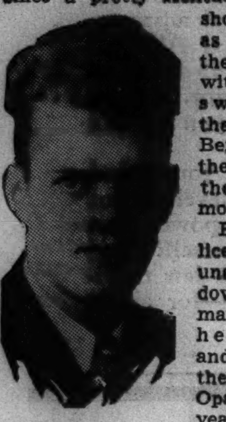
HILLS HIDE YOUTH HUNTED IN DEATH OF BEREA CO-ED

Campus Poet Disappears After Shooting.

BY WILLIAM MOORE.

It will be six months next Tuesday since a pretty Kentucky co-ed was shot and killed as she strolled in the moonlight with her new sweetheart on the campus of Berea college, in the foothills of the Cumberland mountains.



George Wells.

But so far police have been unable to track down the young man accused by her sweetheart and by her father of killing Opal Sturgell, 18 years old, a sophomore, of Houckville, Ky. That young man is George Wells, 20 years old, of Auxier, Ky., a senior and the campus poet.

Until William Anderson, a Berea academy student, began to woo Opal the young mountain folk of the celebrated college thought she and Wells were engaged.

Students Are Moutaineers.

Smart roadsters, evening clothes, fashionable proms are rare at Berea college. Most of the institution's 3,000 students are young men and women from the mountains who are working their way through school, for it is not a rich man's college.

The students weave cloth and make scarves, neckties, and countless other handicraft articles that are offered for sale in shops throughout the land. Some work in the college bakeries, some farm its lands.

Opal Sturgell, an attractive and brilliant student, had enjoyed the company of young Wells. But she found young Anderson more romantic. And so she saw Wells less frequently.

Sudden Ambush and Flight.

The night of last Aug. 15, which was Sunday, there was a box supper on the campus. Opal and Anderson shared their supper and then went for a walk in the moonlight.

They were passing some bushes on the campus when a figure leaped out. Without a word he opened fire on the pretty co-ed, shooting her in the breast with a .22 caliber revolver. Again he fired, and again. All three bullets reached their mark. The gunman hurried off through the foothills.

Other students, hearing the shots, ran to the scene. They found Opal dying in the arms of Anderson.

Anderson, the student who had won Opal from her poet admirer, did not hesitate to mention names. He said the killer looked like his rival, Wells; that he was almost certain he was Wells.

Then Anderson told more, something that had happened at the box supper.

Recalls Veiled Threat.

"It was early in the evening when Wells came up to where Opal and I were sitting on a bench," he said. "Wells asked me if I objected if he talked with Opal alone. I said no, but Opal told him he could say what he had to say in front of me.

"Wells got awful mad," young Anderson related, "and shouted:

"'You'll be sorry.'"

Then the young poet stalked off.

Chief Earl T. Hayes of the Berea police added to the story. He said Wells had been called in by Dean T. A. Hendricks and told not to annoy Opal. This brought more of the story to light.

"I heard last fall," Dean Hendricks said, "that Wells had threatened Miss Sturgell. I called both of them and Opal's older sister, Ruby, also a student, into my office and we talked the matter over. Wells denied he ever threatened the girl."

FIND 7 TO 8 P. M. SATURDAYS BAD TIME TO DRIVE

Wahington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[U. P.]—The most dangerous time to drive an automobile is between 7 and 8 p. m. on Saturdays, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace today reported to congress.

This conclusion and others regarding the driving habits of millions of Americans was drawn from a $75,000 study authorized by congress in 1936 and made by the bureau of public roads.

A typical accident drawn from a study of more than 10,000 cases would involve a person between 20 and 24 years of age driving a borrowed automobile at an excessive speed and striking a child between 5 and 9 years old crossing the street in the middle of a block.

Twice as many accidents occur on Saturdays as on Tuesdays—the safest day of the week—the report showed. "Sunday drivers" were involved in 17 per cent of all accidents, compared with 20 per cent on Saturdays.

Face 17 Years, $25,000 Fines; One Acquitted.

New York, Feb. 12.—[Special.]—William J. Graham and James C. McKay, politically powerful gamblers of Reno, Nev., were found guilty today of mail fraud and conspiracy. Bois Heed and Allen Comer also were found guilty, while Thomas O'Dell was acquitted.

The federal jury handed its verdict to Willis Van Devanter, retired justice of the Supreme court, who presided at the trial. The jurors had deliberated twenty-seven hours, since shortly after noon yesterday.

McKay and Graham were convicted of having furnished police protection and banking facilities for a ring of confidence men who swindled seventy victims out of $2,500,000 from 1929 through 1932. It was the third trial for Graham and McKay, two previous juries having disagreed.

24 Victims Testify.

In all, twenty-four victims recruited from various parts of the country told of having been taken to Reno to collect fictitious fortunes. In each case the victim had to put up "faith" money to prove to brokers or bookmakers that he could have paid his loss had his luck been the other way.

The testimony indicated that most of the victims had been steered to the Riverside bank in Reno, where they turned in securities for cash which they later delivered to their swindlers.

The four were convicted on three mail fraud counts each and on one conspiracy count. On each of the mail fraud counts the maximum penalty is a five year term and a $5,000 fine. The prison term maximum for a conspiracy count is two years and the fine $10,000, making the total maximum seventeen years in prison and the maximum fine $25,000.

Justice Van Devanter set Monday morning as the sentence date. Comer and Heed were remanded to Tombs prison. Graham and McKay were continued in bail.

Witnesses Disappear.

The present trial began last Jan. 25. Graham and McKay were tried on the first indictment in 1934 when a jury was unable to agree after fifteen and one-half hours of deliberation. Deadlocked after deliberating fifty-two hours, a second jury was discharged in 1935.

The United States attorney's office conducted an exhaustive inquiry into the cause of the disagreement as well as into the disappearance of Roy J. Frisch, cashier of the Riverside bank, who was to have been a government witness, but disappeared shortly before the first trial and never has been found.

The government expected George F. [Lefty] Harding, former police lieutenant of Reno, to testify at the present trial, but he disappeared early last month after he had received a subpena.

RUMANIA SLAPS GAG ON ENEMIES OF DICTATORSHIP

Cabinet Adopts Plan for New Economic System.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Feb. 12.—(AP)—King Carol tonight presided at a meeting of Rumania's new cabinet which decided on drastic steps to silence opposition, reorganize the government, and revamp the nation's economic system.

The cabinet decided upon a 14 point program promising the people justice and prosperity under the régime of Premier Miron Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox church. The successors to the anti-Semitic government of former Premier Octavian Goga disclosed three important policies:

1. A commission will be appointed to study administrative reorganization of the government.
2. A commission will be named to draft a new constitution replacing the document voided by Carol when Goga was removed from office.
3. "Harmful or useless" newspapers and periodicals will be banned as well as all political party activity.

Promise to Balance Budget.

Studies were started to outline an economic reorganization affecting all branches of Rumanian industry, commerce, and agriculture.

The economic program of the new cabinet, including seven former premiers of centrist and liberal beliefs, called for raising the standard of living for farmers, laborers, and traders, increased taxation of the wealthy, currency stablilization, and a balanced budget.

These points were incorporated in the fourteen points made public, which also pledged continuation of traditional friendship with Great Britain and France, which had slackened during Goga's régime.

A controled emigration for Rumania's surplus Jewish population also was part of the government's plans, though there was evidence that the anti-Jewish restrictions imposed by Goga would be eased. There are about 900,000 Jews in Rumania.

Aim at "Jewish Fatherland.'

It was announced that "Rumania will attempt to make international agreements with other countries which claim a surplus Jewish population to provide a new fatherland in which Jews would like to live, and that investigation of illegal citizenships acquired since the world war would be continued.

While the cabinet was formulating its new program a priest, Gregori Kristesku, a member of Bucharest university's theology faculty, charged that Goga's foreign minister, Istrate Micescu, had tried to arrange for the murder of Cornelius Codreanu, head of Rumania's Fascist Iron Guard.

He filed his charge with the public prosecutor, alleging that Micescu promised a prefect a "remunerative career" if the prefect would kill Codreanu in the "high interests of the state."

Cabinet Decisions Outlined.

New decisions reached at tonight's cabinet session in addition to those named above were:

1. Abolition of regulations which made it impossible for judges and state officials to be removed from office.
2. Military police may enter university property without permission of rectors.
3. Newspapers must publish sources of income in order to show their origin and backing.
4. Government functionaries will be forbidden to have "unattached posts."
5. Government officials and priests will not be allowed to participate in political demonstrations.

$10,000 DAMAGE SUIT RETRIAL TOMORROW AT BELVIDERE, ILL.

Belvidere, Ill., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Selection of a jury for the second hearing of a $10,000 damage suit against Raymond F. List, president of the National Sewing Machine company, by Mrs. Katherine Thornley, 54 years old, wife of Ernest Thornley, Chicago mail carrier, will get started in the Circuit court here Monday. The first trial resulted in a disagreement by the jury. The suit is the result of alleged injuries suffered by Mrs. Thornley in a collision here between an auto in which she was riding and another driven by List on the night of Oct. 17, 1934.

THIS BANDIT PAIR DOES THOROUGH SHOE STORE JOB

Two young bandits made the most of a robbery last night in Harry Schwartz's boot shop at 5602 Madison street. Posing as customers, they each tried on and kept a pair of new shoes. After having their old shoes wrapped they drew guns and forced Schwartz and his brother Fred to give them $35, the contents of the till.

Then they searched the brothers and got $5 more, but, not satisfied, they compelled Harry to open a secret drawer. This yielded $275. No more money to be had, the bandits picked up nine dozen pairs of women's hosiery. Then they left—their total loot being two pairs of new shoes, worth $11.50; $315 in cash, and the hosiery, valued at $57. They also took their old shoes.

January Suburban Construction Reaches Highest Point for Month Since 1931

HOME BUILDING TOTAL IS LESS THAN YEAR AGO

Educational Projects Are Aid to Business.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

With a half million dollar increase over the corresponding month last year the January building permit total of $2,039,871 for the Chicago suburban area starts 1938 with the best first month since 1931. Last month's total, however, showed the customary seasonal decline, running $72,035 less than in December. The increase in the January total over the same month last year was 34 per cent.

Following are the comparative January totals back to 1931. In that year it was $3,162,000. The January total for 1932 dropped to $270,000 and in 1933 to $235,000. In 1934 it was $450,000. In 1935 it slid back to $293,000 and then advanced in 1936 to $797,000. Last year it was $1,526,000.

Suburbs Outbuild Chicago.

The January suburban total also established another record. It more than doubled the total of Chicago's building permits for the same month. The regional amount was $2,039,871, compared with $964,100 in Chicago.

Suburban building in 1937 was nearly 25 per cent larger than the year's total in Chicago, there being $35,846,012 for the outlying communities and $28,806,443 for the city.

Although the suburban building total for January was larger than in December, home building was less. There were permits for fifty-seven residences issued in the suburbs, costing $486,965. This compared with 64 permits for new homes issued during December, and with 102 new homes in January, 1937.

Repairs Are Less.

Alterations and repair expenditures on residences in the suburbs during January also were less than in December. Last month permits were issued for home modernization costing $125,646. In December alterations totaled $154,075.

Markham led all suburbs in number of permits for new homes, with nine issued for a total cost of $40,000. Five permits were taken out in Palos Heights, for homes to cost $21,200.

In Glenview four permits were issued for homes costing $80,000. Four permits for homes were taken out in Berwyn at a total cost of $41,550. In Hinsdale three permits were issued for new homes to cost $34,800. Evanston reported three permits for residences valued at $33,000, and Glencoe had two to cost $37,540. River Forest also had two permits with a total cost of $40,000.

The average cost of new homes in the suburbs, as shown by the January building permits, was $8,500.

School Building Helps.

January's suburban total of all types of buildings was helped most by educational construction. In Niles Center a $771,000 permit was issued for the Niles Township High school.

Edgar M. Elbert, building commissioner of Maywood, reported the new $300,000 fieldhouse of the Proviso Township High school which, owing to the fact that it is just outside of Maywood in land not included in any municipality, had been omitted in former suburban surveys.

In Berwyn a permit was issued for a $50,000 addition to the La Vergne school, according to Anton Pav, commissioner of public works in that suburb.

"It is apparent, from the January survey of suburban building, that the region must do everything possible to promote home and commercial building," said Edgar N. Greenebaum, president of the Greenebaum Investment company, which made the survey. "The January figure, although encouraging, is bolstered too much by public construction to be a dependable indication of what may be expected this year."

LEASES WEST SIDE CORNER.

Sam Nudelman leased the northeast corner of Maxwell and Halsted streets to enlarge his present lingerie and accessory shop. He now operates ten Chicago stores known as the Nu-Dell shops.

Ten New Homes in Contemplated 270 for Wheaton

Completion of the first ten units of one of the largest home building projects in the Chicago area, the Washington Wheaton subdivision in Wheaton, is scheduled for the last day of this month. The above photograph shows six houses on the east side of Wheaton avenue, a block and a half south of Roosevelt road and adjoining the Whittier grade school, and four more across the street, all nearing completion. Rissman & Hirschfeld are the architects. According to Ralph Wheaton, work will be started next week on twenty-two more homes in the block south of the above group, all to be ready for occupancy by May 1. The construction goal set is 270 houses by the middle of next year. If that is accomplished the entire fifty-five acre project will be occupied with homes ranging from $7,275 upward.

TWO CHICAGOANS ARE PLACED ON HOUSING BODIES

Appointment of committee heads and committees of the National Association of Real Estate Boards to study action that should be taken in three fields, housing, real estate finance, and taxation, were announced yesterday by Joseph W. Catharine, president.

Two Chicagoans, Arthur Bohnen, consultant for the Chicago Housing authority, and James C. Downs Jr., president of Real Estate Statistics, Inc., are members of the housing committee. John McC. Mowbray of Baltimore heads the group for the fourth year.

Edward A. MacDougall of New York again will be chairman of the committee on real estate finance, which he has headed since 1935. Myers Y. Cooper of Cincinnati will head the committee on real estate taxation.

Lumber Company Builds

The above two story office building and display room of the Ashland Lumber company has just been completed at 1800 North Ashland avenue from plans by Eugene and Max Fuhrer, architects and engineers, at a reported cost of $25,000. The Ashland Lumber company was the general contractor. The second floor contains executive offices and display rooms containing 119 exhibits of building materials and building construction models. Provision has been made for complete air conditioning later. According to Samuel Blackstone, general manager, his company has increased its space because of the belief that general building will increase throughout 1938. The formal opening of the above structure will take place this morning at 10 o'clock.

MILLS REPORTS $1,335,270 IN DEALS LAST YEAR

RESIDENTIAL RENTS IN OAK PARK WILL BE RAISED, REALTOR SAYS

Oak Park apartments and combined business and residence properties will have their rents advanced again this spring as a result of increased costs of property operation, according to E. H. Melone, chairman of the property management committee of the Oak Park Real Estate board.

In a statement issued by the realty organization yesterday Melone said: "In order to meet the increased operation cost of income property brought about by an advance in fuel costs, janitor wages, and commodities essential in the maintenance of apartment buildings and combined business and residential property, it is the opinion of the property management committee that an increase in spring rentals is inevitable.

"Minimum increases of $2.50 will be general. In some instances a maximum of $5 will be effected."

Insurance Realty Branch Rents La Salle St. Space

The real estate loan department of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance company has leased space at 134 South La Salle street for five years, and will move as soon as alterations are completed. W. J. Gumin, of Ross, Browne & Fleming, represented the lessee, and G. G. Olmsted Jr., of Hogan & Farwell, Inc., the lessor.

REALTORS PLAN LOOP SCHOOL OF APPRAISAL

Plans for a downtown school of appraisal method were announced yesterday by the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers. It will be supported by the Chicago Real Estate board, according to Paul C. Loeber, vice president of the chapter, and the board's meeting rooms and facilities have been made available to it.

The new course will follow the whole plan and cover the whole content of course one in real estate appraisal developed by the institute, Loeber said, and used by it in its case-study courses on realty appraisal given in 1935 and 1936 in coöperation with the school of business of the University of Chicago and in 1937 in coöperation with the Columbia university.

Herman O. Walther of Chicago will be dean of the new course, which will open March 1 and will be given at 32 West Randolph street on Tuesday and Friday evenings for seven and a half weeks. Advance registrations for the course are now being made at the offices of the Chicago Real Estate board.

All State Builders Rent More Space on West Side

All State Builders, general contractors, have leased larger quarters in the building in which they have had their offices for several years, at 2400 West Madison street.

At the Realty Boards

Members of the West Side Real Estate board have had an opportunity to express their choice of members for various committees as a result of a new selection procedure instituted by President Joseph R. Dorfman. Every member recently was sent a questionnaire which carried a complete listing of committees of the board with the request that he express first and second choice. From this basis of expressed opinion came the personnel for the committees.

President Dorfman announced that the Graemere hotel had been selected as the permanent headquarters of the West Side Real Estate board.

Herman V. Silvertrust, attorney, will speak on "The Legal Relationship of Owner and Agent" at the next session of the educational course of the North Side Real Estate board at the New Lawrence hotel, tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock. Roger P. Minwegen will be chairman.

The first of a series of addresses on housing problems will be given at the Chicago Real Estate board next Wednesday at 12:30 o'clock. Paul D. Angell, chairman of the house committee, is in charge of the program. The viewpoints of the contractor, builder, architect, realtor, and mortgage man will be given.

Grocer Waits Two Years for His Apartment

Ira N. Fender, a grocer, who lives at 1835 West 105th street, in the Beverly Hills area, yesterday was notified that he could have the apartment he had asked for more than two years ago. When a picture and story of a contemplated 22 flat building to be erected at the northwest corner of 95th place and Vanderpoel avenue was published in THE TRIBUNE on Dec. 29, 1935, Fender along with 159 others applied the next day for a suite.

According to Samuel D. Goldberg, general contractor, there were thirty-two bona fide applications on file for the twenty-two duplex apartments prior to the publication of the story.

Construction Is Halted.

Construction was halted, however, when it was found that the rent schedule was not high enough to justify the finance company in advancing the necessary money. General market conditions at that time wouldn't permit a rent boost.

"Some time ago we found that we could advance rentals and the building went ahead," said Goldberg. "Apartments that were to rent for $50 originally are now bringing $62.50 and we have at least four applicants for each suite.

"The former $65 flats are now renting for $75 and $80, and those originally scheduled for $70 are now being leased at $85. We expect to have the building completed and open for inspection by March 1.

Gets Same Suite.

"Fender applied for a $50 flat more than two years ago. Yesterday he signed a lease for the same suite with a rental of $62.50. His flat has a living room, a dinette, kitchenette, bedroom, inclosed sun room, and bath."

The building, designed by Quinn & Christiansen, was announced in 1935 as the first good sized apartment project in Chicago in several years. Each apartment is two stories high with an inside stairway and separate front entrance.

TAKE BIDS FOR NEW LAKE SHORE DRIVE U.S. COURT

Bids are being taken by the United States government for remodeling the building at 1212 Lake Shore drive, formerly the home of the Illinois Life Insurance company. When the $150,000 modernization program is completed the building will be the new home of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. It is expected remodeling will start about March 1, and that the court will move from the loop to the north side during the summer vacation. There will be one courtroom.

The present Circuit Court of Appeals for the seventh circuit, which comprises Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, hears appeals from the United States District courts of those states, and also from the Board of Tax Appeals, Security and Exchange commission, National Labor Relations board, Federal Trade commission, etc.

The present court consists of four judges: Evan A. Evans, of Wisconsin, senior judge; William M. Sparks, Indiana; J. Earl Major, Illinois, and Walter E. Treanor, Indiana, recently appointed. Frederick G. Campbell is clerk of the court.

Attorney Buys Business Block at 75th-Exchange

The two story business building at the northwest corner of 75th street and Exchange avenue was purchased yesterday by Earnest G. Lambesis, attorney, 134 North La Salle street, from the Seventy-fifth and Exchange Building corporation for an undisclosed consideration. The building occupies a 100 by 119 foot lot and contains six stories and twenty-five offices. Oschatz, Ratner & Wittert and W. J. Boyd were brokers.

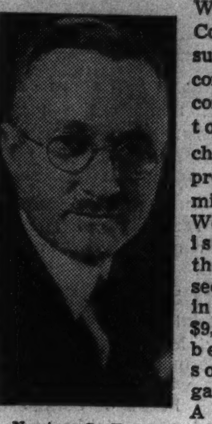
DISCLOSE MOST WOLLENBERGER'S ISSUES FINANCED

Flamingo and Others Use 77-B Procedure.



Newton C. Farr.

Reorganization or liquidation of the bond issues underwritten by Wollenberger & Co. has been substantially completed, according to Newton C. Farr, chairman of the protective committee for the Wollenberger issues. Sixty-three properties securing bonds in excess of $9,000,000 have been extended, sold, or reorganized, he said. A large portion of these was reorganized under section 77-B of the bankruptcy act.

Flamingo Hotel Included.

Included in the 77-B reorganizations was the Flamingo hotel, at South Shore drive and 55th street, which secured a first mortgage issue of a million dollars. The adjoining Park Shore hotel, containing 109 apartments, and securing originally $1,200,000 worth of bonds, also was reorganized in this manner.

Other large properties which were reorganized under 77-B were the Fairfax Apartment hotel, at Hyde Park boulevard and Dorchester avenue; the Gothic apartments, containing 39 suites, at 6529-31 Kenwood avenue; the Hermine apartments, 102 flats, at 4108-14 Kenmore avenue; the 2547-49 Washington Boulevard apartments, 36 flats and 2 stores; West End hotel, 4820 West Chicago avenue, and the Windale hotel, 6017-19 Winthrop avenue.

Two Issues Extended.

Two of the larger issues, the Karcher hotel and the Merchants' block, in Waukegan, have been extended and have paid at least 3 per cent and 4 per cent per annum respectively to the bondholders at regular intervals since, Farr said. All costs, fees, and expenses of the reorganization, and all real estate taxes were paid out of income from the property.

In addition to Farr the other members of the committee are Frank C. Rathje, president of the Chicago City Bank and Trust company, and John A. Sbarbaro, master in chancery. The Chicago Title and Trust company was depositary for the bonds. Joseph Z. Willner was attorney and Harold C. Bull secretary of the committee.

News of the Architects

Angelo Robert Clas, formerly a member of the architectural firm of Holabird & Root, and until recently assistant administrator of the Public Works administration, with headquarters in Washington, yesterday announced that he has opened offices in the Shoreham building, Washington, under the name of A. R. Clas Associates. The new firm offers a technical service on housing projects, Clas said. J. W. Cramer is a member of the firm.

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago the week of Feb. 4 to 10, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled twelve with a combined cost of $146,500. For the corresponding week last year there were thirty-five contracts totaling $546,800. So far this year the total cost of contracts is $2,668,009, compared with $3,870,810 for the same period last year.

HILLBILLIES DROP LANGUAGE OF THEIR PAPPIES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 12.—"It was a pleasure to hear a lady say: 'That rattlesnake intentioned to bite me. I never heerd a snake sing so vigrous.'" Joseph S. Hall, youthful linguist of the graduate school of Columbia university, was commenting on the "fine old expressions" which he heard during his study of speech in the Great Smoky mountains of Tennessee and North Carolina.

Arrow points to area where hillbillies live.

Mr. Hall's investigations have been made in the Great Smoky Mountains National park through coöperation of the National Park service and the Civilian Conservation corps. He is now classifying words heard, some of which are a lingual heritage from Scotland and England.

Spoken Language Changes.

His investigation revealed that English spoken by the natives is undergoing a rapid change. It is becoming more like that of the thousands of people from the lowlands who are pouring into the national park. Already mountain youths speak different English from parents and grandparents.

"The mountain boy or girl generally will pronounce 'learn' and 'search' with the vowel of 'her,' whereas their grandparents and possibly their parents pronounce these words with the vowel of 'barn,'" says Mr. Hall in preliminary notes filed with the National Park service.

"Younger persons are likely to say 'afraid' while older people say 'afeared.' It is interesting to note that this latter word still is in general dialectal use throughout England, Scotland, and Ireland, and that it was a feature of approved literary speech during the time of Queen Elizabeth. It is needful to say, however, that the occurrence of a few forms in mountain speech which were 'standard' in Elizabethan speech, but which apparently are not in use elsewhere, does not permit us to say that we have a survival of that speech in the mountains, as has been claimed.

Tourists Will Do Their Part.

"Many other criteria besides a few special uses of words would have to be taken into account before such an assertion justly could be made . . . With increasingly active educational influences and more contact with the world beyond the mountains, the old language, it is needless to say, soon will pass. Tourists will do their part in removing the quaintness and picturesqueness of the hillsman's speech."

Among "fine old expressions" which Mr. Hall heard among the oldest and most isolated people were "thar" for "there," "whar" for "where," and "bar" for "bear." Others were "fotch" for "fetch," "cotch" for "catch," and "year" for "ear."

QUIZ BROTHER TOMORROW IN RACKET KILLING

Capt. Daniel Gilbert of the state's attorney's office, investigating the gangland slaying last Wednesday of Samuel Costello in Chicago Heights, will question Charles Costello, his brother, tomorrow.

Charles, formerly a lieutenant of Al Capone in Chicago Heights, asked that he be allowed to attend his brother's funeral yesterday before being questioned.

Three others were wounded when three gunmen opened fire upon Sam Costello in a bakery at 2205 Butler street, Chicago Heights. Police theorize that the slain man was muscling in on the slot machine racket in Will county.

RELIEF ROLLERS DENIED BOOZE.

Belvidere, Ill., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Chief of Police August Stegeman revealed today that all of the eleven persons named on blacklists to tavern keepers, to prevent them buying drinks, are on relief rolls.

Finds Quake Record

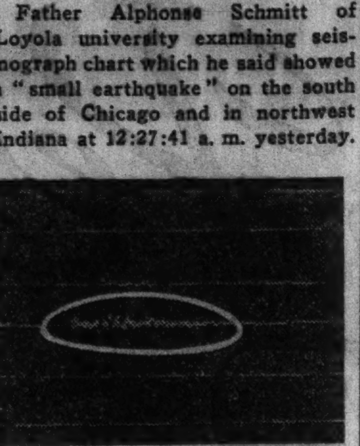
Father Alphonse Schmitt of Loyola university examining seismograph chart which he said showed a "small earthquake" on the south side of Chicago and in northwest Indiana at 12:27:41 a. m. yesterday.



Jagged line within oval is the record that Father Schmitt interpreted as indicating a quake. There is an interval of approximately one and one-fourth hours between the lines, marked by a needle on paper around a cylinder.

Earthquake recording instruments in Chicago were at variance yesterday as to whether or not a slight quake shook the far south side of the city, a section of northern Indiana, including Gary, and southwestern Michigan as far north as Paw Paw at about 12:30 a. m. Loyola university's seismograph showed one; the University of Chicago's, none.

Father Alphonse Schmitt said that the Loyola instrument, which he examined early yesterday when he saw newspaper accounts of the disturbance, recorded a tremor beginning at 12:27:41 a. m. and lasting for a few seconds more than a minute.

Milton Swenson, junior meteorologist of the weather bureau at the University of Chicago, examined the university's seismograph at 2:30 a. m. and found it reported no disturbance. Later in the day geologists supported his findings.

Nonscientific evidence consisted of the sensations of several hundred residents of the shock area who insisted they had been aroused from sleep by the shaking of the earth.

BOY, 14, REPORTED MISSING.

Hyde Park police were asked yesterday to search for Charles Field Jr., 14 years old, who has been missing since Friday from the rooming house operated by his mother, Mrs. Mary Field Panos, at 1054 East 43d street.

STORM MOVES ON COAST, BESET BY QUAKE AND FLOOD

Two Die When Avalanche Wipes Out Town.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Distressed for 17 days by incessant rains that have flooded surrounding river valleys, the bay region of California was shaken for five minutes today by an earthquake. Tonight a new storm was forming off Cape Flattery and was expected to strike this area by morning.

Battling snow drifts reported in some places to be sixty feet through rescue crews with snowplows were struggling to break through to June Lake, where an avalanche of snow, trees, and rocks killed two men and crushed seven cabins. The lone telephone wire into the community is down.

The bodies of the two victims—Charles H. Clark, 45 years old, a Pasadena school teacher, and Edward Walter, 65 years old, of Houghton, Mich.—who died when the avalanche crushed their cabin, are at Merrill's store, the only building left standing in the community. Other residents of the stricken area took refuge in the store, where ample food supplies are on hand.

Two Towns Flooded.

Danger from flood waters was most acute today at Watsonville, south of San Francisco, where a levee broke, letting the Panjaro river into the town. The southern half of Watsonville was evacuated. Across the river the town of Panjaro was covered with three to five feet of water. Only a few of the town's thousand residents remained. Sixty-two families were rescued after they had been marooned.

Tremendous snows have covered the high Sierra mountains, blocking highways and establishing a 44 year record. Shallow river beds in lowland areas were overflowing after several days of rain and floods increased in depth and expanse as the rain continued to fall and the snows to melt.

Many Rivers on Rampage.

The rivers giving the most trouble are the Eureka, Sacramento, Panjaro, Russian, Stanislaus, and the San Joaquin. The San Joaquin flooded three small towns in Glenn county and three in Butte, on the opposite side of the river.

San Francisco's problem of a whale became more acute today while Dr. J. C. Geiger, health department head, wondered what to do with the mammal, washed up by the storm on rocks near the entrance to the Golden Gate. It is a hundred ton problem and must be disposed of forthwith.

WOMAN IN RACE FOR LIFE REACHES CHICAGO AIRPORT

An American Air Lines sleeper plane was taken off its southern transcontinental route last night to fly a seriously ill woman from Houston, Tex., to Chicago so that she could get to the Mayo clinic in Rochester, Minn., in time possibly to save her life. She is Mrs. Charles Epstein, wife of an eastern magazine distributor. She is said to be suffering from a brain tumor.

The plane, chartered for the trip, made a nonstop flight from Fort Worth, and landed at the Chicago airport at 3 o'clock this morning. Because of Mrs. Epstein's condition, plans to remove her by motor to a local hospital until train time for Rochester, were abandoned.

Instead the plane was converted into a temporary hospital on the field, and Mrs. Epstein remained in it. An air conditioning machine kept the inside temperature at hospital room level. She was to be removed from the plane before 9 a. m., and driven to the Chicago and North Western station, and there placed on a train. With Mrs. Epstein on the plane trip were her husband, a physician, and a special nurse. Also aboard were Pilot Joseph Westover, a co-pilot, and Stewardess Lillian Vette.

COSTA RICA WILL VOTE AND LIKE IT FOR 22 SENATORS

All Citizens Must Ballot Under New Law.

BY EMILIO ROBERT.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAN JUAN, Costa Rica, Feb. 12.—Voting in a Costa Rican senatorial election will be compulsory tomorrow for the first time in history. Twenty-two senators will be chosen to replace those whose four year terms have expired. All citizens will be expected to go to the polls under a compulsory electoral law ratified by congress late in 1936.

Defaulters, under the terms of the law, will be subject to loss of civil rights for various periods up to four years, depending on court findings. Government employés who fail to vote will be removed from their jobs.

To maintain tranquility during the voting period the government has prohibited carrying firearms or selling liquor for three days.

Charge Law Aids Régime.

Opponents of the present régime contend that the compulsory voting legislation was enacted merely to strengthen the position of the present government and is contrary to the principles of democracy. They pointed out that any government employé who voted for an anti-government candidate would be liable to instant dismissal, and that those who vote will probably vote for the existing régime.

Because a large percentage of the public is in the government employ, the new law, it was charged, favors retention of the present régime. The law has created resentment among opponents, who foresee increased difficulties for any candidate seeking election to the presidency a year hence.

Guard Against Outbreak.

For some time there has been intense feeling between government forces and oppositionist parties in the province of Guanacaste. Disturbances have occurred there recently because of allegedly unjust interference by government agents in meetings of anti-government parties.

As a precautionary measure, the government has concentrated specially armed frontier guards and police detachments in the province to prevent trouble during the election.

Some "Don'ts" for Pile Sufferers

If you are a sufferer from Piles or some other rectal disorder, read carefully the following list of "don'ts"—prepared by The McCleary Clinic, widely known rectal specialists. Don't neglect a well defined rectal ailment and expect it to right itself. Don't use an ointment for temporary relief, believing it will produce a permanent cure. Don't wait until your whole system may become undermined before you consult a competent rectal specialist. Don't take the grave chance of some malignant and incurable condition developing before you decide to do what you should do now. The McCleary Clinic has prepared a book that describes all rectal conditions and the mild McCleary treatment. It will be sent free to any rectal sufferer.

Use the following address: McCleary Clinic, 2-514 Elms Blvd., Excelsior Springs, Mo. Use a postcard or write a personal letter, describing your case if you so desire.

20 GOLDEN GLOVES CENTERS READY TO PICK TEAMS

CHICAGO NAMES TWO SQUADS IN WEEK'S BOUTS

Original Army of 23,000 Cut in Half.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Some semblance of order has been made out of the chaos that existed in the beginning of the gigantic battle for Golden Gloves conducted by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

Starting happily along the road of achievement, an original army of 23,000 ambitious boys set out to win a Golden Glove.

Pitfalls they encountered along that road have already narrowed the field to less than half that number. By this time next week 32 of the 50 teams which are to fight in the Tournament of Champions in the Chicago Stadium on Feb. 28 and March 1 and 2 will have been selected.

It's Been a Rough Voyage.

The remaining teams will be made up early the following week. Then will come the mobilization of all these troops in Chicago for the greatest boxing spectacle offered anywhere.

The voyage into the safe harbors of the Tournament of Champions has indeed been a rough one for those survivors.

A victory in a neighborhood glove swinging duel first carried them into the preliminary round of a sectional tournament. Numerous victories—a dozen, perhaps—had to be scored in that competition before they became boss of their own particular sectional division.

Chicago Team Invades New York.

And now more stormy seas await them in the Tournament of Champions—their hardest battles, perhaps—before they can win a Golden Glove and a place on the Chicago team that will invade New York late in March for the battle in Madison Square Garden. There they will fight against the east's finest, who will make up the team representing the New York Daily News.

So far eleven out of town teams have been selected in 11 tournaments that have attracted the largest fields and the biggest crowds in all Golden Gloves history.

They will represent:

Huntington [W. Va.] Advertiser.
Kansas City Star.
Lexington Herald-Leader.
Nashville Tennessean.
Ogden Standard-Examiner.
Peoria Journal-Transcript.
Sioux City Journal.
Springfield State Register.
Vincennes Sun-Commercial.

Tomorrow — Dayton News, Terre Haute Tribune-Star.
Tuesday—Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette, Gary Post-Tribune, Joliet Spectator.
Wednesday—Cedar Rapids Gazette, Quincy Herald-Whig.
Saturday—Kokomo Tribune.

West Side to Name Team.

In addition two of Chicago's four sectional teams will be selected during the week. These teams will represent the west side and the northwest side. Semi-final round matches on the west side will be fought on Thursday night. Championship battles will be held Friday night. The fighting on the west side will take place in the Park Casino. First and second round matches on the west side were decided in the Madison Athletic club arena last week. The northwest side preliminaries open on Wednesday, with more bouts on Thursday and Friday to pick the champions.

Also opening in Chicago this week will be the tournament out of which

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The injury riddled Chicago Blackhawks strengthened their hold on third place in the American section of the National Hocky league by defeating Toronto's Maple Leafs, 2 to 1, tonight.

While only two minor penalties were meted out, it was a close-checking contest. The Hawks were without the services of two regulars, Art Weibe, defense man, and Mush March, right winger, both out of the game with injuries.

The winning goal was scored by Earl Seibert, who was back at his accustomed defense post. Just after he returned from serving the Hawks' only penalty of the game, Seibert broke away with Louis Trudell, and, when the latter was pushed out of the play by Red Horner, Seibert shot the loose puck past Goalie Walter Broda.

Hawks Score First.

The Blackhawks scored first in the opening session when Paul Thompson took advantage of a defense lapse by Horner, grabbed a loose puck, and beat Broda from close in. Horner tied it up near the end of the second period on a combination play with Sylvanus Apps and Gordon Drillon.

The Leafs had the better of the early exchanges in the first period but the Hawks were checking closely inside their blue line. Levinsky and Trudell broke through on a fast-passing attack, but Levinsky's shot was right on Broda's pads. Jackson replied for the Leafs and just missed the net with a hard drive. Parsons broke through alone and forced Karakas to his knees with a backhander.

Cully Dahlstrom got through on a loose puck behind the Toronto defense, but Broda slid out 15 feet to knock the disc to one side. The Leafs' starting line came on and Apps stickhandled through the Chicago team only to lose the puck when on top of Karakas.

Thompson Scores for Hawks.

The Leafs pressed, but the harassed Hawk rear guard held up. Apps went through for a hard shot which Karakas just deflected. The Hawks moved up on attack and when Red Horner, Leaf defense man, attempted to clear across his goal mouth, Paul Thompson, grabbed the loose puck and fired it into an open net. The time of the goal was 13:13.

Thoms and Parsons broke through for the Leafs, but Karakas again turned back the Leaf attack. Johnny Gottselig replied for Chicago and was stopped at the goal mouth.

The second period was only a few seconds old when Red Horner drew the game's first penalty, a minor for cross-checking Bert Connolly. He was back on the ice before any damage was done.

Broda Blocks McKenzie's Shot.

McKenzie then stickhandled through Toronto's defense, only to have his shot blocked by Broda. Chamberlain and Metz broke through, but the former's close-in shot bounced off Karakas' skate. Following the next face-off in the Blackhawks' zone, the Leafs pressed and held the play around the Chicago net for nearly a minute. The Hawks broke away finally and missed an excellent chance

MAKE NEW MOVE TO BRING TITLE BOUT TO CHICAGO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 12.—Newly aroused antagonism between the New York boxing commission and Joe Jacobs, American manager of Max Schmeling, German heavyweight challenger, may cost New York the championship bout between Schmeling and Joe Louis, which is scheduled to be held in June. It was reported tonight that Joe Jacobs and Julian Black, one of Louis' two managers, had agreed to bring pressure to bear upon Promoter Mike Jacobs to hold the fight in Chicago. Black and Joe Jacobs conferred yesterday.

Promoter Likes Chicago.

Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois, Mayor Kelly of Chicago, and Leonard Hicks, president of the Hotelmen's Association of Chicago, have all asked Promoter Jacobs to consider the advantages of Chicago as a site for the bout. Hicks and Joe Triner, chairman of the Illinois boxing commission, visited New York recently to attempt to persuade Jacobs to promote the fight in Soldiers' field.

Jacobs indicated several weeks ago that he favored Chicago, but feared he might incur the wrath of the New York commission and businessmen if he moved it. The Louis faction wanted Chicago because of its large colored and German population and because of the proximity of Detroit, where Joe got his start. Louis' managers pointed out that Jacobs would have no fear of anti-Nazi boycott trouble which annoyed him in New York on Schmeling's last visit.

It's O. K. with Max.

Schmeling says he doesn't care where he fights Louis. He has said he would meet him on a dock, if necessary. Max lets Joe Jacobs handle the business end of his affairs here and when the New York commission yesterday suspended Tony Galento, Jacobs' other fighter and Jacobs himself, Joe is said to have cast his vote with the Louis group and in its effort to move the bout to Chicago.

English Setter Wins Best in Show Award

New York, Feb. 12.—[Special.]—The American bred English setter puppy, Daro of Maridor, tonight was awarded the best in show title of the sixty-second annual all-breed exhibition of the Westminster Kennel club in Madison Square Garden.

Bred and owned by the Maridor kennels of Dwight W. Ellis of East Long Meadow, Mass., and shown in the ring by Charles Palmer, this heavily ticked, 11 month old English setter was acclaimed by a gathering of 15,000 which crowded into every available viewpoint in the Garden inclosure.

Daro of Maridor, first American bred best in show winner in more than a decade, never had been shown before this week. He was born March 18, 1937. He is a son of the Champion Great Sturdy Max, his dam having been Champion Lakeland Dawn.

Equal Chance to All.

The finals provided one of the most thrilling competitions that has been seen in the Garden for many years. It came at the conclusion of a series of group competitions that had been unparalleled in the history of Westminster shows, with American bred winners showing the way.

John G. Bates of Morristown, N. J., and New York City, was the appointed judge to make the final verdict. He gave every dog in the ring the fullest opportunity to show his paces and to exhibit thoroughbred qualities.

Hopes went up and down. The longer Mr. Bates lingered over one dog, the greater the applause from the galleries.

A Difficult Decision.

At first it seemed that he was intrigued by the wonderful black poodle, Champion Pillicoc Rumpelstiltskins, best of the nonsporting dogs. Then he came down the line to linger a long time over the magnificent little English bred, white fox terrier, Champion Flornell Spicypiece of Halleston, best in show winner last year, and favorite to repeat.

Once more Mr. Bates came down

CUNNINGHAM 1ST IN HUNTER MILE; LASH WINS 2 MILE

Boston, Mass., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Glenn Cunningham retained his Hunter mile honors in the 49th Boston A. A. meet with a 4:10 performance tonight before 12,000 in the Boston garden. The indoor record holder, while equalling the fourth best mile ever run indoors, led Gene Venzke, of the New York A. C. home by 10 yards.

Cunningham ran the three-quarters in 3:08, with Venzke at his heels and Ray Mahannah of Drake, and Alex Northtrop of Harvard, a half lap behind. Starting the 11th and last lap, Venzke led Cunningham by a yard, only to have the latter speed up and then sprint to the finish line. The time beat his record of 4:11.9, set here a year ago.

The injured Archie San Romani, Cunningham's Kansas statesman and New York curb exchange clubmate, was forced to withdraw from this classic. San Romani was the only one of the field who appeared capable of extending Cunningham.

Lash Wins by a Yard.

Mahannah, the junior national 1,500 meters titlist, was a half lap behind, in third place, when Cunningham broke the tape, and Northtrop, another 20 yards back, trailed the four man field.

Don Lash, the Indiana star who set his 8:58 world record here in last year's Billings two miles event, had only a yard on Norman Bright of San Francisco, tonight when he won in 9:03.6. Bright was five yards back starting the 22d and gun lap and he made it up while turning the last corner.

Lash, however, had a bit too much drive for the Californian as they pounded down the last 20 yards. In third place, half a lap behind, the veteran Joe McCluskey, of the New York A. C., trailed, with Floyd Lochner of St. Louis, at his heels.

Tolmich Beats Towns.

Allan Tolmich of Detroit's Wayne university, equaled the world record of 5.7 seconds for the 45 yard high hurdles to beat Forrest [Spec] Towns, Georgia's Olympic champion. Ted Day of Yale placed third and

Iowa Hands Chicago Its 32d Straight Big 10 Defeat

Iowa handed Chicago's Maroons their thirty-second consecutive Western conference defeat in a dull game before 2,000 in the Midway fieldhouse last night. The score was 42 to 29.

The Maroons made a fight of it for the first half, which ended 17 to 15 for Iowa. But in the first eight minutes of the second period the Hawkeyes made fourteen consecutive points, and put Maroon hopes of breaking their three year losing streak back one more notch.

Iowa Runs Up Early Lead.

Crowding the Maroons hard, Iowa was charged with twenty-one fouls, but succeeded in disorganizing Chicago's attack. The Maroons were unable to capitalize on their free throws, missing nine of twelve chances in the first half.

Iowa ran up an early lead of 13 to 5, but three one-handed baskets by Dick Lounsbury put Chicago back in the game at half time.

Iowa's rush early in the second period included four free throws and a basket by Benny Stephens, two goals by Van Ysseldyk, and long baskets by Lind and Kinnick.

Frequent Substitutions.

The last quarter was played with numerous substitutions. Lounsbury of Chicago and Van Ysseldyk of Iowa were tied for scoring honors with twelve points each. Morris Rossin, Maroon guard, held the high scoring Stephens to two baskets.

BUCKEYES HELP NORTHWESTERN REGAIN LEAD

Wildcats' 2d Victory Over Wisconsin.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Northwestern came from behind in the second half tonight to defeat Wisconsin, 27 to 23, and regain undisputed possession of first place in the western conference basketball race while Ohio State was routing Purdue. A record crowd of 10,850 saw the game in Badger fieldhouse.

The Wildcats, who were behind, 12 to 9, at the half, trailed during the first 26 minutes of play. Bob Voigts, playing at guard for James Currie, who was unable to make the trip because of illness, tied the score at 16 all on a free throw. Jake Nagode then gave the Wildcats the lead on a free throw.

Wisconsin tied the score twice before Northwestern gained a permanent lead which it held through the last five minutes.

Hit Basket After 15 Minutes.

Wisconsin was off to an early lead on a pair of free throws by Charley Jones, who was fouled by Fred Trenkle. Jones followed with a field goal, and the Badgers maintained a safe advantage thoughout the first period.

Northwestern went 15 minutes without scoring a field goal. Jean Smith broke the famine with a basket from just outside the free throw circle. A short time later Mike McMichael, who had replaced Trenkle, sank the Wildcats' only other field goal of the first half.

OHIO BEATS PURDUE

Columbus, O., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—A second half rally that netted 25 points enabled Ohio State to hand Purdue its second defeat of the Western conference basketball season tonight, 37 to 29, before 6,649.

After a first half in which Purdue definitly was superior and piled up a 21 to 12 lead, Ohio came back to defeat the Boilermakers at their own game, a fast breaking offense. Dick Boughner, Ohio State guard, scored two field goals and a free throw in the first minute and then Jimmy Hull, forward, added a free throw and a field goal to make the score 20 to 21 before Anderson scored one of Purdue's two field goals of the second half. After seven minutes of play Ohio State went ahead, 25 to 23, on baskets by Hull and Schick.

Purdue Starts Fast.

From here on Ohio State was never in danger and kept adding to its lead. In the last three minutes of play it borrowed from Purdue's performance against Illinois last week by stalling in the center of the floor.

Ohio opened the scoring on McDonald's free throw, but Dickinson tied it up a few seconds later and Schick then sent Ohio ahead with a long field goal. Sines tied the score again and from there on Purdue forged ahead steadily to lead, 21 to 12, at the half.

The Boilermaker attack was led by Anderson and Young. Ohio State had an opportunity to tie the score after thirteen minutes of play, but Boughner missed a free throw. Field goals by Dickinson, Anderson, and Young increased Purdue's lead.

Illini in a futile last half rally as Minnesota scored its fourth consecutive victory, 28 to 23, before 9,500 customers.

Illinois' attack revolved entirely around Dehner, high scorer in the Big Ten despite the fact that he was eliminated from one game by ineligibility. Dehner didn't score a point in the first half and Illinois trailed, 13 to 5, at the intermission. Dehner began scoring in the second half and he all but won the game.

Dehner made four field goals and three free throws for a total of 11 points.

Illini Perk Up.

Illinois, regarded as the fastest team in the conference, was allowed only three open shots at the basket in the first half and Hapac's field goal wasi its only successful field goal attempt.

The second half was an entirely different game. Minnesota went into a 15 to 5 lead at the start of the period. But from then on Illinois dominated play, compiling 18 points to Minnesota's 15. The largest margin the Gophers could muster in that second half was 24 to 14 and again at 26 to 16.

The Chicago Shamrocks defeated the Chicago Ramblers, 11 to 9, last night in the 124th Field Artillery armory to tie the 124th Field Artillery team for first place in the senior division of the Metropolitan Indoor Polo league.

With the aid of a four goal handicap, the Shamrock combination of Lieut. Chris Schuh, Maj. Les Ireland, and Capt. William Everett took command of the game early in the first period on two well directed scoring shots by Schuh and Ireland.

Lorber Scores Twice.

Herb Lorber of the Ramblers cut the Shamrocks' margin with two goals in the second period, but these were quickly matched by Everett and Ireland and the Shamrocks led, 9 to 3, at the end of the second chukker.

Lorber led a third period attack which cut the Shamrocks' lead to 10 to 5, and dominated the final chukker, which found the Shamrocks barely able to stand off the Ramblers' closing drive.

Culver Military academy defeated Fort Sheridan, 9 to 8, to take first place in the junior division of the Metropolitan league. It was Culver's second victory.

Cadets Take Early Lead.

The Cadets took a 4 to 1 lead in the first chukker, but Capt. Eddie Greiner of Fort Sheridan scored twice and Capt. H. S. Jernigen once to cut the Culver lead to 5 to 4 at the end of the second chukker. Greiner then led a Fort Sheridan attack which tied the score at 7 to 7 as the teams entered the final chukker.

the line. This time it was to go over in every last detail the English setter. He inspected in the minutest detail and then went back to the middle of the ring, hesitated a moment and dramatically waved Charley Palmer and his charge to the center of the ring.

There was no second. Mr. Bates gave no indication that he had any dog in mind for reserve.

With five American bred dogs coming through the group judging of the final day of this greatest of all indoor shows, the terrier class victory of Champion Flornell Spicypiece of Halleston was the only thing which prevented a clean sweep for home breeding in the six classes. Even so, the results were unprecedented, this being the first time that five dogs whelped in kennels of this country from bloodlines selected by American breeders had won in their groups to challenge for best in show.

One of the major sensations of the show was the victory in the working dogs class of Champion Hertzville Headstone, 5 year old sable and white collie owned by C. J. Casselman and Thomas M. Halpin of Chicago. Scoring over eighty-two other American and foreign entries as best of breed among collies yesterday, Hertzville Headstone came back today to win over what experts considered one of the finest fields of working dogs ever exhibited here. Best of show at Chicago and in three subsequent exhibitions, he never has been defeated in nineteen shows. Mr. Casselman handled his winner himself.

One Disappointment.

Slemish Splendid, judged best of breed among Irish terriers against a field of seventy-four dogs, was another Chicago entry eliminated tonight in the final terrier group judging.

Chicago kennels had a double entry in the final group judging of the sporting dogs—Dr. C. H. Searles' Gordon setter, Downside Bonnie of Searlway, which previously had beaten the English and American champion Janet of Devon to be adjudged best Gordon in the show; and Janet T. Henneberry's champion English springer spaniel, Dunoon Donald Dhu. Both dogs were eliminated in the final selection from the exceptional field of gun dogs. Dunoon Donald Dhu was the last foreign bred challenger in this field to challenge the four American breds which emerged.

UNITED STATES DEFEATS LATVIA IN HOCKY, 1 TO 0

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 12.—[U. P.]—The United States amateur hocky team got off to a successful start today in its bid for the world championship by beating Latvia, 1 to 0. Even so, the performance was disappointing, because the Latvian team is a rank outsider.

The only American score came during the ninth minute of the second period. It was made by Hugh Young of New Haven, Conn.

Mr. Swasey, 90, Hopes Mr. Gehrig Wins Wage War

Fort Worth, Tex., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Charles J. Swasey, who played baseball back in the "coffee and doughnut" days, hopes Lou Gehrig wins his salary war with Col. Jacob Ruppert.

Swasey will be 91 Sept. 3. Gehrig is his favorite, but the entire crop of holdouts has his sympathy, even when he suspects that some of the salary squabbles may be more for public consumption than genuine.

Swasey claims, without dispute so far, to be the oldest ex-player who saw service in the front ranks. His experience dates to 1865, when he was a member of the Chicago Excelsiors, forerunners to the modern Chicago Cubs. He was a second baseman.

Swasey quit the sport in 1873 and came to Texas. He is bedridden now, having suffered a broken hip six months ago, but this doesn't keep him from following baseball.

Toronto Ties It Up.

The Leafs began to press and Karakas had a close call when he fell on a loose rolling puck inside his goal crease. Toronto finally tied it up at 18:50 when Horner scored on the rebound of Apps' shot. Drillon as well as Apps were given assists.

The first five minutes of the third period produced little. Then Earl Seibert drew Chicago's first penalty and the Leafs rushed to attack.

Karakas was hard pressed for a few moments, but Levinsky then broke away to relieve the pressure. He was stopped at the Leaf defense by Fowler. MacKenzie and Gottselig then broke away from another Toronto ganging attack. They passed their way past Fowler, remaining Leaf defense man, but MacKenzie shot wide. Drillon replied for the Leafs, only to be stopped by Karakas. Seibert came back on the ice before the Leafs could break through.

Seibert Puts Hawks Ahead.

Seibert signalized his return with a goal which gave the Hawks a 2 to 1 lead. He broke away with Trudell, and, when Trudell was knocked out of the play by Horner, Seibert shot the loose puck past Broda from the right side. The time was 10:57.

The Leafs went to work inside the Chicago blue line and for fully three minutes kept play in that area. The Hawks exhibited a packed defense which could not be penetrated. Seibert relieved Levinsky and broke away alone, easing pressure on the Blackhawks' net.

Romnes and Thompson broke away and with no one to beat on the Leaf defense, skated right in on Broda, who saved Thompson's hard drive. The Leafs began to press again, but the Hawks managed to hold on until the end.

This series of three pictures shows the experiences of Novell Havis, 19 years old, of the C. Y. O., in the west section preliminaries in the Madison A. C. At the left Havis is seen climbing into the ring for his bout in the 135 pound novice division. His foe, John Churchville, also of the C. Y. O., stands behind him. Scoring in Big 10 Basketball Is Up; Victory Margin the Same

As Big Ten basketball teams enter the second half of conference competition, statistics covering the first 31 games reveal an increase of eight points per game in scoring, a gain attributed by coaches to the longer period of play resulting from elimination of the center jump.

In 32 contests last winter conference quintets, which play a sixty game schedule, averaged a combined total of 64 points per game. This season there has been an average of 72 points scored in each contest. Coaches throughout the Big Ten have reported games this year to be running from three to five minutes longer in actual playing time.

Playing Time Averages 32 Minutes.

"In three games at Indiana this year," Coach Everett Dean of the Hoosiers points out, "the actual playing time has averaged thirty-two minutes per game. In other years, the ball was in actual play about twenty-eight or twenty-nine minutes out of the forty. These figures are significant, since they show an increase of about four minutes actual play which, in turn, shows an increase in scoring."

At the conclusion of the first half of last year's play the ten teams had amassed a combined total of 2,049 points. The figure yesterday was 2,222, with one game less played. There are six teams this year averaging 35 points or better each game, while last season there were only three. Second division quintets are averaging more points per game than were the last five teams in the 1936-1937 standings.

Victory Margin Almost Same.

In addition to this predicted increase in scoring it was generally believed that the elimination of the jump would force the use of more players and cut the winning team's margin of victory. But figures reveal that Western conference games remain almost the same as last year in these respects.

It was predicted that the speeded up action expected to result from the new rule would call for the employment of eight or nine men per game rather than five or six, but last year, with the center jump in use, Big Ten coaches were averaging nine players per contest. This season the figure has remained approximately the same. Coaches point out that as players became more familiar with the new conditions they learned to pace themselves and now find the game no more taxing than the 1936-'37 version.

Not a Race Horse Game.

"Basketball is not developing into a race horse game, as many critics predicted it would," declares Doug Mills, coach of Illinois' 1936-'37 co-champions. "I notice that the players are adjusting themselves to the up-and-down-the-floor system, realizing they cannot run like mad every minute. In fact, it seems that some teams are more defensive conscious as a result of the change."

The average margin of victory has remained the same—eight points this winter compared to the same figure in 1936-'37.

Waner Faces Benswanger Friday—to Talk Salary

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 12.—[U. P.]—Paul Waner will come to Pittsburgh next week to talk over terms for his 1938 contract. Waner, fourth best batter in the National league last year, and leading hitter in 1936, will come Friday from Sarasota, Fla., where he spends his winters. President William E. Benswanger announced he invited Paul to come to Pittsburgh at the Pirates' expense, believing that long distance correspondence would only delay signing of the contract.

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Former Purdue football stars, including Cody and Cecil Isbell, will play with the Lafayette Big Five tomorrow afternoon against the Studebaker Athletics baseball team.

C. Y. O. Quintets to Settle Section Leadership Today

When the St. Rita section of the C. Y. O. Basketball league completed its season's schedule last Sunday the lightweight leadership fell into a two-way tie, with St. Theodore and St. Raphael as the contending quintets. These fives will settle the final standings of their section in a game on today's card in St. Sabina's gymnasium.

An outstanding heavyweight encounter brings together Queen of Angels and St. Timothy on the former's home court in the second of a three day round robin. The winner of this contest probably will emerge sectional champions.

RONCHETTI WINS THREE EVENTS TO LEAD SKATE MEET

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Vic Ronchetti, Chicago's 1937 Silver Skates champion, won three first places today virtually to assure himself of the North American speed skating title.

Piling up 90 points in the three races—the 440, three-quarter, and 2 mile—plus the 20 he scored for a second place in Friday's mile event, Ronchetti, who skates under the colors of the Catholic Youth organization, was far in front of his competitors in the men's senior division.

In second place was Eddie Schroeder of Chicago, 1931 Silver Skates winner, with 50 points, while Tommy Smith of Utica, N. Y., was third with 40.

Schroeder Goes Down.

Schroeder fell in the qualifying heat of the 440, tripped over Dick Werner of Haledon, N. J., in the three-quarter mile final, but almost beat Ronchetti in the two mile.

Smith, however, was not up to the form he displayed in winning Friday's 220, scoring his only points in the two mile, in which he finished third.

Janet Milne, Saranac Lake skating queen, led the women's senior division with 90 points, which, like Ronchetti's lead in the men's group, apparently had clinched the title for her. She needs only a third place in tomorrow's mile to win the championship.

Mrs. Dyer Drops Behind.

Today Miss Milne won the 440 and placed second to Mrs. Eleanor Thiel Dyer, also a former Chicago Silver Skates champion, in the half mile. Mrs. Dyer might have won the 440 had she not skated out of the lane on the home stretch. Miss Milne, a yard behind Mrs. Dyer, closed strong to win. Mrs. Dyer failed to place as the result of her mishap.

Edna Hanley of Staten Island, N. Y., was second in the point standings with 60. Helen Bahill of Elmhurst, N. Y., was third with 50. Mrs. Dyer had 40 points.

Pick 20 Golden Gloves Teams During Week

will come the champions from the south side. The south side sectional meet opens in White City on Tuesday night.

If the number of entries was all that counted, then the Kansas City Star team surely would carry away the out of town team trophy this year. An army of 3,500 boys from throughout the southwest fought for places on the Kansas City team, which of necessity must be a strong one.

Numbers Not Always a Guarantee.

Mere numbers of competitors do not always win team championships, however. Two athletes from Creighton university—Paul Hartnek and Carl Vinciquerra—once accounted for an out of town team trophy for the Omaha World-Herald. Joe Louis and a couple of assistants won it on another occasion for the Detroit Free Press.

From out of the Davenport Times tournament, which had only slightly more than 300 entries, there came one team that captured a championship, taking it away from cities whose original entry lists were five times as large.

The vast territory represented in the Tournament of Champions this year has been so thoroughly covered that many believe any team that can produce two champions and possibly a runner-up will take the out of town team honors.

Over the Counter Sales Tomorrow.

Over the counter ticket sales for the Tournament of Champions on Feb. 28 and March 1 and 2 and for the finals on March 11 will start at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. South Bend Prep Swim Team Beats Huntington 'Y'

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—South Bend Central's swimmers defeated the Huntington Y. M. C. A. team, 42 to 24, here today. Central captured six of the eight events, and slammed the 100 yard free style event. Huntington won the state Y. M. C. A. title last year. It was Central's seventh triumph in nine dual meets this season.

Snead Plays Demaret in Coast Final

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., one of the longest hitters in golf, and Jimmy Demaret, 27 year old Texas P. G. A. champion from Houston, will meet tomorrow in the 36 hole finals of the $5,000 San Francisco match play open golf tournament. The winner will receive $1,000.

Snead eliminated Tony Penna of Dayton, 2 and 1, in the semi-finals while Demaret moved easily through his match with Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa. The score was 4 and 3 and Picard was behind from the first hole.

Demaret Scores Upset.

Demaret's victory was an upset. After beating Emil Mashie of Fitchburg, Mass., 2 and 1, in the quarter-finals this morning, he was expected to fall before Picard. But Demaret played the steadier golf to hold a 2 up lead at the ninth, and a par 3 on the 11th and a birdie 2 on the 13th gave him the 4 up margin which eventually decided the match.

Snead, after swamping Craig Wood of Rumson, N. J., 6 and 5, in the quarter-finals, had a tough fight with Penna, the little Dayton pro sinking difficult putts to halve the 8th and 9th holes and holding the match even. Penna was out in par 36, against Snead's 37.

Snead Wins Three Straight.

Snead piled up his winning margin by winning the 13th, 14th, and 15th holes. He lost the 16th on a poor putt, then halved the 17th in bogey 5 for victory.

Lawson Little, who was favored to successfully defend his title, was eliminated in the quarter finals by Penna, 1 up. Both Penna and Little shot subpar golf, the finest of the tournament thus far. Penna had a 33—35—68; Little, 36—33—69.

GERMAIN GLIDDEN ADVANCES IN U. S. SQUASH MEET

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Germain G. Glidden of New York, the defending champion, and two former title holders advanced to the quarter-finals of the national squash racquets tournament today.

The two former champions, Donald Strachan and Neal Sullivan, both of Philadelphia, had to extend themselves, however. Strachan defeated George Cookman of Yale, 15-9, 13-15, 15-7, and 15-11. Sullivan defeated Donald Frame of New York, 9-15, 15-12, 12-15, 75-13, and 15-10.

In the team matches today, Detroit defeated Washington 5-0, Pittsburgh defeated Connecticut 5-0, and Chicago defeated Buffalo 3-2. In the national singles preliminary round Leroy Weir, Detroit, defeated James Wright, Chicago, 15-5, 15-3, 15-10.

Merth with jumps of 65 and 67 feet, totaled 148.4 points to beat out Ray Ketner of the South St. Paul Winter Sports club, who had jumped 64 and 65 for a point total of 145.4.

First place in class B was awarded to Clint Dubois of the Aurora Ski club, Red Wing, who combined leaps of 67 and 68 feet for 149.3 points. Other winners included Ernest Severson of the Chippewa Valley Ski club, Eau Claire, Wis., third.

Ruud Brothers Dominate Central States Meet.

The touring Ruud brothers of Norway, Birger and Sigmund, have not changed their Chicago habits. They landed first and second places for the third time on a Chicagoland slide yesterday in the Central States ski jumping tournament in Soldiers' field. Birger won with leaps of 151 and 162 feet. Sigmund soared 141 and 155 feet.

Birger and Sigmund started their one-two custom six year sago at Cary, Ill., when they stopped en route to the Olympic winter games at Lake Placid, N. Y. Last month they returned to Cary and again Birger finished ahead of his older brother, soaring 168 and 172 feet. In yesterday's meet Birger received a point total of 156.10 and Sigmund, 151.30.

Kotlarek Finished Third.

George Kotlarek of Duluth, Minn., 1936 American champion, finished in third place with jumps of 142 and 157 feet. Walter Bietila, University of Wisconsin sophomore, was fourth, leaping 142 and 151 feet. Sverre Fredheim, St. Paul, Minn., defending Central States champion, took fifth place with jumps of 147 and 162 feet.

Several carloads of snow, imported from Escanaba, Mich., was packed solidly on the long slide and wooden hill erected over the south end of the lake front arena, but it melted in the warm temperatures and prevented any chances of record breaking jumps. Six thousand watched the jumping competition and ice skating acts which were held on a portable rink on the west side of the Stadium.

Osterman Class B Winner.

Tony Osterman of Ironwood, Mich., captured the class B championship with jumps of 134 and 144 feet. Walter Nelson, Strum, Wis., jumped 129 and 139 feet to take second place. Carl Olson, Minneapolis, Minn., soared 134 and 138 feet to take third place.

Jorgen Johansen, Rockford, Ill., veteran, was the only defending champion to retain his title. He leaped 141 and 121 in his two attempts to keep the senior title. Herbert Feddick, Duluth, Minn., won the class C championship, jumping 124 and 143 feet.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Felix Spatola's 6 year old Wise Prince and Elwood Sachsenmaier's unbeaten brown filly, Charlotte Girl, stretched their winning streaks to three straight today in capturing the feature events on the Hialeah park program.

Wise Prince, backed down to the favorite's position at $3.60 for $2, after Rollin' Home was scratched, came from behind in a stretch drive to take the six furlong Springfield handicap. Charlotte Girl displayed admirable speed and gameness in winning the Nursery stakes despite a poor start.

Wise Prince Wins.

Eddie Arcaro rated Wise Prince in third place until the field rounded into the stretch, with Maetall in front. As they headed home, Arcaro shot Wise Prince between Maetall and Preëminent and spurted to the front, finishing in 1:11. Wise Prince hit the tape three-quarters of a length over Dewitt Page's Maetall.

A crowd estimated at 15,000 saw Charlotte Girl, running under top weight of 119 pounds, complete the three furlongs of the Nursery stakes straightaway in 34 1-5 seconds to pay favorite players $4.60 for $2.

Sweet Patrice Second.

Although she swerved to the inside shortly after the break, a trait she had shown before, the daughter of Cohort-Virginella got up to win by three-quarters of a length from Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Sweet Patrice.

BATHING BEAUTY, TOO

Miami, Fla., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Miss Sonja Henie, who has been breaking boxoffice records in her ice carnival appearances, created a stir today when she arrived at the Hialeah race track. Her appearance with Promoter Mike Jacobs and Hugo Quist, and her mother and brother, caused such a commotion that Brig. Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt and Mrs. Vanderbilt, arriving at the same time, entered almost unnoticed.

Quite aside from the publicity which has attended Miss Henie's movie and skating activities, however, prime interest today centered on the slacks she was wearing. Because of these, she was denied admission to the track.

After some explanation it was made clear to Miss Henie that girls in slacks were not permitted in the clubhouse. Jacobs and Quist expostulated with no success, while the crowd gathered.

Then Joseph E. Widener rescued the party. He met the situation with the aid of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. P. A. B. Widener, and a long coat.

Thereafter Miss Henie confined herself to a box in the grandstand where she was the cynosure of all eyes.

GRAND NATIONAL CANDIDATE FALLS AT FENCE—DIES

LINGFIELD, England, Feb. 12.—(AP)—W. Nightingall's Silver Bow, a prominent candidate for the Grand National, collapsed and died after falling at the last fence in the Troytown handicap steeplechase today. The race was won by J. B. Snow's American owned Delachance, another well fancied candidate for the Aintree event March 25.

The death of Silver Bow is the third among entries for this year's Grand National. D. Hastings' Rathfriland died before weights were assigned, while Sir David Llewellyn's Ego, one of the better liked candidates, collapsed and died after a race Feb. 3.

SPORTIEST FISH? SAILFISH AND TARPON A DRAW

Both Are Fighters and Florida Favorites.

BY BOB BECKER.

A rival of the high jumping tarpon for the title of the most popular game fish in Florida waters, the sailfish is the attraction for thousands of salt water anglers who go south at this season of the year. It's difficult to decide which fish is the sportiest. Fishermen will argue long into the night about the relative sporting qualities of the two. Both are game, spectacular fighters, and always will have a niche in the fisherman's hall of fame.

The sailfish usually comes to the surface when hooked so any angler is bound to see a lot of fireworks when he gets one on his line. We once counted the jumps of a fish we caught in the Gulf Stream off the Florida keys. It was a medium sized specimen that wouldn't stay down. Before it gave up this fish jumped 22 times.

Others Like the Tarpon.

One school of salt water fishermen will insist that as a jumper the sailfish is an amateur compared with the silvery tarpon of southern waters, because the latter hurls himself out of the ocean and does a couple of somersaults before he comes back to the briny deep. One has to admit the acrobatic ability of the tarpon. But the way a sailfish comes to the surface, apparently stands on its tail and shakes its purplish, flat body in the bright Florida sun is a real picture . . . one that the beginner at the sailfish game never forgets.

The sailfish uses its sword or bill to stun its prey, a fact that the angler has to keep in mind. This calls for a certain procedure in hook setting. The point is that the sailfish strikes a small fish, stuns it, and then seizes it before the fish has had a chance to recover.

Lets Line Run Out.

Therefore when a sailfish comes up behind the moving boat to strike the cut bait lure the angler does not strike it immediately. He lets the sailfish take the cut bait lure until several feet of line has run out, which leads the fish to believe that it has disabled or killed its prey and may swallow it. Then the angler sets the hook.

When we fished for sailfish we had about 30 feet of line coiled in front of us—the amount that the striking fish could take on his run. Some boat captains have some of the fisherman's line stripped off the reel and so tied in the boat that when a sailfish strikes the lure this line is automatically released. When it tightens up the fisherman sets the hook.

MOTORS—TRAFIC—HIGHWAYS

VOICE OF TRAFIC

A TRUCKER'S OPINION.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—I read an article the other day in which railroad unions advocated before a state legislative commission that additional taxes and strict regulations be imposed upon trucks. They no doubt contended that this would boost the cost of highway transportation and favorably switch freight shipments to the rails.

Truckers have to contend with a dozen different taxes now, including the gasoline tax, mileage tax, weight tax, state and city licenses, registration fees, and many other expenses.

Dennis McCarthy, chairman of the Locomotive, Firemen, and Enginemen Brotherhood of Illinois, states that "it is not fair for trucks without regulation to compete with railroads with regulations. Trucks should be made to pay additional taxes that will cover the cost of their use of the public roads."

The present taxes imposed upon these trucks are more than sufficient to pay for the roads these vehicles travel on. If anybody pays for our state highways one can safely say the truckers more than foot the bills. After all, that's all one can expect of them.

The public is also fully protected with liability and cargo insurance. Mr. McCarthy also stated, "the rolling equipment should be subjected to periodical mechanical inspection." In most of the cities of Illinois vehicles are subject to a periodic mechanical inspection besides the different equipment they must carry and use.

Highway trucks in order to operate within the state laws have a number of regulations by which they must abide. They must carry flares, torches, flags, lights of different sorts must be affixed to the truck and their vehicles must be limited to certain dimensions.

I don't understand how Mr. McCarthy figures trucks operate without regulations, and I think truckers pay more than their share for the use of the public highway, which is fair enough.

BAD DRIVERS IN GOOD CARS.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—I see a plan is proposed by the treasurer of a large motor sales agency, which would in effect place a ban on all automobiles if they are 7 years old or older. This plan, as he says, would take the unsafe car off the streets. All this in my opinion is more blah.

If this motor car sales official will note the number of late model cars involved in accidents he will see that the evil does not exist in the age of the car. A very strict driver's license law will eliminate to a great extent motor car accidents. But let's get down to cases and see what is causing all this trouble.

It can be directly traced to the motor car industry in its mad race for more speed than the other fellow. It is a known fact that manufacturers are trying to outdo each other in speed, pickup, etc. We all have been with drivers who exclaim, Boy! O, Boy! this new car is a honey, she does fifty before you know it and rides like twenty. There is our answer to the problem.

CHRISTIAN T. SLOIR JR.

HOLY SMOKES!

Oak Park, Ill., Feb. 10.—Being compelled to risk broken springs and necks while dodging holes in some of Chicago's better thoroughfares is annoying, but I find it much more irksome when pedestrians pop out of these craters and make a mad dash for the curb. It is my honest belief that these unfortunates who find themselves trapped thus should wave a white flag before emerging from their dugout. So many people have idled away time in one cavity on South Halsted street that an enterprising young man is building a refreshment stand in a quiet corner of this busy hole in the ground.

INCREASE RED CROSS HIGHWAY AID STATIONS

BY HAL FOUST.

The American Red Cross has recently added to the number of its highway first aid stations, making a total of twenty-nine in the metropolitan area. James B. Forgan, chairman of the Chicago chapter, said that plans call for fifty of these in Lake, Cook, and Du Page counties.

This is part of a national movement to reduce mortalities from highway accidents. Throughout the country, there are 3,400 stations, each with its signs posted on the roadside, incidentally serving as reminders of the possible penalty for carelessness.

Established in Existing Buildings.

The first aid stations are established in buildings already existing, such as filling stations, and are manned by voluntary aids. No tips or fees are permissible. The Red Cross trains the volunteers in first aid treatment and supplies bandages, splints, sterilizing agents, and other equipment, which it replenishes as needed. One man devotes his entire time to checking the work done and the need for fresh supplies, sees that requirements are met and some one on duty at all times.

No competition to the medical profession results, as only first aid treatment is given. A list of reputable physicians who may be called at any time is hung close to a telephone in each station, and calls on them are rotated to prevent discrimination. Victims pay for services supplied by physicians, hospitals, and ambulances.

131 Cases Treated in Year.

From Jan. 1, 1937, to Jan. 1, 1938, cases treated in Red Cross first aid in this area totaled 131. Stations averaged twenty-two in number for this year. The area now includes 5,000 square miles, in Cook county, Du Page county and the southern half of Lake county.

The Evanston station, in the police department headquarters, handled the largest amount of cases during the year. On July 2, in a Chicago and North Western railway accident at Davis street, a total of fifty-three persons were given first aid, records show.

DISPLAY 66 NEW CAR MODELS IN MOTOR SALON

The fifteenth annual motor salon—automobile show conducted annually by north side automobile dealers—was opened yesterday in the Edgewater Beach hotel and will continue through next Sunday. Sixty-six sleek 1938 models—the latest offerings of the automobile industry—will be on display from early in the morning until late at night daily.

Curtis M. Betts, chairman of the show committee, said the display is the largest showing of automobiles ever made on the north side.

The show occupies the entire exhibition space on the first floor of the Edgewater Beach hotel and will include the north and south rooms, the east and west lounges, and the passagio—the connecting hallway between the two Edgewater Beach units. There is no admission charge.

Makes on display include Buick, Cadillac, La Salle, Chevrolet, Chrysler, Plymouth, Dodge, De Soto, Ford, Graham, Lincoln, and Lincoln Zephyr, Nash, and La Fayette, Oldsmobile, Packard, Pontiac, Studebaker, and Willys.

At a meeting held in connection with the show, Howard F. Ilgner, Milwaukee trafic expert, tomorrow will tell how Milwaukee achieved the record for being the safest large city in the country in 1937.

Chicago, Canadian Stars Will Take Part.

The Chicago Arena will be the mecca for skaters from California, Canada, Chicago, and other points when the Chicago Figure Skating club holds its seventh ice carnival on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. In a setting of snow-covered mountains and forests the skating stars and champions of ice clubs in the United States and Canada will perform spins, jumps, and novelty numbers.

Not only Chicago's best but Canada's best skaters will appear. The latter contingent includes both men and women champions. Nate Walley, world's professional champion, will appear in a special routine of jumps and spins. Walley spends his winters at the Granite club in Toronto, Ont., as professional at that club and his summers in either Australia or Europe.

Appears with Sextet.

Eleanor O'Meara, present Canadian senior champion, will skate the free style which brought her the title recently in the dominion's competition in Winnipeg, Manitoba. She will also appear as a member of the internationally famous Granite club sextet.

Dorothy Caley, who defeated Miss O'Meara last year but had to be content with runner-up honors this year, will skate a single number, a pair with her sister Hazel, and also skate in the sextet. Eleanor Wilson, former Canadian junior champion, is another of the sextet, along with Cecil Smith Gooderham and Maude Smith McDougald.

Miss Gooderham is not only a former Canadian senior champion and Olympic representative but also runner-up for the world title. She is the director of the sextet and the producer of the Snow Ballet held each year by the Granite club and the Skating Club of Toronto.

Chicago stars will include Robin Lee, three times United States champion; Nancy Meyer, daughter of Dr. Karl Meyer of the County hospital; 9 year old Joan Yocum, the Mitchell sisters, Ruth English and Louis Pitts, and Norval Baptie and Gladys Lamb.

Lee a Star for Five Years.

Lee is just 18 years old, but has been a star for the last five years. He first came into national prominence by winning the United States junior title and for the last three years has been tops as a senior. Lee was one of the youngest members of the United States Olympic team and made a fine showing in the world championship events in Paris in 1936.

Mr. Baptie and Miss Lamb have skated together since 1915. They are the producers of the carnival. Mr. Baptie is one of the few skaters who has been at the top in both speed and figure skating. Nine of his world speed records still stand

Group Skating Numbers.

Group skating events will demonstrate the skill of the club skaters. Juvenile girls will offer a colorful military number and boys will go bear hunting on skates. A ballet of twelve junior girls also is on the program.

The first night of the carnival will be a benefit for the Travelers' Aid society.

Favorites to win the long race are Art Hartsfeld of Toledo, winner of two of the last three features; Duke Nalon of Chicago, winner in the last 100 lap race; Marshall Lewis of Los Angeles, current point champion, and such capable drivers as Harry MacQuinn, Shorty Sorenson, Cowboy O'Rourke, Ray Richards, and Harry Lewis.

The drivers who fail to qualify for the long race will face the starter in a twenty lap consolation race. Because the entry list is the longest of the season, the consolation race is expected to be fought out among drivers who, under ordinary racing conditions, would be in the main event.

Mize returned two contracts unsigned, demanding a substantial boost over his 1937 salary. The Demorest, Ga., star was second only to Joe Medwick, Cardinal left fielder, in the National league's batting averages last season.

Medwick and Dizzy Dean remain as holdouts. Other big guns of the club—Lon Warneke and Pepper Martin—signed several weeks ago.

Scoring Lead May Change in Arena Hocky

Interest in the Arena Hocky league reaches a new high this afternoon with scoring honors at stake in the double bill. The C. Y. O. Shamrocks meet Whiting and Waukegan faces the Chicago Hornets in the two games.

Eddie Janelle, Waukegan Rocket star, still leads in the scoring records, but Bill Savela of the Shamrocks and Ack Teevin of Waukegan are close enough to overtake him. While the team standings are likely to change for second place if Waukegan defeats the Hornets, the C. Y. O. players are safely holding the lead.

The Shamrocks seek revenge for their only defeat of the season, which was accomplished by Whiting, 3 to 2. Whiting is trailing the league, but with the aid of Donnie McFadyen, who coached them to victory once over the Shamrocks may turn in the second upset of the season. The Shamrock-Whiting game starts the program at 2:15 p. m.

FRANCE TO ISSUE STAND SOON ON OLYMPIC GAMES

PARIS, Feb. 12.—[U. P.]—French Olympic authorities announced today that they soon would decide whether to favor or oppose holding the 1940 Olympic games in Tokio.

Indications that British empire nations might oppose holding the games in Japan because of unsettled conditions were expected to influence French opinion.

It was pointed out that if the games were removed from Tokio there might be no Olympics held in 1940 because of insufficient time for organization.

Gill Bowlers Roll 3,323 for Gold Coast League Record

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

When the Joseph L. Gill bowling team shot a game of 1,062 in the Gold Coast Major league, the boys were merely warming up for bigger and better figures. Their next effort brought a game of 1,102 and before the evening was over they had marked up a count of 1,158, all of which produced a season record of 3,323.

During this heavy bombardment, George Notz whizzed in strike after strike and totaled 769, another league mark for the season. Notz's games were 233, 258, and 278.

All other members of the Gill quintet shot better than 600, with Joe Puccinelli having 620, Ray Leick 653, Joe Sinke 672, and Lloyd Strouse 609.

A. B. C. DRAWS 4,953 TEAMS; IT'S A RECORD

Elmer Baumgarten, secretary of the American Bowling congress, whose headquarters are in Milwaukee, yesterday notified the Chicago tournament committee, which is sponsoring the 38th annual A. B. C. tournament in the Coliseum, that 4,953 five man teams—24,765 individuals—have been accepted.

The huge entry represents bowlers from 700 cities in the United States, Canada, and the Hawaiian Islands. They will shoot for nearly $300,000 in prize money.

Because of the large entry the tournament, which will open March 3, was extended one week until April 18. Due to the many late entries received when the lists closed on Feb. 1, it was decided yesterday to add another day, so that there now will be 48 days of competition ending on April 19.

4 EIGHT ROUND BOUTS LISTED FOR MARIGOLD

Four bouts of eight rounds each will start this week's boxing parade in Marigold Gardens. The show, which will be presented tomorrow, includes matches between Tommy Howell and Larry Greb, Billy Marquart and Roger Bernard, Everett Simington and Lloyd Pine, and Dominic Manceni and Wesley Martin.

Howell, who won the Danville, Ill., sectional Golden Gloves lightweight title three years ago, will be in quest of his fourth straight triumph since placing himself under the management of Benny Ray a few weeks ago. Tommy, who will be 23 years old on July 31, is a resident of Grape Creek, a country mining town six miles south of Danville. He worked in the coal mines there from 1931 to 1935.

It is by this work young Howell acquired his unusual strength and hard punching powers. In addition to winning a Golden Gloves title, he won the amateur championship of Florida in 1935. He started fighting as an amateur in 1933. During that span he had 105 scraps, winning all except three.

Tommy then turned professional in 1936, scoring twenty-one consecutive victories before losing to Harold Brown. Since his pro debut he has engaged in thirty-two fights, winning twenty-eight, fighting one draw, and losing three.

SUIT REVEALS INDIANS PAID BOUDREAU $1,500

Louis Boudreau, University of Illinois basketball captain who is now under suspension for professionalism, received $1,500 from the Cleveland Indians in return for his agreement to join that club after his graduation. This was brought out yesterday in Superior court where the athlete's mother, Mrs. Birdie Trentacosti, is suing for a divorce from her second husband, Joseph Trentacosti.

In further testimony it was stated that the money did not go to her, as had been originally supposed, but to Boudreau himself. One thousand dollars was deposited in the athlete's bank account and $500 went toward the purchase of an automobile. The payments had been received in monthly instalments which were cut off when Boudreau announced that he had canceled his agreement with the Indians.

SALES, PROFITS OF OLIVER FARM EQUIPMENT RISE

Illinois Brick Has Larger Loss.

The Oliver Farm Equipment company in its annual report yesterday showed increases for 1937 of 39 per cent in sales and 80 per cent in net profit compared with 1936 results. The Illinois Brick company showed a larger loss for 1937 than in 1936.

Net profit of the Oliver Farm Equipment company last year amounted to $2,182,763, or $6.44 a share, on 339,196 common shares, compared with 1936 profit of $1,158,640, or $4.24 a share on 272,074 shares. During the year the company sold 67,126 shares of common stock, the proceeds of which were used to retire bank loans and buy machinery and equipment.

Farmers' Position Improved.

"The favorable results of 1937," C. R. Messinger, chairman, said in the annual report, "reflect the improved economic position of agriculture. Volume of sales continued upward until November and December, when a lower trend was evidenced. The market for the company's products during 1938 should continue to be reasonably good, although mixed and indeterminable factors present at this time do not permit reliable forecasting of profit possibilities."

Sales in 1937 totaled $26,206,911, compared with $18,808,804 in 1936 and a low of $4,506,696 in 1932. Last year's volume was second only to peak sales of $27,438,000 in 1929. Inventories during 1937 increased to $10,992,937.

Illinois Brick Has Loss.

"The first half of 1937," said William Schlake, chairman, "gave promise of a demand for brick substantially exceeding that of 1936, but in the latter half of the year the building volume dropped to the extent that shipments for the entire year exceeded those of the year previous by only 10 per cent. The general recession in business had its immediate effect on building operations."

Citrus Fruit Shippers Fight Prorating Plan

As the hearing progresses shipments have been gradually stepped up to within striking distance of the level at the time prorating went into effect two weeks ago. When the hearing was announced by Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace shippers accepted it as suspending the penalty provision of the prorating order. At present 100 to 110 carloads are being rolled daily, as against 120 to 130 cars a day before prorating went into effect. Shipments reached a low of 70 to 80 cars a day immediately after control started.

Florida Shipments Rise.

At the same time there has been an increase in Florida shipments of grapefruit from an average of forty-five cars a day to around sixty cars. Independents contend prorating in Texas without similar control in Florida will result in this condition.

Five of the fourteen independent shippers who originally petitioned for the hearing have withdrawn from the case. One gave as a reason that the concern has changed owners. The other four gave no reason.

The others argued that the prorating order is illegal because it discriminates against them in favor of competitors, that it amounts to confiscation of their property, and otherwise violates the fifth amendment to the constitution. Hearings end Monday.

Believed Blow to Plan.

Observers believe a serious blow to indorsement of the prorating order has been struck in granting the hearing and lifting the penalty clause of the marketing act until a decision is made by Secretary Wallace, to whom information gathered at the hearing will be forwarded.

It was pointed out that there has been a substantial increase in the movement of citrus fruit by truck to cities along the northern border of this state. At present there is no volume control on movement of fruit within the state's borders, and the possibility of crossing the fruit from some borderline city into another state is recognized.

CHICAGO PRICES LOW.

Restrictions imposed on the shipment of grapefruit from Texas under the producers' prorating program has had little effect on prices in the Chicago market, a survey showed yesterday. Chicago consumers are getting grapefruit for as little as 3 cents a piece.

Texas grapefruit were quoted in the Chicago wholesale market Friday at an average price of $1.83 a box compared with an average of $2.01 at the beginning of the week. Grapefruit in largest demand in the retail market runs 64 to 80 to a box.

Low prices for grapefruit and oranges are due to the big crops moving to market. The bumper apple crop harvested last year has helped to hold down prices by providing competition for the citrus fruits, distributors said.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

A canvass yesterday of Chicago mortgage bankers disclosed little enthusiasm for the new 90 per cent government insured mortgage loans by which the national administration hopes to generate a building revival.

The mortgage men confessed ignorance as to the manner in which the new loans will be handled. They have been unable to obtain sufficient information on which to formulate a policy. The Chicago office of the federal Housing administration has not received complete written regulations for handling the new type loans.

Word was received from Washington several days ago that the 1 per cent service charge, which lending agencies were permitted to charge under the old FHA mortgage loans, has been eliminated by the new regulations.

Profit Incentive Uncertain.

"It would appear the incentive which would make a banker handle the federal loans has been removed," one mortgage company official said. "However, we are not sure that the elimination of the service charge means just what it suggests. Perhaps some other provision has been made which will permit the lending agency to make a reasonable profit for handling the loans. We cannot formulate a policy until we have more information."

The new housing legislation provides that the FHA shall insure mortgage loans on new homes up to 2 billion dollars. Instead of a 20 per cent down payment required under the original act, the new loans on houses costing $6,000 or less may be made with a down payment of 10 per cent [$600 on a $6,000 home]. It provides further for a reduction in maximum carrying charge from 6.24 to 5½ per cent. The maturity is extended from 20 to 25 years.

Banker Acts as Broker.

The mortgage banker acts merely as a broker in handling the loans. He purchases the mortgage for resale to insurance companies, other institutions or individual investors, continuing as service agent for the mortgage. The mortgage banker's profit comes either on his resale price to the investor or the service charge he is permitted to collect over the life of the mortgage.

With elimination of the service charge it is possible that large institutional investors may discount the mortgages, giving the mortgage firm a profit in this manner. It is uncertain, however, how much private capital will be attracted to the new mortgage loans.

To get the construction program underway, RFC Chairman Jesse H. Jones, at the direction of President Roosevelt, last week set up a new agency, the National Mortgage association, which will buy up mortgages issued under the new housing act.

USE OF CHECKS DIPS SHARPLY IN LAST WEEK

Commercial activity in the Chicago federal reserve district, as measured by bank checks cashed, declined sharply in the week ended last Wednesday.

Debits to individual deposit accounts reported by banks in the forty-one principal cities of the district totaled $861,385,000 for the week, compared with $1,103,173,000 in the preceding week, a decrease of 21.9 per cent.

Chicago bank clearings were:

New Grocery Chain Enters Chicago Field

BY AL CHASE.

Entry into the Chicago area of a new chain of modern grocery stores, with the establishment of at least fifty units as the goal for 1938, was announced yesterday by Walter J. Roney, former vice president of the Consumers Sanitary Coffee and Butter Stores. Roney is a son of J. R. Roney, founder and president of the 350 Consumers stores which were sold to the Kroger Grocery and Baking company in 1929 for several million dollars.

Walter J. Roney.

Since that time Walter J. Roney was associated with the Kroger concern until January 1, 1938, when he resigned to start his new grocery chain venture. It is known as High-Low Foods, Inc.

According to Thomas M. Reade, who represents the High-Low Foods, Inc., in site leasing, store No. 1 has been opened at 2452 East 79th street. Stores Nos. 2 and 3 will be opened shortly at 1316 East 55th street and 8309 South Racine avenue. Negotiations for six new locations are nearing completion, Reade said. The company's offices and warehouse are in its own building at 4343 Cottage Grove avenue.

According to Reade the High-Low stores will have several new merchandising features.

Deeds.

The nature and significance of deeds cause confusion to persons infrequently engaged in real estate transactions. Actually, a deed is nothing more than the written document which transfers ownership of real estate from one person to another. This definition is very broad, however, as there are a number of different types of deeds.

In general, the essential parts of deeds include the date, names of persons involved, description of the property, consideration, a statement as to whether all or only part of the property is being transferred, a statement as to whether the transfer is permanent or for a specified period, such as for the life of an individual, and a statement of other special considerations, if any.

Deeds also should state whether or not the property is free from all claims or restrictions. If there are mortgages against the property, the nature and terms of each mortgage should be explained. If there are other claims, these also should be explained.

Among the well known types of deeds are trust, warranty, bargain and sale, and quitclaim.

Tomorrow: Encumbrances.

PERHAPS "SMALL BUSINESS" CONCERNS who think the Government ought to "do something" SHOULD LEARN WHAT A FACTOR* IS!

When a concern is limited in its growth by lack of working capital—and perhaps yours is like that—what, under today's conditions, can it do? Short term loans are often a strain. A new stock issue or moneyed partner may be impossible or undesirable. Government "help" as now clamored for may never come ... and perhaps would be no blessing. Yet a solution does exist ... and that solution is offered by ... the "FACTOR."

*"Factoring"—a business many generations old—is today's timely answer to concerns suffering from limited capital ... yet too few know such an agency exists.

The FACTOR'S business is to give you cash for your sales on the day of shipment ... relieving you of risk from credit losses ... still allowing you to sell on your present terms. Thus your working capital is increased to take care of expanding volume or more profitable purchasing and operation ... yet you are left "owing" nothing! More and more concerns are depending on the FACTOR for the solution of their working capital problems.

• An article by a disinterested economist on "Factoring"—appearing currently in a National Business Journal, will be sent on request to manufacturers, jobbers of distributors with sales of $100,000 or more ... quite without obligation

Investors' Guide

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

[Copyright: 1938: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Income Tax—1.

Investors' Guide is receiving a large number of inquiries on income tax problems as the time approaches for filing returns on 1937 income with the collector of internal revenue. Although a number of questions have been answered in this column, a few general comments may be helpful.

Single persons with a net income of $1,000 or more or a gross income of $5,000 or more must file income tax returns. In the case of married couples, returns must be filed if the net income is $2,500 or more, or the gross income $5,000 or more. To be absolutely safe any single person receiving $1,000 during a calendar year or any married persons receiving $2,500 should determine whether it is subject to tax. Net income is total income less exemptions.

Returns must be filed with the collector of internal revenue in the district where the taxpayer resides or is employed. March 15 is the deadline for filing returns. Proper forms for filing returns may be obtained from the collector of internal revenue. These forms contain instructions.

The average investor who holds a few shares of stock or a few bonds will not be much concerned with the changes in income tax laws made in the revenue act of 1937. The 1937 act merely amended a few provisions in the 1936 act and added a few others, most of which concern big investors.

Of some interest to the little fellow are provisions regarding exemptions for estates and trusts. The 1937 act retains the general rule that a personal exemption of $1,000 is granted an estate or trust in computing income tax. However, under the new act the personal exemption is withdrawn if the trust requires or permits accumulation of any portion of the trust income and there is not distributed an amount equal to net income. The new law does not require the trust or estate to include in net income certain gross income items that cannot be lawfully distributed.

The 1937 act again makes taxpayers subject to normal income tax on all dividends received. In general, all dividends whether in cash or stock are subject to the tax except in the case of dividends paid in stock of the same class as that already owned.

FOREIGN GRAIN MARKETS WEAK; TRADING QUIET

All U. S. Exchanges Take Holiday.

With American markets closed yesterday, trading in grain futures abroad was almost at a standstill. Prices declined moderately due more to lack of support than to aggressive selling.

A decline of ⅛ to ⅝ cent a bushel in Liverpool wheat futures had a depressing effect on the Winnipeg market, where the old crop months were ½ cent a bushel lower, and the October contract, which represents the new crop, closed 1⅛ cent lower. Part of the selling of the latter contract was based on reports of beneficial moisture in southern part of the province of Saskatchewan.

Although Germany was said to have purchased 500,000 bushels of Argentine wheat, the Buenos Aires market closed ¼ to ⅜ cent a bushel lower.

Drouth Continues in West.

No rain was reported in the dry sections of the American winter wheat belt, which tended to restrict selling pressure in the Winnipeg market. The weather bureau in its long range forecast indicated some precipitation during the current week in all sections of the wheat belt with the possible exception of Kansas.

Soaking rains have fallen in the last few days on the North Pacific coast, and crop comments on wheat from that area indicated the growing grain was in good condition.

A Winnipeg report to J. E. Bennett & Co. yesterday indicated some American white Pacific coast wheat has been sold for export, but no interest was shown in Canadian grain.

Hogs Rescue Farmer from Heavy Losses

Producing meat for consumers at the low level of prices prevailing during the last few months has not proved a profitable enterprise for the average corn belt farm, a study disclosed yesterday. Heavy financial losses have been incurred on many cattle and sheep farms where feed lots were filled with animals from the range last fall at high initial costs.

The abundance of cheap feed helped some to cushion the drop in prices for fat stock, but this did not entirely offset the high cost of the stock going into the feed lots. Except for hogs, many cattle feeders admit they would have had a difficult time riding out the rough markets for their beef animals.

Swine this winter have justified the title of "mortgage lifter." Hogs have kept many of the big cattle herds in the corn belt out of the "red."

Hog "First Cost" Low.

Hog raisers do not have a high "first cost" to get back before they can show a profit. Most hogs are produced in the corn belt. They were raised economically over the summer on mostly pasture and oats, and some commercial feeds until new corn was ready for feeding. Consequently, producers say hogs are profitable even since the sharp break in prices from the high point of last summer. The corn hog ratio is more favorable for the farmer than it has been in most winters.

Hogs Higher Again.

Another upturn of 10 cents was made in last week's hog average, the third consecutive week that prices have advanced. There was a slight setback at the close of the week, however, with final sales 15 cents lower to 15 cents higher than a week earlier.

Cattle prices also worked higher during the week on light receipts. Final steer sales were up 25 to 40 cents. Cows, hefers and calves closed 25 to 50 cents higher. Lambs also recovered from the recent lows, closing 15 to 25 cents higher for the week. Old sheep gained 25 to 40 cents.

BUSINESS SLUMP HALTS; SIGNS OF RECOVERY FEW

Uncertainty Delays Plans for Future.

Although the business declines, as measured by most major indices, were halted last week, few encouraging signs for a sustained upturn were reported.

Business men who a few weeks ago had hoped that out of the Washington conferences with business leaders would come a basis for cooperative action by business and government, last week were resigned to a further period of uncertainty and continued to delay commitments.

A slight advance in leading business barometers, including steel activity, retail trade, car loadings, and automobile production, was recorded over the preceding week, but these indices were substantially below the levels of a year ago.

Steel Output Better.

Steel activity was scheduled last week at 30.7 per cent of theoretical capacity, compared with 30.5 per cent the week before and 80.6 per cent a year ago. Engineering construction awards rose 66 per cent above a year ago but were 23 per cent less than in the preceding week.

Although stock prices made a moderate advance for the week, brokers continued to lament the small trading volume, which averaged less than 700,000 shares a day on the New York Stock exchange for the week and reached a three year low of 387,000 shares on Friday.

Steel Wage Pact Extended.

Concern on the labor front was reduced by the announcement that the United States Steel corporation had extended indefinitly its working agreement with the Steel Workers' Organizing committee, a unit of the Committee for Industrial Organization. The pact signed last week provided for the continuance of the present scale of wages and hours, with the stipulation that new negotiations could be opened on ten days' notice.

Another steel development was a cut by the entire industry of $4 a ton to $71.60 in the base price of cold rolled sheet steel.

In the automobile industry, reports that used car sales, which began a pickup in January, had continued the advance this month, were responsible for improved sentiment among automobile makers.

The possibility that the railroads may soon be in a position to put out funds for needed purchases and improvements strengthened last week with the conclusion of the interstate commerce commission hearings on the 15 per cent freight rate increase which the carriers are seeking.

INDUSTRY INDEX RISES

New York, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Industrial activity turned up this week for the second time since the recession started last summer. The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index rose to 70.4 per cent of the 1929-'30 average from 70.2 last week.

SALES, PROFITS OF OLIVER FARM EQUIPMENT RISE

Illinois Brick Has Larger Loss.

The Oliver Farm Equipment company in its annual report yesterday showed increases for 1937 of 39 per cent in sales and 80 per cent in net profit compared with 1936 results. The Illinois Brick company showed a larger loss for 1937 than in 1936.

Net profit of the Oliver Farm Equipment company last year amounted to $2,182,763, or $6.44 a share, on 339,196 common shares, compared with 1936 profit of $1,158,640, or $4.24 a share on 272,074 shares. During the year the company sold 67,126 shares of common stock, the proceeds of which were used to retire bank loans and buy machinery and equipment.

Farmers' Position Improved.

"The favorable results of 1937," C. R. Messinger, chairman, said in the annual report, "reflect the improved economic position of agriculture. Volume of sales continued upward until November and December, when a lower trend was evidenced. The market for the company's products during 1938 should continue to be reasonably good, although mixed and indeterminable factors present at this time do not permit reliable forecasting of profit possibilities."

Sales in 1937 totaled $26,206,911, compared with $18,808,804 in 1936 and a low of $4,506,696 in 1932. Last year's volume was second only to peak sales of $27,438,000 in 1929. Inventories during 1937 increased to $10,992,937.

Illinois Brick Has Loss.

The Illinois Brick company reported a net loss for 1937, before depletion, of $248,305, against a 1936 net loss of $199,974.

"The first half of 1937," said William Schlake, chairman, "gave promise of a demand for brick substantially exceeding that of 1936, but in the latter half of the year the building volume dropped to the extent that shipments for the entire year exceeded those of the year previous by only 10 per cent. The general recession in business had its immediate effect on building operations."

Citrus Fruit Shippers Fight Prorating Plan

As the hearing progresses shipments have been gradually stepped up to within striking distance of the level at the time prorating went into effect two weeks ago. When the hearing was announced by Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace shippers accepted it as suspending the penalty provision of the prorating order. At present 100 to 110 carloads are being rolled daily, as against 120 to 130 cars a day before prorating went into effect. Shipments reached a low of 70 to 80 cars a day immediately after control started.

Florida Shipments Rise.

At the same time there has been an increase in Florida shipments of grapefruit from an average of forty-five cars a day to around sixty cars. Independents contend prorating in Texas without similar control in Florida will result in this condition.

Five of the fourteen independent shippers who originally petitioned for the hearing have withdrawn from the case. One gave as a reason that the concern has changed owners. The other four gave no reason.

The others argued that the prorating order is illegal because it discriminates against them in favor of competitors, that it amounts to confiscation of their property, and otherwise violates the fifth amendment to the constitution. Hearings end Monday.

Believed Blow to Plan.

Observers believe a serious blow to indorsement of the prorating order has been struck in granting the hearing and lifting the penalty clause of the marketing act until a decision is made by Secretary Wallace, to whom information gathered at the hearing will be forwarded.

It was pointed out that there has been a substantial increase in the movement of citrus fruit by truck to cities along the northern border of the state. At present there is no volume control on movement of fruit within the state's borders, and the possibility of crossing the fruit from some borderline city into another state is recognized.

CHICAGO PRICES LOW.

Restrictions imposed on the shipment of grapefruit from Texas under the producers' prorating program has had little effect on prices in the Chicago market, a survey showed yesterday. Chicago consumers are getting grapefruit for as little as 3 cents a piece.

Texas grapefruit were quoted in the Chicago wholesale market Friday at an average price of $1.83 a box compared with an average of $2.01 at the beginning of the week. Grapefruit in largest demand in the retail market runs 64 to 80 to a box.

Low prices for grapefruit and oranges are due to the big crops moving to market. The bumper apple crop harvested last year has helped to hold down prices by providing competition for the citrus fruits, distributors said.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

A canvass yesterday of Chicago mortgage bankers disclosed little enthusiasm for the new 90 per cent government insured mortgage loans by which the national administration hopes to generate a building revival.

The mortgage men confessed ignorance as to the manner in which the new loans will be handled. They have been unable to obtain sufficient information on which to formulate a policy. The Chicago office of the federal Housing administration has not received complete written regulations for handling the new type loans.

Word was received from Washington several days ago that the 1 per cent service charge, which lending agencies were permitted to charge under the old FHA mortgage loans, has been eliminated by the new regulations.

Profit Incentive Uncertain.

"It would appear the incentive which would make a banker handle the federal loans has been removed," one mortgage company official said. "However, we are not sure that the elimination of the service charge means just what it suggests. Perhaps some other provision has been made which will permit the lending agency to make a reasonable profit for handling the loans. We cannot formulate a policy until we have more information."

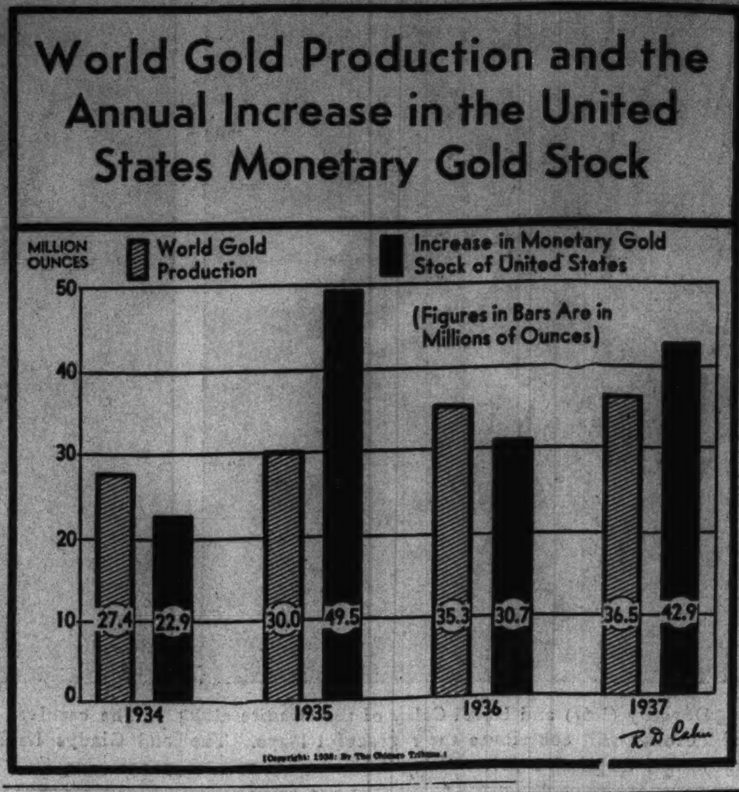
The new housing legislation provides that the FHA shall insure mortgage loans on new homes up to 2 billion dollars. Instead of a 20 per cent down payment required under the original act, the new loans on houses costing $6,000 or less may be made with a down payment of 10 per cent [$600 on a $6,000 home]. It provides further for a reduction in maximum carrying charge from 6.24 to 5½ per cent. The maturity is extended from 20 to 25 years.

Banker Acts as Broker.

The mortgage banker acts merely as a broker in handling the loans. He purchases the mortgage for resale to insurance companies, other institutions or individual investors, continuing as service agent for the mortgage. The mortgage banker's profit comes either on his resale price to the investor or the service charge he is permitted to collect over the life of the mortgage.

With elimination of the service charge it is possible that large institutional investors may discount the mortgages, giving the mortgage firm a profit in this manner. It is uncertain, however, how much private capital will be attracted to the new mortgage loans.

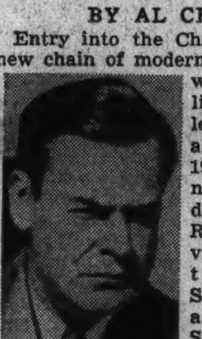
To get the construction program underway, RFC Chairman Jesse H. Jones, at the direction of President Roosevelt, last week set up a new agency, the National Mortgage association, which will buy up mortgages issued under the new housing act.



New Grocery Chain Enters Chicago Field

BY AL CHASE.

Entry into the Chicago area of a new chain of modern grocery stores, with the establishment of at least fifty units as the goal for 1938, was announced yesterday by Walter J. Roney, former vice president of the Consumers Sanitary Coffee and Butter Stores. Roney is a son of J. R. Roney, founder and president of the 350 Consumers stores which were sold to the Kroger Grocery and Baking company in 1929 for several million dollars.



Walter J. Roney.

Since that time Walter J. Roney was associated with the Kroger concern until January 1, 1938, when he resigned to start his new grocery chain venture. It is known as High-Low Foods, Inc.

According to Thomas M. Reade, who represents the High-Low Foods, Inc., in site leasing, store No. 1 has been opened at 2452 East 79th street. Stores Nos. 2 and 3 will be opened shortly at 1316 East 55th street and 8309 South Racine avenue. Negotiations for six new locations are nearing completion, Reade said. The company's offices and warehouse are in its own building at 4343 Cottage Grove avenue.

According to Reade the High-Low stores will have several new merchandising features.

Deeds.

The nature and significance of deeds cause confusion to persons infrequently engaged in real estate transactions. Actually, a deed is nothing more than the written document which transfers ownership of real estate from one person to another. This definition is very broad, however, as there are a number of different types of deeds.

In general, the essential parts of deeds include the date, names of persons involved, description of the property, consideration, a statement as to whether all or only part of the property is being transferred, a statement as to whether the transfer is permanent or for a specified period, such as for the life of an individual, and a statement of other special considerations, if any.

Deeds also should state whether or not the property is free from all claims or restrictions. If there are mortgages against the property, the nature and terms of each mortgage should be explained. If there are other claims, these also should be explained.

Among the well known types of deeds are trust, warranty, bargain and sale, and quitclaim.

Investors' Guide is receiving a large number of inquiries on income tax problems as the time approaches for filing returns on 1937 income with the collector of internal revenue. Although a number of questions have been answered in this column, a few general comments may be helpful.

Single persons with a net income of $1,000 or more or a gross income of $5,000 or more must file income tax returns. In the case of married couples, returns must be filed if the net income is $2,500 or more, or the gross income $5,000 or more. To be absolutely safe any single person receiving $1,000 during a calendar year or any married persons receiving $2,500 should determine whether it is subject to tax. Net income is total income less exemptions.

Returns must be filed with the collector of internal revenue in the district where the taxpayer resides or is employed. March 15 is the deadline for filing returns. Proper forms for filing returns may be obtained from the collector of internal revenue. These forms contain instructions.

The average investor who holds a few shares of stock or a few bonds will not be much concerned with the changes in income tax laws made in the revenue act of 1937. The 1937 act merely amended a few provisions in the 1936 act and added a few others, most of which concern big investors.

Of some interest to the little fellow are provisions regarding exemptions for estates and trusts. The 1937 act retains the general rule that a personal exemption of $1,000 is granted an estate or trust in computing income tax. However, under the new act the personal exemption is withdrawn if the trust requires or permits accumulation of any portion of the trust income and there is not distributed an amount equal to net income. The new law does not require the trust or estate to include in net income certain gross income items that cannot be lawfully distributed.

The 1937 act again makes taxpayers subject to normal income tax on all dividends received. In general, all dividends whether in cash or stock are subject to the tax except in the case of dividends paid in stock of the same class as that already owned.

Greenebaum Enters Fight to Control "333" Building

Walter J. Greenebaum, investment counselor, yesterday entered the struggle to obtain management control of the 333 Building corporation [333 North Michigan avenue] by asking for proxies to vote at the annual meeting on March 8. On Thursday two other groups of holders sent out letters asking for proxies.

Most domestic security and commodity markets were closed yesterday for Lincoln's birthday. Regular business will be resumed tomorrow morning.

FOREIGN GRAIN MARKETS WEAK; TRADING QUIET

All U. S. Exchanges Take Holiday.

With American markets closed yesterday, trading in grain futures abroad was almost at a standstill. Prices declined moderately due more to lack of support than to aggressive selling.

A decline of ⅛ to ⅝ cent a bushel in Liverpool wheat futures had a depressing effect on the Winnipeg market, where the old crop months were ½ cent a bushel lower, and the October contract, which represents the new crop, closed 1⅛ cent lower. Part of the selling of the latter contract was based on reports of beneficial moisture in southern part of the province of Saskatchewan.

Although Germany was said to have purchased 500,000 bushels of Argentine wheat, the Buenos Aires market closed ¼ to ⅜ cent a bushel lower.

Drouth Continues in West.

No rain was reported in the dry sections of the American winter wheat belt, which tended to restrict selling pressure in the Winnipeg market. The weather bureau in its long range forecast indicated some precipitation during the current week in all sections of the wheat belt with the possible exception of Kansas.

Soaking rains have fallen in the last few days on the North Pacific coast, and crop comments on wheat from that area indicated the growing grain was in good condition.

A Winnipeg report to J. E. Bennett & Co. yesterday indicated some American white Pacific coast wheat has been sold for export, but no interest was shown in Canadian grain.

Hogs Rescue Farmer from Heavy Losses

Producing meat for consumers at the low level of prices prevailing during the last few months has not proved a profitable enterprise for the average corn belt farm, a study disclosed yesterday. Heavy financial losses have been incurred on many cattle and sheep farms where feed lots were filled with animals from the range last fall at high initial costs.

The abundance of cheap feed helped some to cushion the drop in prices for fat stock, but this did not entirely offset the high cost of the stock going into the feed lots. Except for hogs, many cattle feeders admit they would have had a difficult time riding out the rough markets for their beef animals.

Swine this winter have justified the title of "mortgage lifter." Hogs have kept many of the big cattle herds in the corn belt out of the "red."

Hog "First Cost" Low.

Hog raisers do not have a high "first cost" to get back before they can show a profit. Most hogs are produced in the corn belt. They were raised economically over the summer on mostly pasture and oats, and some commercial feeds until new corn was ready for feeding. Consequently, producers say hogs are profitable even since the sharp break in prices from the high point of last summer. The corn hog ratio is more favorable for the farmer than it has been in most winters.

Hogs Higher Again.

Another upturn of 10 cents was made in last week's hog average, the third consecutive week that prices have advanced. There was a slight setback at the close of the week, however, with final sales 15 cents lower to 15 cents higher than a week earlier.

Cattle prices also worked higher during the week on light receipts. Final steer sales were up 25 to 40 cents. Cows, hefers and calves closed 25 to 50 cents higher. Lambs also recovered from the recent lows, closing 15 to 25 cents higher for the week. Old sheep gained 25 to 40 cents.

BUSINESS SLUMP HALTS; SIGNS OF RECOVERY FEW

Uncertainty Delays Plans for Future.

Although the business declines, as measured by most major indices, were halted last week, few encouraging signs for a sustained upturn were reported.

Business men who a few weeks ago had hoped that out of the Washington conferences with business leaders would come a basis for cooperative action by business and government, last week were resigned to a further period of uncertainty and continued to delay commitments.

A slight advance in leading business barometers, including steel activity, retail trade, car loadings, and automobile production, was recorded over the preceding week, but these indices were substantially below the levels of a year ago.

Steel Output Better.

Steel activity was scheduled last week at 30.7 per cent of theoretical capacity, compared with 30.5 per cent the week before and 80.6 per cent a year ago. Engineering construction awards rose 66 per cent above a year ago but were 23 per cent less than in the preceding week.

Although stock prices made a moderate advance for the week, brokers continued to lament the small trading volume, which averaged less than 700,000 shares a day on the New York Stock exchange for the week and reached a three year low of 387,000 shares on Friday.

Steel Wage Pact Extended.

Concern on the labor front was reduced by the announcement that the United States Steel corporation had extended indefinitly its working agreement with the Steel Workers' Organizing committee, a unit of the Committee for Industrial Organization. The pact signed last week provided for the continuance of the present scale of wages and hours, with the stipulation that new negotiations could be opened on ten days' notice.

Another steel development was a cut by the entire industry of $4 a ton to $71.60 in the base price of cold rolled sheet steel.

In the automobile industry, reports that used car sales, which began a pickup in January, had continued the advance this month, were responsible for improved sentiment among automobile makers.

The possibility that the railroads may soon be in a position to put out funds for needed purchases and improvements strengthened last week with the conclusion of the interstate commerce commission hearings on the 15 per cent freight rate increase which the carriers are seeking.

INDUSTRY INDEX RISES

New York, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Industrial activity turned up this week for the second time since the recession started last summer. The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index rose to 70.4 per cent of the 1929-'30 average from 70.2 last week.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components based on the latest available statistics and with 1929-'30 as 100, compared as follows:

PERHAPS "SMALL BUSINESS" CONCERNS who think the Government ought to "do something" SHOULD LEARN WHAT A FACTOR* IS!

*"Factoring"—a business many generations old—is today's timely answer to concerns suffering from limited capital ... yet too few know such an agency exists.

When a concern is limited in its growth by lack of working capital—and perhaps yours is like that—what, under today's conditions, can it do? Short term loans are often a strain. A new stock issue or moneyed partner may be impossible or undesirable. Government "help" as now clamored for may never come ... and perhaps would be no blessing. Yet a solution does exist ... and that solution is offered by ... the "FACTOR."

The FACTOR'S business is to give you cash for your sales on the day of shipment ... relieving you of risk from credit losses ... still allowing you to sell on your present terms. Thus your working capital is increased to take care of expanding volume or more profitable purchasing and operation ... yet you are left "owing" nothing! More and more concerns are depending on the FACTOR for the solution of their working capital problems.

* An article by a disinterested economist on "Factoring"—appearing currently in a National Business Journal, will be sent on request to manufacturers, jobbers or distributors with sales of $100,000 or more ... quite without obligation

SUBURBS TO OPEN NEW ART ROOMS

CLOSED BANKS ARE LIKELY TO PAY $140,050

3 More Return Cash This Quarter.

Further repayments totaling $140,050 to depositors of three closed west side and west suburban state banks were predicted last week by State Auditor Edward J. Barrett. If liquidation proceeds rapidly enough, this money may be distributed in the present quarter, he said.

The auditor's estimates accompanied his reports for the final group of closed banks for the last three months of 1937. Most of the information on which the reports were based was furnished by Charles H. Albers, who is general receiver for 137 of the 139 closed state banks in Cook county.

These reports showed that additional 5 per cent disbursements may be expected early this year from the Reliance Bank and Trust company, the Pinkert State bank, and the West Town State bank. The Reliance bank will divide about $112,000, the Pinkert bank about $14,250, and the West Town approximately $13,800.

Some Already Published.

There are seven west side banks in the state auditor's final releases for last quarter. Reports of the 27 others appeared in these columns during the last two weeks.

Barrett's new reports were accompanied by a recapitulation of the 139 banks in receivership, showing that 14 of the 34 closed institutions in west Chicago and suburbs repaid $730,841 to 57,200 depositors during 1937.

The Reliance Bank and Trust company headed this list with a total refund of $224,860 to its 8,000 depositors. It was the only west side bank that made two repayments during the year, the 13 others making only one distribution each.

Second on the list was the West Side Trust and Savings bank, which gave out 7,100 checks representing $151,132 of its deposits. The Forest Park Trust and Savings bank divided $62,895 among its 6,200 unsecured creditors.

Seven Others Repaid.

Seven other banks repaid more than $25,000 each. These banks and the number and amount of their refund checks were: Novak and Steiskal State bank, 4,900 for $39,784; Maywood State bank, 1,600 for $45,625; Melrose Park State bank, 3,900 for $31,844; Ashland State bank, 1,400 for $27,938; Berwyn State bank, 4,000 for $27,161; Madison Square State bank, 6,500 for $30,021, and Peoples State Bank of Maywood, 3,000 for $26,476.

The other banks that paid last year, and the number and total of the disbursements were:

Marshall Square State bank, 2,800 for $23,674; Baker State Bank of Cicero, 2,200 for $14,956; Pinkert State bank, 3,500 for $14,120, and Twelfth Street State bank, 2,100 for $10,355.

Only one of the 34 closed west side state banks has thus far failed to make at least one repayment to its depositors. This is the Laramie State, which closed on Aug. 16, 1930, and which still owes $316,000 to its general creditors.

Here are analyses of the condition of the seven banks in the state auditor's latest releases, with the best available information concerning the future repayment outlook:

Pinkert State bank—Total receipts, $268,077. Paid on prior claims, $85,165. Paid depositors, $226,469 or 65 per cent. Costs: receivers, $20,169; legal, $38,335; clerical, $22,519; interest, $1,091; advanced to protect assets, $12,931, with $8,818 refunded. Cash, $9,195. Estimates of the final payout range from 40 to 45 per cent.

Costs: Receivers, $12,169; legal, $23,300; clerical, $35,396; interest, $464; advanced to protect assets, $24,815, with $12,302 refunded. Cash, $1,491. The receiver reports that depositors probably will get nothing more.

WEST SIDE TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK—Total receipts, $4,382,209. Paid on prior claims, $1,308,637. Paid depositors, $554,369, or 19 per cent. Only $15,000 of the cash is applicable to the unsecured debt, the rest being held in trust for other purposes. The bank owes the RFC $143,000.

WEST TOWN STATE BANK—Total receipts, $3,849,046. Paid on prior claims, $787,608. Paid depositors, $1,575,359, or 57½ per cent. Costs: Receivers, $22,167; legal, $64,485; clerical, $129,507; interest, $6,977; advanced to protect assets, $990,959, with $742,987 refunded. Cash, $129,400. It is now predicted that the final payout may reach 70 or 75 per cent.

Mr. Barrett and Mr. Albers pointed out that their estimates as to unpaid distributions are purely approximate and that the situation can be influenced greatly by economic fluctuations.

Light Keeper Recalls Days of Lake Peril

Tom Armstrong.

When the ice floes made sailing dangerous for the boats on Lake Michigan and when fog and storm and choppy waves made the old leather faced captains peer along the coastline for the harbor lights, they knew that Tom Armstrong would be at his post in the lighthouse. And because Tom Armstrong, 919 South Lombard avenue, Oak Park, tended a lighthouse for 41 years he can cook a good dinner, now that he's retired, when his wife wants to go out of an afternoon to see a movie.

There's as much prose as poetry in the life of this lighthouse keeper who retire from the United States Lighthouse service six years ago. When he celebrated his 72d birthday recently he explained about his knowledge of cookery and his fine physique by telling his experiences as painter, machinist, electrician and chief cook and pie baker as well as life saver at four harbors along Lake Michigan.

Rescued Sailors.

The man with the steel gray eyes and the straight, broad shoulders has not forgotten his watch at the lighthouse on South Manitou Island, Pilot's Island, Michigan City or at the Chicago harbor. Nor is he forgotten by the sailors he fished out of the water in the days before the coast guard came. They are the men who remember his warm deep laugh that encouraged them as they were brought, chapped and cut, in his open sailboat toward safety.

It was in 1889 that Armstrong first watched the light on Manitou Island. It was a kerosene lamp and required constant vigil. The old steam fog horn was a voice to all the captains who passed on thick nights. Some eight months later he was transferred up to Pilot's Island, known as Death's Door because so many ships were wrecked there.

After two years she went back to Manitou and took up a 12 year watch that was broken only by an annual ten day shore leave. The next 14 years he watched the light at Michigan City's harbor and the last 14 years of his service were spent at Chicago's port.

Horn Banished Sleep.

He watched the city's changing sky line, saw the coast guard come to relieve him of rescue work and learned how to operate the new diaphone that in 1924 took the place of the steam fog horn. The screaming cry that sounded safety to his ears, meant sleepless agony, wrote the complaining gold coast residents They couldn't stand the racket. Letters poured in on city officials and to the Lighthouse Service headquarters in Washington from the fog horn sufferers.

Tom Armstrong was given advice from his superiors. Cut the air pressure on the whistle down to 30 pounds, he was told, then gradually increase it until it reached 70 pounds again. Armstrong followed instructions. The citizenry was placated. No one writes letters anymore.

It was during his Chicago job that Armstrong saved a boy who was bicycling too near the edge of the pier. When the boy was brought to the surface, coughing up lake water he said: "Please sir, would you mind to jump in again and get me my bike." Mr. Armstrong did.

Most Perilous Moment.

The most perilous moment came at Pilot's Island when Armstrong saved a mail carrier. The centerboard on the carrier's vessel froze fast and his boat was carried with the northwesterly wind toward the rocky shoreline. Armstrong battled the breakers in a rescue schooner.

Just as he jumped in the mail boat, his vessel was washed on outlying rocks and smashed to bits. For an hour and a half he and the mail carrier were rocked back and forth The boat filled with water. Finally they leaped into the lake and swam ashore, towing the mail bags.

The harbor lights that beckon to men who sail down the lake are kept today by younger men than Armstrong. His watch is just a story now that he tells to his granddaughter. Barbara Fulp, who is interested mostly in hearing about the radio beams that guide sailors safely to port when they are far from harbor lights and the sound of even the loudest fog horn.

Young Surrealists of Art League

Petitions Cite Lack of Small Residences.

A movement to amend the zoning law in Wheaton which would permit conversion of large residences into two flat buildings gained headway when Postmaster C. W. McDonald advocated action by the city council before a recent meeting of the Wheaton Lions club. While the club took no action as a body, its members joined in signing petitions being circulated throughout the suburb.

The petition asks the mayor and his commissioners to revise or amend the zoning law, so that houses may be altered and provide a considerable number of places available for renting. The request has in mind not only newscomers to the city, but young married couples now obliged to emigrate to some other city. It is estimated that fifty or sixty owners of large residences would take advantage of the plan.

Against Large Buildings.

Mr. McDonald started the movement through a letter to the Wheaton Journal. While expressing no quarrel with the zoning law, Mr. McDonald said he believed it should not be construed to prevent the changing of an ordinary residence into a two flat building. He said the conversion would not change the outside appearance of houses to any appreciable extent, in contrast to a multiple apartment building in a strictly residential district.

Cites Lack of Homes.

E. L. Gates, county superintendent of highways, said his son, upon marrying, had been obliged to move to Glen Ellyn for an apartment, and had found eight other couples from Wheaton residing in the same building. Dr. W. V. Hopf, county health commissioner, expressed his accord with the plan.

The petition states the belief that if suitable places could be had on a rental basis, occupants would have an opportunity to decide if they liked the city and later on build homes of their own in Wheaton.

SEARS-ROEBUCK 'Y' OPENS DRIVE FOR $7,500 FUND

Proceeds Aid in Program for Boy Gangs.

Seven thousand five hundred dollars is needed on the west side so that boys can be boys without breaking windows and tying tin cans on puppy dogs' tails. Last Tuesday the Sears Roebuck Y. M. C. A., 3210 Arthington street, opened its annual campaign for funds to finance its program of outpost building and community extension work for underprivileged boys on a non-fee basis. The fund drive will continue until Monday, Feb. 28.

H. D. Agnew.

The idea of putting boxing gloves on boys who want to fight and giving them swimming lessons to stop their mischief was started 26 years ago by the Sears "Y." Last year 81 gangs with a total membership of 1,100 boys enrolled in whoesome activities at the three outpost club buildings located at 910 South Sacramento avenue, 4100 Fillmore street, and 2628 Polk street.

184 Go To Camp.

Ten lots and playgrounds are used by the boys. There are 13 baseball leagues, outdoor movies, handicraft, camp activities, free ball games, track meets, educational trips, campfire and mass games. Last year 184 boys representing 23 groups went to Camp Deer Grove in the forest preserves for a camping season on a coöperative basis. Boys brought their own food but transportation was furnished.

Twenty-nine different groups participate in the Sunday afternoon work at the Sears "Y." More than 130 boys representing 12 groups meet from 2 until 5 o'clock every Sunday afternoon for basketball, track, apparatus work, swimming, life saving, and hobby games. Frank Wieting is boys' work secretary in charge of the "gangs."

Chicago Dinner Is One of Many Planned.

Students, faculty, alumni, and friends of Wheaton college will gather at the Stevens hotel Feg. 22 for the annual Washington banquet, major social event of the college year.

The dinner will mark the formal inauguration of the alumni campaign for $200,000 for the proposed auditorium-physical education building, and will be one of a series of dinners to be held simultaneously throughout the United States where any number of alumni reside.

Chief speaker at the banquet will be William J. Cameron of Dearborn, Mich., executive of the Ford Motor company. He will be introduced to the diners and the radio audience by President J. Oliver Buswell Jr. of Wheaton college.

Message for Alumni.

A message to the listening alumni will be given by the president of the alumni association, the Rev. Torrey M. Johnson, pastor of Chicago's Mid-West Bible church. A feature of the evening will be music by Wheaton college musical organizations.

While the Washington banquet has been a notable event of the Wheaton college program for many years, this will be the first time it has been held off the campus. Lack of space at the college to accommodate the students and the guests who are expected led to the decision to hold the dinner in Chicago.

Ask Each for $100.

In launching its campaign for funds to construct the new auditorium-physical education building, the 2,000 Wheaton alumni are calling on each graduate and former student of the college to "get or give $100."

The fund raising effort is to continue intensively for one month. Local committees are being set up in more than 100 communities throughout the United States.

FIVE NEW R. O. T. C. TEACHERS ADDED IN CITY SCHOOLS

Fort Sheridan Soldiers Begin Duties.

The 6th corps area headquarters last week transferred five noncommissioned army officers from Fort Sheridan to the Chicago high schools R. O. T. C. as teachers, relieving the heavy load carried by the present single instructors in five of the schools.

Sergt. Veachel A. Dennison was assigned to Morgan Park High school, Sergt. Alfred Fulton to Lake View, Sergt. James C. Pinneo to Lane Technical, Corporal George W. Peterburs to Schurz, and Corporal Harold W. Shoemaker to Tilden. The five will act as assistants to the instructors at those schools.

These placements were recommended by Col. William F. Morrison, head of the R. O. T. C., and approved by Maj. Frank L. Beals, assistant superintendent of schools, subject to approval by the school board.

Col. Morrison commented that from the instructional viewpoint the addition will be a great help because some of the units are so large as to be unwieldy for one instructor. The Lane R. O. T. C., for example, has an enrollment of more than 1,000 cadets.

At Fort Sheridan Sergt. Dennison was on duty with Troop A, 14th cavalry; Sergt. Fulton with Battery E, 61st coast artillery; Sergt. Pinneo with Company D, 2d infantry; Corporal Peterburs with Battery B, 61st coast artillery, and Corporal Shoemaker with Company D, 2d infantry.

The five began their new instructional duties last week.

AMERICAN HEROES
Dramatic Incidents in Lives of Brave

BY JACK THOMPSON.

It was dusk in the spring of 1775 when Ethan Allen reached Castleton, a hamlet in the foothills of the Green mountains. Samuel Beach, his boyhood chum, was waiting for him at the smithy.

Few words were needed. Each man believed in the independence of the American colonies. Only three weeks before the shot destined to be heard around the world had been fired at Concord.

Allen needed men and more men, Green mountain boys, to storm the fortress of Ticonderoga, guardian of Lake Champlain, the great highway between the colonies and Canada. He needed them immediately.

As night fell Beach tightened the strap of his lether breeches, seized a stout staf, and started down the woodland trail along the banks of the Otter.

The hurrying patriot, rounding a bend in the trail, smashed into a British cavalryman. The Red Coat slashed with his saber, but Beach parried the blow with his staf and darted into the woods where the horseman could not follow.

On through the night, hour by hour, the strong hearted Beach trotted and walked, rousing the farms and villages. "Ethan Allen needs men. Now! Meet at Handy's cove."

Rutland heard his call, and Pittsford. Up the Otter and down again, Beach raised the call of a free America—through Brandon and Leicester, Salisbury, Middlebury, Cornwall, and Whiting.

At Handy's cove, the rendezvous on Lake Champlain, Beach arived the next afternoon. Allen's men were there. Beach had traveled 64 miles.

You might think that was a fair day's work for a man. But not for Samuel Beach. In the early morning light of May 10, 1775, Beach was at the side of Allen when the intrepid leader and his Green mountain boys demanded the surrender of the British commander at Ticonderoga in the name of the "reat Jehovah and the Continental Congress."

'PAL' TYPE GIRL LIKED BEST AT DOWNERS GROVE

High School Lads Shun "Clinging Vines."

The "pal" type of girl is the sort that attracts boys at the Downers Grove Community High school, and it is the pal type of boy that is most attractive to the girls.

Only 1 per cent of the boys at the school expressed a leaning toward the "clinging vine" personality. The athletic girl rates high at the school. Only 4 per cent of the boys appear to care for the witty type, or the studious type, and domestic ability is considered the most admirable talent for a co-ed to possess.

Attitude of the boys and girls toward ideal personalities among their acquaintances was brought out in a recent survey conducted by the Hi-Y, of which Earl C. Wolfe is advisor, and the Girl Reserves, of which Miss Mildred Bales is advisor.

Like Domestic Ability.

Domestic ability on the part of a girl was admired by 36 per cent of the seventy boys filling out charts. Athletic ability was admired by 28 per cent, artistic ability by 19 per cent, musical ability by 14 per cent, literary ability by 2 per cent, and dramatic ability by 1 per cent.

Ninety-eight per cent of the boys expressed themselves as opposed to excessive make-up. Seventy per cent considered a girl's personality first, while 30 per cent said they were attracted by beauty of face. All but 3 per cent of the boys said they liked to have a girl notice their new clothes.

The survey revealed that 58 per cent of the boys preferred to accompany into a social group a girl well poised and at ease, while 42 per cent wanted their companions informed on topics of the day. None of the boys looked favorably on girls who used coarse and improper language.

Disapprove Smoking.

Seventy-nine per cent of the boys disapproved of girls smoking, and 98 per cent disapproved of their drinking. All but 5 per cent thought the modern girl expected to be kissed.

Upper class girls at the school voted zero on slight of hand ability as a talent to be admired in a boy. In their estimation, athletic ability was most admirable and received 55 per cent of the votes, musical ability 15 per cent, instructive ability 14 per cent, mechanical ability 2 per cent, handicraft ability 10 per cent, and dramatic ability 1 per cent.

The girls voted 100 per cent for cleanliness as an important factor in a boy's personal appearance. Eleven per cent of the upper class girls were not concerned with the condition of finger nails, but most of them looked favorably on well groomed hair. They were for moderate dressing on the part of the boys, 100 per cent. Half of them thought first of a boy's personality and the other half thought first of his appearance.

Don't Like "Pushers."

Upper class girls were 92 per cent unfavorable in their attitude toward the boys who push themselves forward to gain attention, but only 66 per cent of the under class girls thought this a fault.

Ninety-four per cent of all girls at the school admitted they liked flattering comments from the boys, and all but four per cent appreciated a boy's notice of their new clothes.

Of the upper class girls, 72 per cent said that smoking on the part of a boy did not lower him in their estimation, but 66 per cent of the under class girls said it did. The upper class girls were 79 per cent against boys who drank, but 98 per cent of the under class were opposed to drinking.

Seven per cent of the upper class girls thought the modern boy did not expect to kiss a girl, but only 1 per cent of the under class girls so opined. The large percentage of girls admitted they were definitly influenced by what a boy thought of them.

Aim at Test for Junior, Senior 'Highs.'

Decision that the services of the organization be offered to all Du Page county junior and senior high schools in planning schoolwide surveys for tuberculosis was made by the board of directors of the Du Page County Tuberculosis association at a recent meeting. Directors of the association representing all communities in Du Page county were present.

It was pointed out that the group was especially interested in testing high school students since surveys in other localities revealed ten times as many cases of tuberculosis in the young adolescent group as in the younger age groups.

Recent Surveys Made.

"Of 1,048 children ranging from pre-school age to 22 years tested in Du Page county schools, 31 per cent were found to have tuberculosis infections. Only 6.6 per cent of a group of pre-school children tested were found to have tuberculosis germs in their bodies, whereas high school students tested by the same method were 27.3 per cent infected.

"The tuberculin test is merely a screening process used to reduce the cost of these surveys," Dr. Webb said. "Only those having a positive reaction to the test need the X-ray of the chest. However, if a child shows a positive reaction to the test we do not know the condition of his lungs until an X-ray of his chest is made.

Not a Serum.

"Tuberculin is not a serum. The test has no preventive or curative qualities. It is a colorless liquid made in laboratories under government supervision. The tuberculin test is approved by the White House Conference on Child Health and Protention, scientific medical organizations and health departments.

"To any school system interested in promoting a case finding program our organization will furnish free of charge tuberculin in sufficient quantities for testing any size group. We will be glad to furnish a speaker or material for talks on the tuberculin test to any other organization for their information.

"Of course, the program must have the indorsement of the physicians of any community in which tuberculin testing of student groups is done."

GLENBARD LISTS ITS CHOICE OF FOREIGN PEOPLE

Students Friendly to English, Chinese.

The typical student at Glenbard High school has a friendly feeling toward the people of England and Canada, and considers the Chinese better than the Japanese. The greatest number among the 1,000 pupils of the school descended from English and German stock, the two groups being almost equally represented, and Irish, Scotch, and French coming next in order.

The finding is the result of a survey recently conducted under the direction of Arthur Repke, social science teacher, for the purpose of ascertaining the attitude and behavior of the typical Glenbardian, and of giving the sociology classes training in tabulating questionnaire answers.

Stealing Most Serious.

Regarding social attitudes, Glenbard students consider stealing the most serious offense, with drinking, destroying property, gambling, and protecting law violators next in order. Upper classmen shower more leniency toward gambling than did freshmen.

Characteristics found most common and considered least serious were: First, stubbornness; second, extravagance; third, selfishness; fourth, dancing, and fifth, bad temper.

Boys are of the opinion that "necking" may be permissible, but the girls consider it questionable. It was the consensus that "flunkers" should not be eliminated from school, but those who are discipline problems should be expelled.

Glenbardians have an idea that pupils with low marks are as likely to succeed in life as those who have high marks, that extra curricular activities do not receive too much attenton at school, and that class work isn't overly difficult.

Think Students Truthful.

According to the questionnaire answers, the majority of the students gave the real reason for absences, seldom sign their parents' names to report cards, and do not destroy school property. They do not attend night clubs or frequent pool rooms and neither smoke nor drink. They dance once in a while, but not in public places. Sometimes they swear.

The survey shows that the average boy and girl at the school attend movies once a week. Recent films which they hold most in favor are "Lost Horizon," "The Good Earth," "Captains Courageous" and "Dead End." Favorite movie stars are Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Ronald Colman, Nelson Eddy, Gary Cooper, Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, and William Powell.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

In his column Looking at Hollywood Ed Sullivan lately ventured that all signs and portents indicate a continued trend of radio to Hollywood. But, scanning the sky from the midwest, your radio observer sees signs that the California gold rush is about over. Looking back on this season a year or two later, it may appear as the year of the Hollywood flop. Already sponsors and their henchmen are trekking the road back to Chicago and New York. The World's Fair in New York in 1939 probably will accelerate the flight from Hollywood.

Hollywood will always continue important in the radio picture—if for no other reason than that many broadcasting favorites are residing in Hollywood and making pictures too. The movies, considering the number of stars they have used in radio, have pitched up singularly few whose reputations have been enhanced through their radio activities. There are, of course, exceptions.

During the past season among those who have taken their radio activities seriously and have carved themselves broadcasting niches are Walt Disney and company; Edward G. Robinson in Big Town, a program that started weak but improved steadily; Jean Hersholt as Dr. Christian; Charlie Butterworth, Frank Morgan in Good News; Jeannette MacDonald; Tyrone Power; possibly Robert Taylor, and several others.

Costliest Shows Weaklings.

The two biggest shows from the standpoint of cost, Good News and Your Hollywood Parade, must be viewed as weaklings. Both have improved as the months pass by settling down to formulas similar to that of Rudy Vallee's Varieties. But they are poor investments by comparison with what can be done in Chicago or New York for a fraction of the cost entailed in Hollywood.

The same sponsor who has Hollywood Parade on the air has lately launched Kay Kyser in a quiz program over Mutual from Chicago. A modest program, it is in the tradition of broadcasting, handled by people thoroughly radiowise. And the response from listeners is phenomenal. Yet its cost is probably about one-tenth of that of Your Hollywood Parade, which has the same sponsor.

Fibber McGee might be cited as another example. It probably costs no more than one-fifth of the lavish Hollywood shows, but is topped only by a half dozen or so programs in rating in the most accurate radio polls.

There seem to be unmistakable signs that sponsors again are going to begin evaluation of what they are getting for their money. The height of "altruism" was probably reached when a coffee maker put Good News on the air and let the plugs for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exceed those for his java. But that's been changed now.

With business as it is, you may expect much less throwing away of money in 1938. There are two reasons—the necessity for retrenchment itself and the growing realization that fat budgets too often mean lean shows.

Hollywood Interest Explained.

Ed Sullivan explained Hollywood's interest in radio, briefly and correctly: 1. The exploitation value. 2. Pay of $5,000 for three minutes' work. That is exactly why radio will pull out of Hollywood—at least to an extent.

Consider No. 1. A good example of this reason for broadcasting may be found in Jack Haley's show. This show is devoted largely to whooping and hollering for Darryl Zanuck, Haley's boss at Twentieth Century-Fox studios—and lots of plugging for the rest of the folks at the same studio. There is almost no serious thought of entertainment for listeners, the main objective being to plug Mr. Zanuck's wares. That's stupid.

As an example of No. 2 we have Clark Gable's bumbling through a slovenly performance of George Washington at Valley Forge almost entirely without preparation.

Radio is not for those Hollywood performers who look down on radio as something which means $5,000 for a few minutes of sleazy performing.

If movie stars took more seriously their radio engagements, went through the long and arduous rehersals that regular air stars do, they might avoid the seizures of jitters which Mr. Sullivan admitted so often plague them. John Barrymore, he explained, could not face the mike without a bracing drink first.

The Microphone's Finality.

There is a certain awful finality about the microphone which frightens the Hollywood folk, used to making a dozen—or two dozen—recordings of a scene, from which the best may be selected. In radio that's impossible. A mistake on the air cannot be recalled. Radio performers, thus, have learned that the best way to assure a good performance on the air is to prepare for it. The film stars, however, prefer taking the money and letting the rehersals go.

Then there is the matter of temperament, professional jealousy, and front. A spy connected with the Monday evening Cecil B. De Mille Radio Theater informed us that the stars are all too often much more concerned with the plugs they are to get on these shows than in their performances in them.

Temperament! Mr. Sullivan recalled that Joan Crawford had turned in a magnificent performance in Radio Theater—in her stocking feet, because on the air that's the only way she can work. He made a great point of the fact that though she stepped into an open safety pin while on the air she went right on through with her lines. For that she is to be commended.

But to many listeners it must seem that a great actress, who is regularly well heeled in pictures, ought to be able to broadcast too with her shoes on. There are hundreds of able radio actors who do.

BECKER TALKING DOG TO SALUTE ST. VALENTINE

The amazing "talking dog," already acquiring a radio personality, will be back with St. Valentine's greetings for canine pals. Edna Sellers, well known W-G-N organist, will supply the incidental music.

Senator Holt to Discuss Roosevelt Business Parleys

Senator Rush Holt of West Virginia will speak over W-G-N and the Mutual network from 10:15 to 10:30 p. m. Wednesday on "President Roosevelt's Business Conferences." The broadcast will originate through the facilities of Mutual's Washington affiliate, WOL.

The music of the production has been drawn from French songs or tunes built around France and the French. Bob Hannon, tenor soloist, will offer "Darling Je Vous Aime Beaucoup," while the W-G-N chorus and orchestra will be heard in two novelties, "Paris in Swing" and "Midnight in Paris."

The two youngsters on the "Opportunity Knocks" portion of the program this week will be Shirley Grey and Billy Meyers. Miss Grey will sing "You're a Sweetheart" and "Don't You Know or Don't You Care," while Mr. Meyers' offering will be "It's Wonderful."

Old and beloved vocal favorites will headline the broadcast of the Northerners at 9:30 p. m. Tuesday with Marie Truitt, soprano, as guest soloist. Ernest Pechin, famous cornetist of the W-G-N Concert orchestra, also will be starred playing "The Carnival of Venice." Miss Truitt will sing "Gianinna Mia" from Friml's "Firefly."

"Curtain Time" at 9:30 Friday will present a drama based on the revolutionary war called "Little Enemy." The play written by Bess Flynn will feature Margery Hannan and Verne Smith in the romantic rôles with Francis X. Bushman as George Washington.

Jean Ellington Will Sing with Frank Black.

In tribute to the anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birth the Magic Key, at 1 p. m. on WENR, will offer Dr. Walter Dambrosch conducting his own "Abraham Lincoln Song," a musical setting of Walt Whitman's poem "O Captain, My Captain." Glenn Darwin, 24 year old baritone, who is a student at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, will be soloist. Sara Allgood and Whitford Kane, Broadway stage stars, will present an original sketch, and Dr. Frank Black will conduct the orchestra and Jean Ellington will sing.

Sara Allgood and Whitford Kane, currently starring on Broadway, will be heard in an original sketch, "Mr. and Mrs. Whelan at Home." Miss Allgood is at present featured with Sir Cedric Hardwicke in "Shadow and Substance," and Kane is playing a leading rôle in "Shoemaker's Holiday."

John Barbirolli, conductor of the Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra, is to broadcast over WBBM-CBS at 2 p. m. today for the first time since he left in January for a midseason vacation in England. Guila Bustabo, noted violinist, will be the soloist.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Flight That Failed

February 12, 1938.

ONE of the Muscovy ducks in the barnyard at the Wheaton farm had a big idea recently, but it didn't work out quite as she expected. This hen decided that she would leave the barnyard and the warmth of the duck house to fly to one of the farm ponds. Each spring the ducks are moved from the barnyard to the ponds, but this one evidently wanted a head start on the other birds.

So she made a flying take-off from the barnyard on her way to the pond, which is about a quarter of a mile away. But after the bird had flown about half the distance to the pond she suddenly changed her mind. Perhaps the sight of the ice on the pond influenced her. So she didn't even land near the pond, but just turned around and dropped down into the barnyard, where there is a warm shelter for her until the ice melts.

A Duck Mystery.

The workers on the farm can hardly wait until spring to solve the mystery of a missing duck. The bird is Tagalong, the little English call duck which was hatched in the game bird pens at the farm in the spring of 1935.

Tagalong was injured by a turtle which bit his leg when he was a duckling. The injury forced the bird to walk with a limp. Until this fall he stayed with the Muscovy ducks in the barnyard, hopping along behind them wherever they went. Gradually he learned to fly, and late in the fall he started hobnobbing with the wild mallards which dropped down on the ponds from time to time.

The boys believe Tagalong went south with one of these flocks of mallards when they left in November. He has not been seen on the farm since that time. Now the boys are wondering whether this little English call duck will return this spring when some of his wild mallard buddies pass this way.

More About Odd Rifle.

More information about the seven barreled rifle that shoots seven .22 caliber cartridges at once is beginning to come in. We tested one of these unusual guns on the experimental farm about two weeks ago. It was tried on paper targets and a few birds, also, to see whether this odd weapon, made in Europe for shooting geese, might be effective against crows.

Several readers of this department have written in since the first article about the rifle. One of them, O. D. Smith of Geneva, Ill., informs us that Fred Surkamer, who until his death maintained a gunsmith shop in Lake street, made several of these seven barrel guns right here in Chicago. One was shipped to the west, where the owner used it to kill coyotes.

Another letter tells us that five of these .22 rifles were imported by Joseph A. Hemingway of Glenwood, Ill. They were made by H. Pieper, Liege, Belgium, and had Krupp barrels. That makes seven of these heavyweight .22 rifles accounted for here in Chicago.

Harbingers of Season Around the Corner

New Colors, New Textures Offered in Spring Suits

By RHEA SEEGER

LONG before the pessimistic weather man promises balmy breezes or anything resembling a spell of good spring sunshine, the first of the suits appear. They're tempting harbingers of the coming season, and most of the appreciative shoppers hesitate only a second before the suits are boxed and ready for the first mild day. A lot of them go under winter coats, with astonishingly good results, and do grand jobs as pick-up interest for an otherwise drab winter wardrobe.

Three piece outfits are prime favorites. These trios are practical as well as colorful. Each preview shows new color combines, new silhouettes, new lengths as to skirt and jacket, and, best of all, the newest ideas in textures. Ensemble woolens are delightful finds this season, a good, practical idea with sufficient decorativeness to redeem the concoctions from too much of the utilitarian.

Black dresses teamed with bright colored coats and jackets are excellent finds and abundantly varied in detail. Some have the colored coats trimmed sparingly with fur. Others feature brilliant tweeds that are wind resistant. The dresses are the type that slide easily under tailored topcoats or alternate under dress parade wraps. Dress sleeves usually are elbow length, with some bracelet lengths shown. Bodice tops are intricately swathed and draped to show the figure, and skirts are shorter because of the flared width.

Aquamarine blue is a big fashion favorite, with a half dozen other shades of blue also taking the spotlight. Next come the different shades of green, ranging from watery bonbon tints to deep chartreuse tones, with lots of good, flattering foliage greens. Another new spring favorite is Parma violet, a heavenly shade for blondes and coppertops. It combines perfectly with wood brown accessories and most distinctively with accessories of raspberry red or canary yellow.

Again you're going to see a grand assortment of all the copper colors, rich glowing ambers; true copper; the tint of a new penny; and all the trick tones labeled "red earth" and similar descriptive efforts. Long fitted coats over slim, straight two piece suits, and a shirred, rib hugging dress in this copper color are stunning affairs after weeks of black, dark brown, and navy.

Boleros are scheduled for overwhelming popularity. Dozens of different styles of boleros with short, medium, or long sleeves, brief lengths or the longer models that clear the waistline, and every material and color are promised for spring wear. Wide sashes and belts provide color contrast. Such suits are young, refreshing, and simple.

Five early spring suits have been sketched, five different styles, some furred, others furless. All can be worn any reasonably bright day, under or without winter coats of fur or fabric.

Fur trimmed suit created in pastel soft woolen. Fitted dress has elbow length sleeves, high neckline, and slightly flared skirt. Fingertip length coat has turnback lapels and lavishly furred sleeves.

Dull, dark crepe fashions the pencil-slim dress, bright wool the longish coat. Tuxedo fur collar is definitely new, descending in a double vertical line down the front of loose coat.

By Clotilde.

The spring wardrobe needs of both misses and matrons are catered to in this new pattern. Older women naturally prefer more conservative lines, and the frock illustrated at the left is one they are certain to like. It has a softly draped bodice above a slim corselet waist. At either side of the simple V neckline one may use her favorite clips. The sleeves are squared smartly at the shoulders, giving breadth which minimizes the waistline by contrast. The paneled skirt achieves the correct amount of width without sacrificing the streamline. Both printed and plain silks make up beautifully in this model.

Matrons may, of course, wear the model at the right, if they are more youthful in their tastes and have the slender figure to carry this design. Younger women will delight in the dainty touches of this version of the pattern. In the aforementioned shirred bodice is a lingerie vest with a girlish collar. The sleeves of this dress are short. A grand idea is to make the dress of some dark shade and have the frilly vestee in a pastel or white to harmonize.

Style No. 3448 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measurement. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material, with ⅜ yard of 39 inch contrasting for the long-sleeved dress.

Clotilde is a daily contributor to The Chicago Tribune, offering constructive information to women who make their own things, presenting a fascinating pattern every day of the week.

Knitted Tennis Dress Has Back Zipper and a Bolero

By Jean Macdonald.

The more tailored the sports apparel for summer, in both active and spectator sports, the more popular the model. Those garments favoring zippers are the last word in ultratailored accoutrements, but the tennis dress zippered up the back, illustrated today, is the dernier cri in up to the minute fashion notes.

Knitted in fine nubby cotton, this yellow one piece dress has a three inch band of garter stitch at the bottom and a few inches of the stockinette stitch are worked before the zipper opening is begun. The bodice is perfectly plain, coming up about two inches above the waistline in back and having the season's most popular neckline—square. Crocheted bands are fastened at each side of the front and cross in the middle of the back, to be fastened tightly at each side. An inch band of single crochet is worked around the bodice to give a firm finish and a perfect fit.

After the game is over, the addition of a tiny bolero in the same or a contrasting color creates a perfect costume for the veranda of any country club.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instructions for knitting the tennis dress with zipper up the back illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

It's a Help to Me, Says—

Bertha C., Chicago: Don't remember how I thought of this, but I discovered that by putting a powder puff in the heel of each shoe my feet could take a lot more mileage in the course of the day and not get all tired out. A small powder puff, of course.

Marvin T., Ann Arbor, Mich.: The wife was always worried for fear her potted window plants would fall off the sill—and they frequently did. So I got the idea of driving long finishing nails into each sill, placing the plants over the protruding nails which ran up through the drain holes. Now the pots are firmly held.

Bridge Party Refreshments Must Be Light

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1938: By The Chicago Tribune.]

A dessert bearing a generous portion of something quite rich and filling, and a wee bit exotic, too, is the bridge player's choice of afternoon refreshment. Of course, there mustn't be too much to eat or there is danger that gamesters who also are cooks will forget that their own satisfied appetites do not represent the state of the rest of the family at dinner time. So icebox cake or pie with coffee and nuts is almost the outside limit of refreshment for afternoon bridge.

BRIDGE PARTY REFRESHMENTS

I.
Gingersnap Icebox Pudding
Assorted Nuts — Coffee or Tea

Banana Graham Cracker Pie
Spiced Gumdrops — Coffee or Tea

IV.
Wine Blackberry Pie
Salted Almonds — Coffee

V.
Avocado Half Filled with Diced Mixed Fruit, with Whipped Cream Mayonnaise
Tiny Coconut Cup Cakes — Coffee

GINGERSNAP ICEBOX PUDDING
[Eight servings]

½ cup softened butter
1 cup confectioners' sugar
2 eggs
1 cup pineapple cut into small pieces
3 bananas, cut finely
½ cup chopped nuts
¾ cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon confectioners' sugar
½ pound gingersnaps, crushed

Cream the butter and add the cup of confectioners' sugar gradually. Mix well. Beat in the whole eggs and whip the mixture to creaminess. Combine fruit, nuts, and whipped cream, and fold in the tablespoon of confectioners' sugar. Butter a pan or mold and line the bottom with half the gingersnap crums. Spread the butter, sugar, and egg mixture over the crums and cover with the fruit-nut-whipped cream combination. Sprinkle remaining crums on top. Chill overnight and serve in slices, topped with more whipped cream. Nuts may be sprinkled over the top.

BANANA GRAHAM CRACKER PIE
[Nine Inch Pie]

1½ cups crushed graham cracker crums
½ cup butter
⅓ cup confectioners' sugar
1¾ cups scalded milk
3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons cornstarch
⅝ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup cream, whipped
Sliced bananas
Chocolate shot or shaved sweet chocolate [optional]

Work the graham cracker crums into the creamed butter and confectioners' sugar and press over bottom and sides of pie pan. Chill in refrigerator. In the meantime scald milk, combine flour, cornstarch, sugar, and salt, and add a little of the scalded milk, making a paste. Return this to the rest of the scalded milk in the top of a double boiler, and cook, stirring constantly, until the mixture is thickened and smooth. Continue cooking, stirring frequently, for about 15 minutes longer, until flour and cornstarch have been thoroughly cooked. Beat eggs and stir a portion of the hot mixture into them. Return to the double boiler and stir to mix well. Cook for 2 minutes longer and remove from heat. Add vanilla and chill. Fold in half the whipped cream and spread the mixture in the cracker crust which has been lined with sliced bananas. Cover filling with more sliced bananas and top with sweetened remaining whipped cream. Sprinkle chocolate shot or grated sweet chocolate over the pie.

WINE BLACKBERRY PIE

3 cups frozen, canned, or fresh blackberries with juice
¾ cup sugar [approximately]
1/16 teaspoon salt
¼ cup claret, madeira, or muscatel wine
1½ tablespoons unflavored gelatin
Baked pastry shell
Rum flavored whipped cream

If canned berries or sweetened frozen ones are used less sugar will be needed. Heat the berries in their own juice, add sugar and salt. Remove from heat and add wine. Soften gelatin in one-quarter cup cold water and dissolve it over hot water. Add a little of the berry juice and heat until well dissolved. Remove from heat and stir into blackberry mixture. Chill until the berries begin to jell and then turn into pie shell. Chill until firm. Spread over the top whipped cream sweetened slightly and flavored with rum. For one cup cream, whipped, use two tablespoons sugar and one tablespoon rum.

Blouse and Skirt Twosome Is the Current Rage in Paris

No. 5227—The Paris pattern for this blouse is available in sizes 14 and 16, and in 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measurement. ● No. 5231—The pattern for the skirt is available in sizes 26, 28, 30, 32, and 34 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS. — [Special.] — Twosomes of blouse and skirt have taken the French capital by storm. These outfits are reminiscent of the shirtmaker outfits so popular about the time of the war, but they are being presented with many new details that bring them definitly up to 1938. One of the leading designers recently brought out the ensemble I've adapted for our twin patterns today. I recommend the use of both patterns for a complete ensemble, but if you'd like to make either the blouse or skirt to go with garments already in your spring collection, I'm sure you will find the separate items great tonics for your wardrobe.

The blouse has the usual shirtwaist collar, shoulder yoke, and traditional buttoned closing, but the immense fulness of both sleeves and shirred bodice is something brand new. What's more, I suggest you use a sheer print in rather gay shades as contrast for a dark skirt. I must tell you about the skirt, since it's a pet of mine. The tight waistband tops a swirl of plaits, and what spring costume would be truly complete without plaits? Either woolen or heavy silk may be used.

Pattern No. 5227 provides the full, shirred blouse and also the tailored topper sketched at the left. Two skirts, one plaited all the way around and the other streamlined, with just six trim gores, are the offering of pattern No. 5231. Each pattern costs 15 cents.

Wedding Party Styles Ignore the Recession

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—There is no recession so far as brides are concerned this season. Society weddings in Europe and America these past months have been more lavish than ever, and staged on a spare-no-expense program. This has put the bride and her party styles for the coming spring up at the top of luxury fashions.

In spite of the sumptuousness of bridal finery, however, there is a general return to tradition in the whole set-up. There have been practically no brides wearing color, or going up the aile veilless or with strange and wonderful headdresses. This means that the Easter bride this year will follow suit. Wedding dresses in gorgeous satin brocades will be tops for brides, but they'll be in the conventional white, and worn with long and voluminous bridal veils, which will be of rarest lace or unstinted yards of tulle.

The wedding of Lady Elizabeth Percy, daughter of the duke of Northumberland, and mistress of the robes for Queen Elizabeth of England, to the marquess of Douglas and Clydesdale in London, set a style for squared veils. Hers was priceless heirloom lace, hung from a tiara, and worn with a bridal dress of white brocaded satin which had a low, rounded neckline.

Since that momentous wedding, the big dressmakers of London and Paris have hewed bridal veils to squared lines, and satin brocade is their favorite material. They are also cutting wedding dresses down at the top, leaving maidenly throats exposed.

Styles for the bridal party which are coming out take their cue from another grand wedding, that of Princess Frederika Louise of Hanover to Prince Paul of Greece, which took place at Athens. The duchess of Kent and her sister, Princess Paul of Jugo-Slavia were part of the cortège. Princess Nicolas of Greece, the mother of the duchess of Kent and Princess Helen of Rumania and Princess Irene of Greece, both sisters of King George, made it a royal procession. These women all have reputations for wearing clothes so that it is the cortège which inspires the styles—not what the bride wore.

Blue and rose was the color scheme for the feminine half of this wedding: Blue in hyacinth shades combined with rose in the color of pink roses. Molyneux of Paris dressed the attendants and important guests, led off by the duchess of Kent. Day-length dresses were worn by the young and moderately youthful, and long dresses by the older women such as Princess Nicolas of Greece.

The duchess of Kent's dress was made of shimmering hyacinth blue satin, and cut on princess lines. The only break in the long, moulded silhouette is a few gathers to drape it at the waistline. The lowish squared neckline of this model is important, for it approves the newest freedom of the neck, which is a leading fashion. The long sleeves of this model are set into deep armholes, and they are accented by draped folds of the satin which outline them in front and soften the neckline also. A bow of the satin is placed at the front of the square neckline. The duchess of Kent wore a wide blue hat with this dress and simple blue pumps on her feet.

By Nancy Cabot.

"Poppy Garden" is one of those quilt blocks which may be made in any or all the lovely shades of the original blooms. Orange, yellow, reds, or deep pinks may be selected for this lovely garden. The block is one of those attractive combinations of pieced and applique work. The entire coverlet is a mass of flowers, and the embroidery around the flowers enhances the quilt's charm. This is the type of coverlet which appeals to girls and young women, and one of which they never will tire, no matter how many years they use the quilt. Thirty applique blocks are set together with one and one-half inch bands of white, and surrounded by a one and one-half inch border and a one-half inch bias binding.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

When I was a small boy I was discovered up in an apple tree by the farmer. He wanted to know what I was doing up there. I told him I was there for research purposes because I was studying botany. I soon found out that he didn't believe me, because I got a good seat warming from the lether strap he had in his hand. Today I offer no alibis in making the rounds of restaurants. I'm fond of good food and if I run across some new dish or sauce or salad I'm going to pass it on to you. At that, there is nothing really new in the culinary art.

Once in a while I read about some exotic food that calls for a cherry or two, with some chopped nuts and whipped cream. Well, that's all right if you like it. The chef of Simpson's, on the Strand in London, makes a steak and kidney pie exactly the same as he did many years ago. No one can improve on the Hungarian goulash that the late Mme. Sacher served in her famous restaurant in Vienna, and I might also include a certain meat loaf that I always rave about. It was home cooked and O, what a dish.

These several dishes that I have mentioned, you will note, call for inexpensive cuts of meats. Slow cooking and plenty of basting are the secret for the tenderness and flavor. Over in Europe I have seen meats in the public markets that are almost as black as this type and I was amazed at the way this meat was cooked for tenderness and flavor.

Tell your butcher to cut one and one-half pounds of chuck or round of beef in cubes about one and one-half inches. Have him slice one-half pound of veal or lamb kidneys in edible size pieces. Fry out a little beef fat in a sauce pan and in that fat brown lightly one onion finely chopped. Now add the meat and kidneys and brown thoroughly. If you have a cup of good stock add that. If no stock, then use water. Season with a teaspoon of meat sauce, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, a very light pinch of cayenne pepper. Stir the whole mixture well, cover the saucepan, and send it on the way to cook. Let it simmer slowly for about two hours. If the sauce is too thin, thicken it with a little flour mixed to a smooth paste with a little water. Steak and kidney pie should have a fairly good quantity of sauce. That's easy—add more stock or water when the meat is nice and tender. Transfer it to an earthen or glass oven-proof casserole. Let it cool.

Now for the pastry covering. Chop three-quarters cup of shortening coarsely into two cups of flour, one teaspoon of salt, and one-half teaspoon of baking powder which have been sifted together. Separate one egg and mix the yolk with one-quarter cup of water. Cut this into the flour mixture. Roll the pastry on a lightly floured board to about one-third inch thickness. Cover casserole with pastry and brush top with egg white. Bake in hot oven until nicely browned.

Hungarian goulash also calls for inexpensive cuts of meat. Again tell the butcher to cut the meat, top round or chuck, in cubes of one and one-half inches. Fry out a little beef fat and brown the pieces of meat. Season with a teaspoon of salt and a light pinch of cayenne pepper.

To the meat add three pints of good stock, two buttons of garlic finely chopped, and one bay leaf. Cover sauce pan and let it simmer for two and one-half hours. Stir occasionally. About one hour before goulash is cooked add to it six medium sized potatoes—peeled, of course. Cream together three tablespoons of butter with two tablespoons of paprika and three tablespoons of flour with a little of the liquid from the goulash. Add this paste, not all at once, to the goulash for the purpose of thickening the sauce. Paprika is a necessary seasoning in goulash. Stir well and then add one cup of puree of tomato. Please remember that the sauce is important, so don't be too skimpy with it. Serve on large platter and garnish each end with cooked noodles.

Now we come to that home cooked meat loaf that is a favorite of mine. Again we have to conjure with inexpensive cuts of meats. If I keep on writing about these cheaper cuts I may be able to solve the high cost of dining. At any rate I will try to keep you within your budget. Let's call this dish Meat Loaf, Bourgeoise. Here is the list of ingredients:

½ pound ground pork
4 slices of bread [soaked in warm milk and drained]
½ pound ground veal
1 onion finely chopped
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Light pinch of cayenne pepper
2 eggs
1 cup of chili sauce
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup meat stock

Put the three meats, the bread, onion, seasonings, and beaten eggs in a large bowl. Mix and mix and then do some more mixing. I have never been able to do a good mixing job unless I used my hands. I think you will agree with me. Form the meat into a loaf about two inches thick. Place it carefully in a greased baking pan—but be sure to allow a space on all sides of the loaf. Cover the loaf with the chili sauce, dot with butter, and pour around the sides the stock. Bake in moderate oven for about fifty minutes and don't forget to baste every fifteen minutes.

There's a dish fit for the kings—the few there are left. O, yes, here's something else about this dish—if you think there is going to be too much, do not be concerned: it's good when served cold, the next day, with a little mayonnaise on the side.

While I am on this matter of inexpensive cuts of meat I am going to tell you next week about a food which to my way of thinking is one of the most delectable and the least expensive of any dish I have ever tasted. It calls for pennies, not dollars, and is accompanied with a sauce that you all will enjoy.

Through the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

Fine skin is preserved and beautified by regular use of a fine soap, one that is pure and so mild it does not contribute to the depletion of the natural oil. Exquisite toilet soaps, in beautiful fragrances, are the consistent choice of the fastidious woman.

The fastidious woman has a strong feeling about fine soaps. One cake of exquisite soap, charmingly packaged and beautifully perfumed, is truly exciting to her and to use it enhances her femininity. It's a private joy, but entirely aside from this she appreciates the fine soap because it is best for her skin. The bland soap is a guardian of the texture of skin on both face and body.

Right now, when chapped skin is almost a universal ailment, it's particularly important to use a soap that is bland. Recently we've been experimenting with two types, both made by the same house, an old and highly respected one.

One is a glycerine soap, transparent. The "chapped hands brigade" simply loves it. It yields a rich, creamy lather and actually does impart to the skin the delicate, always charming scent of white rose. It is available in both toilet and bath sizes, and if you take a tip from us you'll stock up on it this month. The price at the moment is especially attractive.

The other soap we like so well is opaque, to be used for the bath. It's a most economical soap, carefully made and aged. It gives an elegant lather in both hard and soft water, and both the lathering ability and the fragrance last until it's down to a thin sliver. It comes in a flock of pretty colors, but the fragrances are what thrill us most. We can't choose a favorite, although the geranium rose has a slight edge on our affections. You can take your choice of eau de cologne [this is a charming, simple, and very clean fragrance], lavender, lilac, violet, verbena, balsam pine, sandalwood, almond, mayflower, chypre, jasmin, and a couple of others. There's a cold cream soap in this assortment that has rather special appeal for the thin skinned.

The women with super-sensitive skins will like this line's super-fatted soap. It won't make even tissue-thin skin feel taut. This comes in five scents and in this, as in the others, the fragrance lasts long after the lather is rinsed away.

Alumnae of Smith Will Open Winter Meeting on Friday

One hundred and fifty delegates, representing fifty-nine classes and sixty-three of the seventy-seven Smith clubs throughout the country, will attend the annual midwinter meeting of the Smith College Alumnæ council to be held Feb. 18, 19, and 20 at Northampton, Mass.

President Neilson will speak at the first dinner next Friday. Sir Herbert Grierson of Edinburgh, visiting professor in English, will make his first address at the college to the members of the council.

Mrs. Ruth W. Crawford, director of admission, will be the first speaker at the opening council session that day. Mrs. Laura W. L. Scales, warden, will discuss the social activities within the college community. She will be followed by Clara Taplin, '38, president of the student council, who will introduce seven members of the judicial board.

Miss Virginia Corwin of the department of religion, dean of the freshman class, will talk at the session on Saturday morning.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, the Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

By Sally Joy Brown.

Judging from the contents of our mail, the very young generation needs some immediate attention. Infants, year old babies, and youngsters of kindergarten and pre-school age form a large, needy group.

Mrs. P. H., for instance, writes asking assistance for her tiny daughter.

"Dear Miss Brown: I have a new born baby girl, and have been staying with my mother since the death of my husband three months ago. I have only a few things for my little girl, including six diapers, two shirts and two dresses. I wonder if you could help me get some of the things she needs. She hasn't a bed or any blankets, and I can't take her to the welfare station until I get some clothing for her.

"My folks are on relief and have four small children. My father is ill and under a doctor's care. I don't want to ask them to deprive themselves of anything more, and I am at present unable to work."

Mrs. M., on the south side, is in need of clothing for her expected infant. Her husband is working, but on a very small salary, and there are several other children in the family.

Her letter says, in part: "I cannot furnish the necessary clothing for the newcomer, as I am just about able to pay a small clinic rate at a hospital where they have reduced it to the lowest price for me because of financial circumstances. The time is short and I am greatly worried."

A caseworker requests a baby carriage for one of her families. The mother has been instructed by infant welfare advisors to keep her baby outdoors as much as possible. The mother is not very strong, however, and is unable to carry the child any distance. The address is on the south side, and the worker will be glad to arrange transportation.

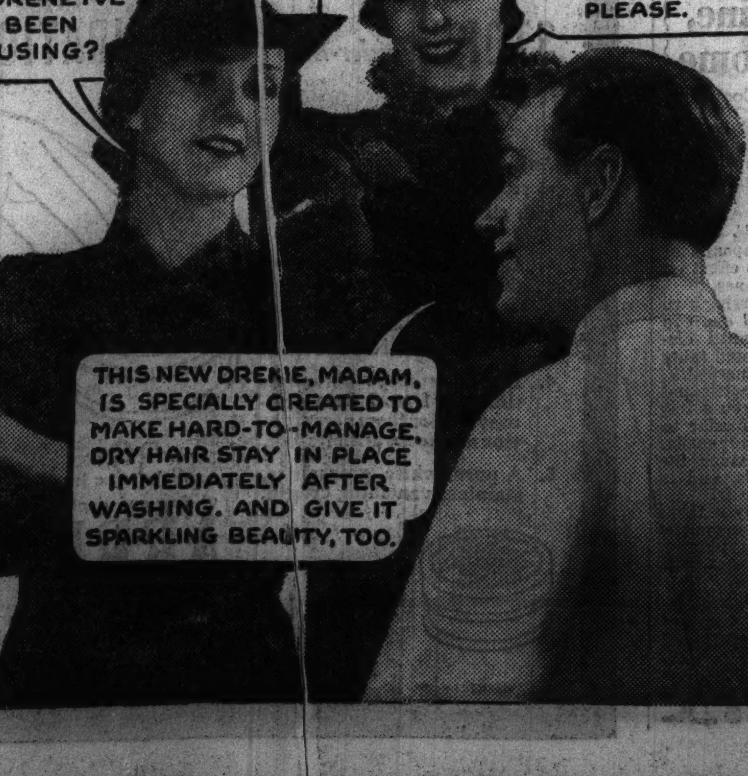
A hospital worker has requested a cot mattress and bed clothing for one of her patients, a boy 10 years old. He has been known to the hospital for several years, and was readmitted recently for further treatment of tuberculosis of the left hip and knee. He now is in a cast, and should have a bed to himself. His mother has a cot, but no mattress or bed coverings for it. There are four children in the family. Since the death of the father they have been living on a small pension. The address is on the north side of the city.

M. O. presents a rather unusual request, which we hope can be filled.

"Would you please ask, through your column, if any ex-Girl Scout leader has a uniform she would like to give me? I have had my troop for over two years, and my Scouts all are in uniform and cannot understand why their leader is not. They're too young to understand that a leader can give of herself—time, energy, and enthusiasm—but not have the money for a uniform. We have three daughters. I wear size 36 or 38, and would make necessary alterations. I will call anywhere in the city or suburbs."

Amazing! Brand New!

SPECIAL DRENE FOR DRY HAIR



Here, at last, is a shampoo that leaves dry, unruly hair wonderfully manageable immediately after washing . . . and sparkling with dazzling highlights

TODAY, a new Special Drene for Dry Hair has just been placed on the market which is thrilling women everywhere with its amazing gentle results. For it leaves even the driest hair as easy to manage as normal hair immediately after washing. And imparts a brilliance and glamorous beauty never before seen.

Your very first shampoo with this Special Drene for Dry Hair will prove a revelation to you, no matter how unruly, dull and lifeless your hair has been left after using old-fashioned methods. You will see your hair set perfectly—every strand in place—the minute you dress it. Beautiful highlights will dance and sparkle and your hair will abound with new life, new-found beauty.

This amazing shampoo is as safe as water on hair, and so different that the process by which it is made has been patented. It is not a soap—not an oil. It isn't anything you've heard of before. It's revolutionary—and its effect on dry hair is just as magical as the process by which it is made. There is nothing milder, nothing more effective that you can possibly use to clean your hair. And of another thing you can be certain—there is no safer, more beautifying shampoo in all the world. And healthy hair demands a safe shampoo.

Amazingly Easy and Quick to Use

You simply wet your hair, pour on a few drops and instantly you get a glorious, billowy, gentle lather. Five times more lather than soap in hardest water. You rub it briskly into the hair, rinse thoroughly—and you're through.

"What?" you say, "no vinegar, lemon or special after-rinses to 'cut' the lather? No brilliantine, pomades or sticky greases to make your hair stay down, and give it life and sparkle?" No, they are not necessary.

First Shampoo a Revelation

And how overjoyed you will be to find that your hair is not a snarled, tangled mass. That it is not left "wild" and unruly. That's the astonishing result of the new Special Drene for Dry Hair. When you set your hair, not only will every strand be in place—but your waves will be more radiant, more beautiful than you have ever seen them before.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

This seems to be the season for revivals. Stylists have been going back to earlier fashion eras for inspiration, and in my own humble little way I, too, have been digging into history, but not the kind that will help me pass my final exams in History 4! But I thought I could take time out from my studies long enough to concoct something old-but-new for your spring wardrobes. Here it is, the blouse and skirt ensemble strongly reminiscent of the famous Gibson girl's.

You have to be slim and youthful to wear this outfit. The blousy lines of the topper make a slender waist essential. There really is nothing to the blouse except plenty of fullness that is tucked into the waistband of the skirt. The sleeves, whether you have them long or short, are plenty full, too, while the neckline is either plain or adorned with a trim collar. Buttons are in evidence, and you may use any kind you like. My blouse with navy buttons is pink, affording pastel contrast for my navy skirt.

There's an audience today for every type of beauty. From the "picture book" girl to the classic. From the Broadwayesque blonde to the Park avenue gray haired matron. From the cute bit of feminine fluffiness to the black swathed sophisticate. Yes, styles in feminine beauty come and go. But today every woman stands her own ground provided that ground is basically well groomed and easy on the eyes of its own particular audience.

But I say that while styles in feminine beauty, influenced by hairdressers, fashion dictators, and big business, may come and go, there is one vogue that goes on forever, the vogue for the well bred appearance, which does not rely solely upon artifice.

The woman whose appearance reflects breeding, intelligence, and artistic sensitivity always has registered in history and always will. She can hold her own with the sophisticates even, as has been said, "if she were to wear a gunny sack and her hair streaming behind her back." Today this well bred type rides high on the wave of beauty popularity. In fact most of today's outstanding personalities are busy women whose time can not all be given to the superficial aspects of beauty. There is time in their program for care of the fundamental needs of personal upkeep, yes, but they are too busy with other things to have their minds constantly on themselves. They're busy studying dramatic rôles, perhaps; learning new languages; fostering social and political movements, and increasing their proficiency in the arts. There is much to know and so many things on which to improve that time can not be spent fussing about self. Understand, this is no attempt to underestimate the importance of grooming and all that goes with it. It is merely to point out that by now the personal upkeep should fit into a program that allows time for development of that beauty of face which comes from intellectual and artistic awareness, from strength of character, forcefulness of purpose, and from a keen alertness to life as an increasingly worth while adventure.

One who represents the type of beauty that knows no day or era, the type that survives all other styles, is Hortense Monath, a graceful gray eyed woman of 28, who has made a name for herself in the concert field as a pianist, but whose well rounded interests embrace a home, a husband, a son, and a large circle of friends. In addition to these interests she finds time to lend her talents and support to an organization whose chamber music series is making history in its new and fresh approach to the music of the famous composers.

These preoccupations necessarily require that beauty care have its place in her scheme of living, but not too absorbing a place. The point to be driven home to women now is that there are other worlds to conquer besides the personal upkeep one, and these other worlds are what contribute to the durability and enduring appeal of the type of which we speak.

Miss Monath leans naturally toward simple clothes of good line, fabric, and cut, because they best suit her type and are easiest to keep up. Such things as contribute to dress consciousness are deliberately ruled out. Her hats, while they lose nothing in dash, chic, and uplift of the morale, are chosen for her own particular coiffure. This frees her from an enslavement to the hairdresser, she explains, every time she changes her costume. If one gown proves successful, she frequently has it duplicated in other fabrics and colors. This gives variety to her wardrobe and saves time and patience in shopping and fitting.

This famous young artist does not bemoan the fact that leisure time is denied her for spending an entire afternoon in the shops matching gloves to bag, having her skin analyzed under a miscroscope for the exact shade of powder, or sitting at her table blending rouges and fingernail polishes. Instead, she takes shorter cuts to good grooming and makes valuable use of the time saved. Her coiffure, with long hair wound coronet fashion, is one which she can arrange herself.

To Get the Best Cough Medicine, Mix It at Home

Saves Good Money. No Cooking.

This famous recipe is used by millions of housewives, because there is no other way to obtain such a dependable, effective remedy for coughs that start from colds. It's so easy to mix—a child could do it.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. It's no trouble at all, and takes but a moment. No cooking needed.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough remedy, far superior to anything you could buy ready-made, and you get four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of severe coughs, giving you double-quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the inflamed membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Stepmother Presents Many Sided Problem

For stepmothers-to-be or adoptive mothers we have a group of booklets called "The Sudden Parents Reading Set." It will be necessary to send a large, self-addressed envelope and $.09 postage for it. Address Mrs. Gladys Bevans, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

The following letter to me will have so much interest for step-mothers-to-be that I am glad I have permission to print it, withholding the name, of course:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans:

"I am about to marry a widower who has two daughters, aged 4 and 9. I am afraid I am going to have some difficulty, especially with the older child, since she seems to resent the fact that I am to take her mother's place. She still remembers her mother very well, and does not hesitate to speak of her in my presence. For that matter, so do her paternal step-relatives, who, incidentally, have no objection to me.

"Is it right for these relatives to talk about their mother to the children? Should not some one close to the child speak to her before we are married, explaining to her the advantages of her father remarrying. I am sure I could make an excellent mother to these children if I am met half way. I do love them and want to give them all my devotion and care. But she resents very much my even touching her right now.

"Please write a column in the paper on this subject. Should I speak to the children regarding our forthcoming relationship before the father does? The children probably expect their father to marry me some day, but it has never been mentioned to them.

"Would it be wrong to try to make the older one forget her mother, so that she can try to be happy with her new mother?

"There must be many other young men and women with the same problem as mine, and I'm sure you would help us all if you wrote a column or two on this subject."

Probably in no situation is more all around adjustment required than in this one of a remarriage where there are children. The children have to adjust; the first wife's family has to adjust; the new wife surely does to children, husband, and relatives, and the husband has to adjust himself not only to the woman who has become his wife but to her ways with the children.

The new stepmother should have help from every one, because her's is not an easy undertaking. If the children are almost babies they will accept her more quickly and wholeheartedly. If the children are older, she has a more subtle task. Add to this the fact that she has jumped suddenly into motherhood and you have a picture of the problem that confronts her.

• • •

Now all this may sound discouraging, even overwhelming. But if a young woman feels as the one in today's letter does; if she loves children and ardently desires to make these children happy; if she is eager for motherhood; if she even puts her wits to work and determines to learn through reading what it's all about, then she looks upon it all as an interesting, even wonderful adventure. There have been many successful stepmothers whose children rise up and call them blessed.

Some of the points upon which this letter asks advice are general enough to be discussed right here.

Let us start with the little girls. The baby of the family probably won't present any difficulties as far as the new relationship is concerned. But the older little girl evidently adored her mother and misses her. This capacity for deep affection is something to admire and cherish as a quality. Her affections are probably not easily won but when they are, are well worth the winning. This child cannot be rushed or coerced. She must be met on her own ground. Any new mother, faced with this temperament, must proceed slowly and with tact, with gentleness and understanding.

If the child's repeated mention of her mother is tied up with grief, it is too bad. This will fade but must be given time. But to try to get her to forget her own mother would be a mistake. And nothing would win her heart more than for the new stepmother to show an interest in the devoted child's memories, little stories, ways, and anecdotes of the mother who is gone.

It is right and natural that the older daughter should speak freely of this mother to the woman who is to take her place. Also I can see no objection to the relatives speaking of the child's mother before her, as long as there is no animus there, and no comparisons or criticism of the step-mother-to-be. But they can and should do a helpful "building up" job for this marriage that is ahead, by their whole attitude and by the way they talk to the older child.

With a child as mature emotionally as this little girl, the matter should no longer be left up in the air. An affectionate straightforward talk with the child by her father, with explanations, should take place; but it should be in confidence and alone together so the child can express herself freely, and perhaps be able to talk away or even weep away some of her sad feelings and her resistance.

But perhaps the most important thing with older children is to make them feel you are not trying to replace their mother, nor insist that they call you mother.

Clotilde Children's Fashions

Youngsters with grownup tastes in clothes will like this pinafore princess dress. Mothers will appreciate the model, too, because although it has certain features of adult styling, it still is girlish and, above all, practical from the standpoint of laundering.

Use any type of washable fabric for the dress and select some soft shade. Then use contrasting material with ruffled edging for the shirtwaist collar, trim cuffs on the puffed sleeves and flaps on the two pockets. A strategically placed bit of the ruffling defines the waistline.

If you would like to employ a printed fabric you might follow the scheme suggested in the sketch at the right. Make the neck square and indent the sleeve line. Then put lace or lingerie ruffling at the neckline and sleeves and use pert bows for accent on the sleeves and down the bodice front. A sash may tie around the back.

Style No. 2063 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, and 12 years. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 35 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 35 inch contrasting.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning value. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Postage Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Almost every collector knows that the best stamps are those which are perfectly centered and entirely free from damage of any and every kind. It has been shown that such copies are relatively scarce and cost a great deal more than average commercial copies. If the stamps are unused, they must have full original gum, according to the majority of collectors.

Little emphasis has been given to the question of cancelations, and it is a fact that some collectors will sacrifice everything else to obtain perfect centering, placing stamps in their albums which, by reason of a heavy or smeared postmark, actually detract from the value of the entire page. Now and then a natural collector is found who selects his stamps for their beauty or appearance alone. He may have stamps with small thin spots, or even closed tears, and some stamps may be a little off center, but his used copies have neat and clear cut cancelations which never disfigure them, but which often add interest to the collection.

Beginners generally attempt to have their used copies as near unused as possible, but such stamps are not as satisfactory as those which show a cleanly impressed town mark—better still, the stamps which show a legible townmark, that is, enough of the letters of the town name so that there is no guess work. Some collectors will not agree with this, for many choose stamps which show the straight horizontal lines of the common machine killer as being the least harmful to the stamp design. Such cancelations are utterly characterless and ought to be avoided rather than collected.

The stamp design will not materially suffer if one or two points are observed when selecting copies. First, the postmark must be clean and not printed with an overinked die, and it must not slip in the impression, and second, the postmark should not close the eyes, if a portrait design, and if possible should miss the face entirely. Stamps other than portrait designs will not be harmed by the postmark if the focal point of the design is visible.

The collecting of legible postmarks on stamps often becomes an interesting sideline and there are instances where whole volumes have been filled with stamps bearing dated town marks, each town and date selected for the reason that something historical took place in that town on the particular day the stamp was postmarked. What collector of United States stamps would pass up a stamp postmarked Gettysburg, July 3, 1863, or Chicago, Oct. 9, 1871, or San Francisco, April 18, 1906, if he realized the historical significance of the city and date?

Stamp Notes.

A stamp collector has pointed out an error in the second stamp recently issued to commemorate the 150th anniversary of Sydney, Australia. The stamp shows Capt. Phillip at Sydney Cove in 1786 and his uniform includes epaulets. Actually these ornaments were not a part of the British naval uniform until 1795.

The Costa Rican stamps issued in connection with the Exposition of Agriculture, Industry and Commerce, in December, 1937, include a few unusual designs. The 1c value is in the form of a square with diagonal axis vertical and shows a spray of the flower Guria Morada in violet and green. The 2c is a gray stamp in triangular form and shows a tuna fish. The 3c is chocolate, identical in size and shape with the 1c and shows a cocoa pod, and the 5c and 10c are in the regular rectangular shape. The former, in green, pictures a load of bananas on the way to market, while the latter, in red, shows a typical cart load of coffee.

Part 7 Drama Movies Education

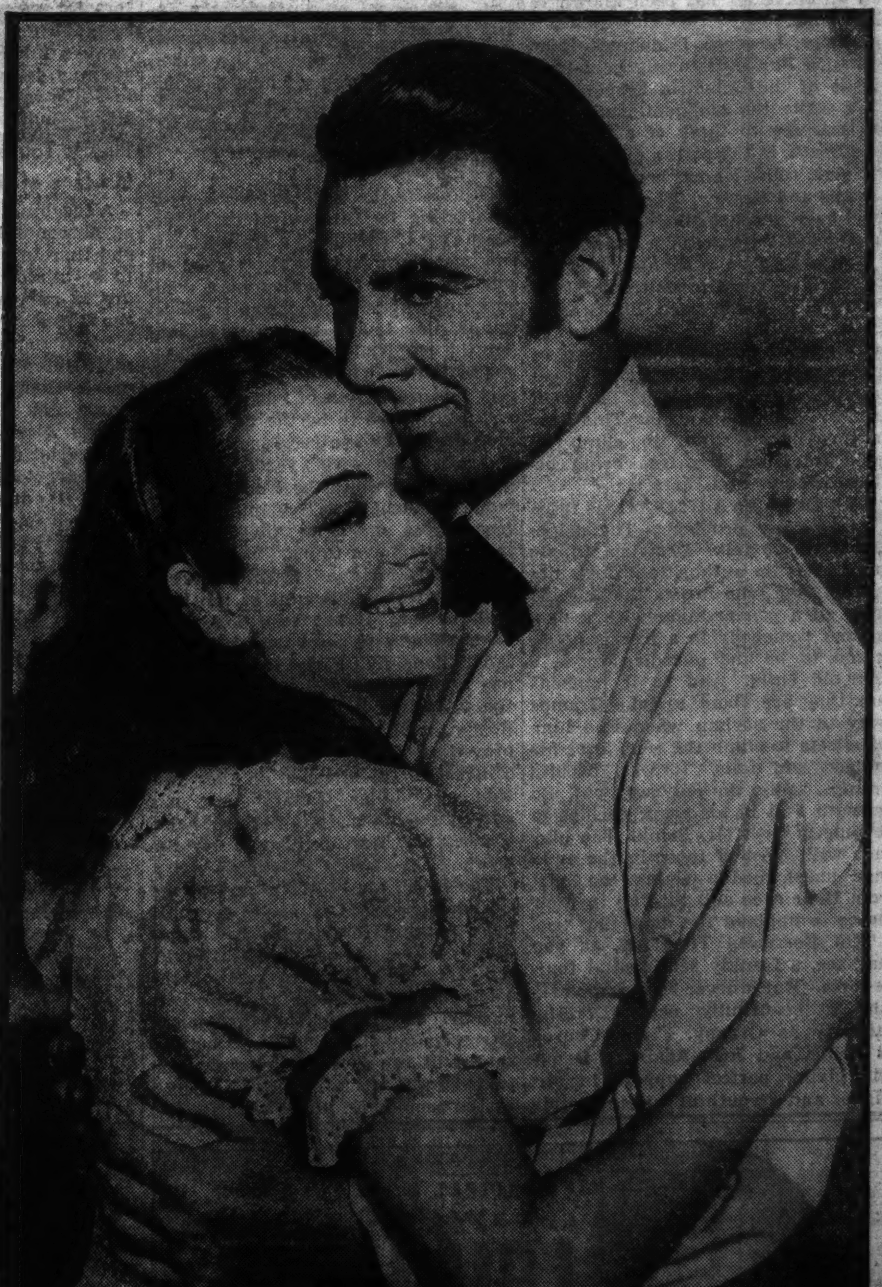
Annabella whom you saw in "Wings of the Morning." You'll see her and, we hope, like her in a coming release, "The Baroness and the Butler." William Powell is her co-star.

There is sunshine in the smiles Ginger Rogers turns on the world. This picture is a "still" from "Stage Door," in which Miss Rogers is appearing on the Palace screen.

Jane Withers and Thomas Beck have a great deal to do in "45 Fathers." (State-Lake.) Mr. Beck isn't one of the papas, but he's No. 1 boy with Jane—as you can see.



George Brent and Olivia de Havilland learn that gold is where you find it in their current movie. It's title? "Gold Is Where You Find It!"

Acting of New Stars in "Tonight at 8:30" Surprises Audiences

By CHARLES COLLINS.

The surprise of Chicago's dramatic season is Noel Coward's omnibus collection of short plays called "Tonight at 8:30," now beginning its third week at the Harris theater and apparently settling down for a run. We heard something about the entertainment value of these nine jeux d'esprit from Mr. Coward's protean pen, but not a great deal, when they were given in New York and other eastern cities about a year ago, with the author himself and Gertrude Lawrence as co-stars. We knew practically nothing about their revival for a tour, however, with another cast and under new management, until the Chicago première two weeks ago.

• • •

A young man from Ann Arbor, Mich., Robert Henderson, was the impresario who had undertaken to bring Mr. Coward's anthology into the city upon which the author-actor-composer had put the sophisticates' curse ten years ago, because of the failure of "The Vortex." (See his book of memoirs called "Present Indicative.") The four stars whom Henderson had assembled to perform Mr. Coward's and Miss Lawrence's various and tricky duties were recognizable personalities of the stage, but cosmopolitan glamor did not radiate from them in advance. Therefore Chicago's first nighters began to sniff at the "Tonight at 8:30" bait with a certain degree of suspicion. It might, they thought, be "another one of those things," in spite of Mr. Coward's reputation as a glitterer.

• • •

These unexpressed doubts, based upon the tradition that nothing of merit can come to the Chicago stage without the complete blessing of New York, vanished shortly after the curtain rose on the first play of the opening bill—an experiment in lyric mockery at Victorian manners called "Family Album." The company was immediately accepted as able to cope with anything that Mr. Coward had written, and as the repertory progressed through its three programs, skeptics became converted into enthusiasts.

Of all repertory companies that I have ever seen, except that of the Abbey theater of Dublin,

'On Borrowed Time' More Than Lives Up to Its Promise

Grandfather and Boy Story Carries Appeal

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—There is satisfaction in that week of playgoing that reveals even one new play that lives up to its promise. There is additional satisfaction if the satisfying play betters its promise. This happened last week in the case of Paul Osborn's dramatization of Lawrence Edward Watkin's "On Borrowed Time." The play, sponsored by a liberal and sanely minded midwesterner, Dwight Deere Wiman, has been touring the eastern tryout territory with Richard Bennett cast for a principal character. Illness recently forced Mr. Bennett out of the cast and his part has been taken over by Dudley Digges, late of the Theater Guild, and for many years one of the stalwart character actors of the Broadway theater.

Readers of Mr. Watkin's novel will recall "On Borrowed Time" as another addition to the growing list of stories with a spiritually speculative background. We have so far this season entertained three of them, and two have scored hits—Maxwell Anderson's "The Star Wagon" and "Father Malachy's Miracle." The unsuccessful third was J. B. Priestley's "Time and the Conways."

The Anderson drama carries a dreaming inventor back to the days of his youth and permits him to marry "the other girl." "Father Malachy's Miracle" permits a trusting little priest to prove that God, being interested, can perform as striking miracles in the twentieth century as he performed two thousand years ago. "Time and the Conways" permitted a sensitive daughter of the Conways to look ahead twenty years and see what became of the high hopes and earthly ambitions of her brothers and sisters. "On Borrowed Time" permits a lovable 80 year old grandfather to chase Death, masquerading as a certain Mr. Brink, up a tree and hold him there for a period of time. "On Borrowed Time," I think, is the most humanly appealing of the three.

Story of Grandfather and Boy Is Appealing.

You will, I think, have to go as far back as Frances Hodgson Burnett's "Little Lord Fauntleroy" to find a story in which a sentimental grandfather and a small boy are brought into such appealing relation as they are in "On Borrowed Time." Pud Northrup, 6 years old, has been left an orphan by the death of his father and mother in an automobile accident. Granny Northrup, nearing 80, is for turning Pud over to a slightly acidulous and conventionally spinsterish aunt, who is interested primarily in the boy's inheritance. Granny doesn't like the aunt, but she doesn't think Pud should be brought up close to his grandfather, who swears a lot and on occasions has been known to blaspheme.

Gramps, however, is damned if he will turn Pud over to any goldarned female of the Demetria Ripple type. It is while the old gentleman, past 80, is trying to think of a way out that Death, in the person of the kindly Brink, calls. He has come for both Gramps and Granny. They are tired, they have finished their work, and they would, he says, be a lot happier if they would go with him. Granny is ready. Quietly she smiles her farewells and is lost in sleep. But Gramps rebels. No, sir. Mr. Brink can go chase himself, take a hop, or jump in the lake, or just disappear. He is not going to get Gramps. And he doesn't. The next day Mr. Brink calls again. This time Gramps induces him to climb an apple tree and, the tree being bewitched, holds him there.

With Death up a tree Gramps faces a lot of other problems. The neighbors begin to talk. Demetria Ripple appeals to the authorities. Certainly any old man who insists that he can carry on a conversation with a nonexistent somebody in a tree is no fit person to be the guardian for a 6 year old child. And so it happens that they are about to take Gramps away to the asylum when Pud himself elects to climb the tree, loses his balance and falls. It was, decides Gramps, sadly, the only way out. So he, with Pud in his arms, decides to go quietly with Mr. Brink. The play ends with most of those in the audience unashamedly wiping the mist from their eyes and turning in their places to applaud the departing trio.

"On Borrowed Time" is, as you may see, a frankly sentimental tour-de-force. But it never becomes mawkish, is beautifully acted—Dorothy Stickney as Granny, Frank Conroy as Brink, and Jean Adair, as Demetria giving perfect support to Mr. Digges and a youthful and incredibly competent, Peter Holden—and is certain, I feel, to be not only one of the talked of dramas of this season in New York, but one of the talked of pictures probably of next season.

Federal Theater Unit Revives "Coriolanus."

Otherwise the week has been made interesting by the revival of Shakespeare's "Coriolanus," a tragedy that has not been previously staged in our time; the production of a well-meaning but fairly undramatic propaganda play trying to say something for the child laborers of the tobacco fields, called "Sunup to Sundown," and the production of what I at this writing believe to be the most offensive drama I have seen in a theater in nigh onto forty years of playgoing. This would be Erskine Caldwell's "Journeyman," adapted by Alfred Hayes and Leon Alexander, up to now unknown to me.

The "Coriolanus" is the work of the New York state unit of the Federal theater. It has been done with all the Shakespearean trappings, and sanely done, by Charles Hopkins, who has been working with this unit for the last year in a rural theater at Roslyn, on Long Island. And it has proved surprisingly good theater. In contrast to the stripped or alley version of "Julius Cæsar" that has stirred the town, it is better Shakespeare, but less exciting entertainment.

The character of the proud young Coriolanus is that of one who would have nothing to do with the democratic mob and questioned the intelligence and right to rule of the common people. You probably remember, as I did not, that Coriolanus, after winning all his country's battles, sniffed at the people's determination to make him consul. He was banished by the people and joined with Rome's enemies to lay her low. Finally a victor at the gates of Rome, he was won over by the pleading of his proud mother, Volumnia. Coriolanus is played, and excellently played, by a young unknown named Erford Gage. Which proves again that if the Federal theater has accomplished no other good, it has given the talented but obscure actor a chance.

Author Not Angry Enough, Play Fails.

The propaganda play that fails because its author, Francis Edwards Faragoh, was not quite angry enough to drive home his message, is "Sun-up to Sundown." It won a prize offered by the International Ladies Garment Workers' union, the same group that has staged "Pins and Needles" with great success. It has to do with a group of child workers on a tobacco plantation "in any one of forty-two tobacco growing states." [Forty-two, imagine that!] Might be Connecticut. Might be Texas.

The children are exploited, not cruelly, but in keeping with custom and a fixed tradition. As they grow up they are replaced by smaller and younger children, who are cheaper and quicker. They have no more than a scant living in the present and less than a scant promise in the future. Two of them, Andy, who is nearly twenty, and Marta, who is 15 and Mexican, want to get married. They have the inclination and the license, but their marriage would interfere with their work and is otherwise impractical. So Andy runs away.

Now, Marta is going to have a baby, which complicates the situation, so the other children call a conference and agree that Marta should take her license, lie a little, and marry Buddy, who is Andy's 16 year old brother. Marta and Buddy try to get married, but the village ministers for miles around just laugh at them. They are so very young. So Marta's family, all hired under one contract, is fired and have to go back to following the crops looking for jobs. Buddy is left weeping alone.

Play Is Touching in Many of Its Scenes.

A touching play in many of its well-acted scenes, but a play with no drive, and therefore ineffectual. Folks have to be stirred to partisanship if they are to approve propaganda plays in the theater. Florence McGee who made a name for herself being the most unlovely of brats in "The Children's Hour," here plays the sympathetic Marta, and a young fellow named Jack Jordan comes in for a great deal of praise as Buddy.

"Journeyman" was the offensive play. I am hoping it will be withdrawn before you read this reference to it, as it is quite likely to be. There is a degree of nastiness that even smirking, giggling Broadway audiences have no use for. "Journeyman" is an Erskine Caldwell story set in the same locale practically as that of "Tobacco Road." It is, however, without the social significance of "Tobacco Road" and has none of the cleansing laughter that is greatly responsible for the long-lived success of that comedy.

Fletcher Acts Nine Roles in Coward's Play

now in Chicago, these players of "Tonight at 8:30"—Estelle Winwood, Bramwell Fletcher, Helen Chandler, and Jessie Royce Landis, with some able assistants—seem the most versatile. They flit from one rôle to another with surprising skill in characterization; they present so many variations in personality that they never become monotonous.

Coward's Absence Is "Break" for Chicago.

On these three bills Mr. Fletcher appears in nine characters; Miss Winwood in seven; Miss Chandler in seven, and Miss Landis in five. Mr. Fletcher is Mr. Coward's successor in the casts, and probably is a much better actor. If their difference could be tested in any exact way, I should not be surprised to find that Mr. Fletcher, who is quite unlike Mr. Coward in appearance and style, is his superior in acting by at least 100 per cent.

His contribution to "Tonight at 8:30" is astonishing in its all round skill and sustained charm. He came here almost unknown, remembered chiefly for participation in a drama of the murder mystery type called "Ten Minute Alibi," but within a week he was a brilliant candidate for any playgoer's list of favorite actors.

Fletcher's rôles in "Tonight at 8:30" range from the superficial to the intense; they include flippant young men of the world, comic cockneys, and mature Britons in tragic love affairs. In cataloging them, I find that he acts four typical Coward characters—urbane and epigrammatic scions of the aristocracy; two low-life fellows—the frustrated clerk in "Fumed Oak" and the variety hall performer in "Red Peppers"; two doctors—the unbalanced psychiatrist in "The Astonished Heart" and the romantic general practitioner in "Still Life"; and one ornate Victorian gentleman—the rococo spokesman for "Family Album." His finest study, I feel, is the quiet physician in "Still Life," who is never too much in love to lose his professional manner.

This play, dealing with the meetings of a pair of illicit lovers in a railway station, also represents the best work, to my taste, of Estelle Winwood and Helen Chandler, the former as an eccentric vendor of lunch counter supplies, the latter as her own winsome self. Jessie Royce Landis has her most effective passages as the seductrix in "The Astonished Heart" and the heroine of the fantasy called "Shadow Play." All of the women stars run Mr. Fletcher a close race for honors.

Taken as a whole, "Tonight at 8:30" reveals an obsession with adultery in Noel Coward's mind. This breach of the moral code is either contemplated, consummated, or regretted in five of the nine plays; and it serves as an important footnote to three of the others. This insistence on the same theme would become a bore but for Coward's technical skill in change of pace. Although harping on one string, he contrives to give the impression that he is juggling the wit and wisdom of the ages.

Chicago Premiere of "Silver Jubilee."

The Abbey Theater company of Dublin will begin the second and last week of its engagement at the Grand Opera house tonight with the only play in its touring repertory that Chicago audiences have not seen. This is "Silver Jubilee," by Cormac O'Daly, which will be given with Synge's "Riders to the Sea" as curtain raiser. The bill will be repeated on Monday and Tuesday nights.

"Silver Jubilee" was awarded first prize in a competition conducted by the Abbey theater last year. Three hundred manuscripts were submitted, and the Abbey's board of directors selected six to be referred to an outside board of judges, composed of Sean O'Faolain, a novelist, and Rutherford Mayne, a dramatist. They could not agree upon a first choice; each selected a different favorite and refused to enter into a compromise. The Abbey's directors solved the problem by taking the matter out of the judges' hands and choosing a prize winner for themselves.

Cormac O'Daly is a pseudonym which was used to conceal the identity of the author during the competition. F. R. Higgins, managing director of the tour, says that he cannot remember the playwright's first name, but that his last name is York, and that he is an actor in an obscure repertory company which travels among the smaller cities of Ireland.

More than 400 plays have been produced by the Abbey theater during its thirty-odd years of activity, and a large majority have come from writers who were unknown as men of letters. A striking example is Paul Vincent Carroll, an Irish school teacher in Glasgow, whose "Shadow and Substance," first staged at the Abbey, is now a great box office success in New York. In this unusual case the American rights were purchased by an impressario of the "commercial" type [Eddie Dowling] before the Abbey had considered the possibility of using the play on an American tour.

A STAR IN PLAYS BY NOEL COWARD

Helen Chandler, former film star, is prominent in the nine short plays by Noel Coward called "Tonight at 8:30," now at the Harris theater. She has seven roles in this repertory.

Galliano Masini and Jussi Bjoerling, tenors, both of whom made their American debuts with the Chicago City Opera company last fall, have been engaged by the Metropolitan Opera association in New York for next season. Both singers will also appear in Chicago with the local opera company before the opening of the Metropolitan season.

Dolly Kay to Lead Revue at Royale Cafe

A new floor show is in preparation at the Royale Frolics café, and next Friday is the probable starting time. Dolly Kay, contralto singer who entertained there for many months last season, is returning. Sidney Tomack and the Reiss brothers, comedians, will count this their fourth consecutive engagement at the Royale. New performers will be Richards and the Adrienne Trio; the Joyce Brothers and Dean; and Anita Jacobi. Jack Hilliard will lead the musical numbers in which the 28 ballet girls appear. Mark Fisher's and Al Turk's bands will continue.

- Lou Holtz returned to the Chez Paree last Friday night in a new floor show, with the Preisser Sisters, specialty dancers, and Ruth Harrison and Alex Fisher, ballroom dancers, as co-stars. Other entertainers are Dorothy Colt, singing girl now making her Chicago debut, and Duke McHale, dancer. The chorus appears in new costumes and evolutions. Henry Busse's orchestra remains.
- Herbie Kay's and Bill Carlsen's orchestras play in the Trianon ballroom today. Paul Pendarvis' band is at the Aragon, with Emil Velazco as organ soloist.

- The Hi-Hat Club has a new bill with three headliners: Nan Blackstone, Armida, and Willie Shore. Miss Blackstone sings original songs. Armida is a Mexican singing and dancing girl; and Willie Shore is a dancing comedian familiar to cafè patrons.
- The new show which opened last Friday at Colosimo's contains: Al Gale, comedian; Grisha and Brona, dancers; Yvette Ruggel, singer; Marty and Ray, wire walkers; Vera Dunn, soubrette; the Three Elites, dancers; the Lytell Sisters, and Henri Gendron's orchestra.
- Louis Armstrong, trumpter, directs a dance band at the New Grand Terrace. The 5100 Club has 27 entertainers and Eddie Cole's band. Billy Carr is having a long run as master of ceremonies at the 606 Club. Earl Hoffman's band plays for dancing at the Ivanhoe.
- Harriet Norris, singer, leads the bill in the Club Alabam, with Inez Gamble, dancer; Monie Morrison, Marrita Ryan, Effie Burton and the Paramount singing Trio.

Miss Hayes' Tour

Helen Hayes recently concluded her 88th playing week in "Victoria Regina," and thus equaled her long run record of a decade ago in "Coquette." She appeared in the latter play for 88 weeks in New York and on tour, ending in Los Angeles in the early autumn of 1929. "Victoria Regina," too, will terminate in Los Angeles. The closing date there is scheduled for June 25.

Every Concert Unique, Says Critic—Can Never Happen Again

Explains Why Music Lovers Desert Harths

By Edward Barry.

Even on the harshest evenings of winter loop bound trains and street cars fairly bulge with hardy concertgoers. In many cases these people have left warm, dry homes and have braved the trip downtown simply to hear music which they have heard a hundred times before. Often they have left behind, in those warm, dry homes, a record library containing virtually everything awaiting them at the concert hall. Quite possibly the recordings bear the names of the very artists whom they have come downtown to hear.

Then why have they exchanged their soft, drowsy davenports for the spartan seats of the theater, the comfort of old rusty dressing gowns for the fussy clothes thought proper for the public eye, the economy of evenings at home for concerts whose cost, when you add the price of an after-the-show phosphate, is likely to run to astronomical figures?

A full answer to these questions would require first of all a reading into the record of that four volume work on the gregarious instinct which some cloistered psychologist is doubtless even now compiling. But there is a purely musical reason which is fully capable of explaining the conduct of these loop bound concertgoers.

The performance they are about to hear is unique. It has never happened before—it can never happen again.

Age of Composition Does Not Alter Fact.

This is true even though the actual piece of music to be heard is a century old. It is true even though the artist who is to play or sing it has played or sung it a thousand times in the past.

For, despite all that you hear about the sacredness of the composer's conception and about the duty of the performer to reproduce this conception exactly, the hard fact remains that ten equally conscientious interpreters will present ten different versions of this conception. And the number of versions which a single conscientious performer will present is roughly equal to the number of times he plays or sings the composition.

Now this is due partly, of course, to the obvious fact that even the simplest piece of music contains a thousand subtleties of tone, phrasing, dynamics, etc.—and to the consequent impossibility of ever performing it twice in exactly the same manner. Much more important, however, is the truth that a work of music, if it be a good one, has many facets. It not only means many things to many persons, but it means different things to the same person at various periods of his life and in differing mental states.

Always Chance for Sudden Intuition.

There is always the chance that an artist, either because he has given further study to an old work or because he receives a sudden intuition in the course of its actual performance, will give it a new and exciting twist. His handling of phrases, his dynamic gradations—even the tempo itself in certain passages—may suddenly make clear what always was obscure. The familiar music is quite likely to take on an enchanting new meaning—so new a meaning that a hearer will be ready to swear that he has never heard the piece before.

But is not musical notation an exact science, a means of fixing the composer's conception forever on the printed page? It most certainly is not! The printed page can give only a rough outline, and a thousand details of color, accent, force, and pace must be left to the discretion of the performer. His sympathies and intuitions enable him to build a finished structure on the blueprints supplied by the composer.

Ferruccio Busoni, in his "New [as of 1907] Esthetic of Music," raged against the earthiness implicit in dogged worship of musical notation—worship of the signs which the composer has set to point the way to something higher and freer. "It is for the interpreter to resolve the rigidity of the signs into the primitive emotion," he says. And again: "What the composer's inspiration, necessarily loses through notation, his interpreter should restore by his own [inspiration]."

Analogy of Day Is Used to Drive Point.

Denying the possibility and even the desirability of interpreting a piece always in the same manner and yet conceding the fact that there is an underlying pattern which should be respected, Busoni uses the analogy of day. Each one begins differently from the one which has preceded it, yet always with the flush of dawn.

But, you say, even if we grant for the moment that musical notation is a crude and inadequate device and that it is not possible to find the composer's conception except by intuition, is not that conception, when once found, the standard, the proper, the only conception? Luckily, no. Composers themselves have changed their minds about their own conceptions, have even written them out in differing ways at various periods of their lives. This suggests that a musical conception is a growing rather than a fixed thing. Why should not the interpreter be allowed to assist in such growth?

The recording which a loop bound concertgoer has left in his home is a valuable interpretation, usually a good interpretation. It is not a final, a definitive interpretation. There is no such thing.

SYMPHONY SOLOIST

Vladimir Golschmann.

With his triumphant successes at Ravinia Park last summer still fresh in memory, Vladimir Golschmann will return to Chicago this afternoon to conduct his own St. Louis Symphony orchestra in Orchestra hall. The proceeds will be devoted to prize awards in the annual contest for young musicians sponsored by the club.

Mr. Golschmann has put together a strong and interesting program:

Symphony No. 2, D major .... Sibelius
Eine Kleine Nachtmusik .... Mozart
Polka and Fugue from "Schwanda the Piper" .... Weinberger

Tuesday evening in Mandel hall the Renaissance society at the University of Chicago will present Serge Prokofieff, eminent Russian composer, in a piano recital devoted entirely to his own compositions.

For novelties his program Tuesday includes four pieces for children, played for the first time in America, and three fragments from the "Romeo and Juliet" ballet music performed by the Chicago Symphony orchestra under the composer's baton last year.

Two unusually well recommended Czechoslovakian artists will share a joint recital at the Studebaker theater today. Gertrude Pitzinger, mezzo-soprano, will sing an aria from Handel's "Julius Caesar" and lieder by Schumann, Brahms, and Wolf. Ruda Firkusny, pianist, will make his Chicago bow in the Schumann C major fantasy and works by Smetana, Suk, and Prokofieff.

The "Infant" suite of Radie Britain will be the novelty of today's Illinois Symphony orchestra concert in the Great Northern theater under the direction of Albert Goldberg. Ruth Lyon, prominent radio soprano, will be soloist in the following program:

Overture to "Fidelio" .... Beethoven
Symphony, G major ["Military"] .... Haydn
Overture—Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet" .... Tschaikowsky
Botschaft .... Brahms
Serenade .... Strauss
[Ruth Lyon.]
"Infant" Suite .... Radie Britain
[First time in Chicago.]
Elegie, for cello and orchestra .... Fauré
[Jenska Slebos.]
Passacaglia and Fugue, D minor .... David Van Vactor

Eugene List, a phenomenally talented 18 year old pianist, will play in Chicago for the first time with the Chicago Symphony orchestra at its Thursday-Friday concerts this week. The symphony will be the first work in that form by Gardner Read of Evanston. This composition won the $1,000 prize awarded last year by the New York Philharmonic Symphony society for a symphony by an American composer, and was played in New York last season, Frederick Stock will conduct the pair of concerts:

Eugene List.

Sonta, "Pian e Forte" .. Giovanni Gabrieli
[Edited by Theodore Thomas.]
"Brandenburg" Concerto No. 3, G major .... Bach
Symphony No. 1, A minor .. Gardner Read
[First time in Chicago.]
Concerto No. 3, C minor, for piano .. Beethoven

By Cecil Smith.

A remarkable panorama of operatic development stretching across three centuries will be brought into view at the Auditorium theater this week in the course of eight performances by the Salzburg Opera guild. Of the five operas in their répertoire Monteverdi's "The Coronation of Poppea" was first produced in 1642, Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" in 1789, Rossini's "The Matrimonial Market" in 1810, Darius Milhaud's "The Poor Sailor" in the late 1920s, and Jacques Ibert's "Angélique" in 1930. These five operas provide an enormous chronological extension of our year's operatic experience, since the span covered by the Chicago City Opera company répertoire [with the single exception of Walter Damrosch's "The Man Without a Country"] extended only from Rossini's "The Barber of Seville" [1816] to Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier" [1911].

The Salzburg Opera guild, now in the course of its first tour across America, is less than four years old. Paul Czonka, its director since the beginning, has told something of the motives that led him to bring his personnel together.

"Our company," he said, "was born out of rebellion and dissatisfaction in the summer of 1934. Our rebellion was against conventional opera, conventionally produced, and enslaved by the star system.

Requires Months of Stern Rehersals.

"It required six months of stern rehersals in a small Tyrolean village to make ready only one production ['Cosi Fan Tutte']. Avoiding stellar singers and prima donnas, the weight of our efforts was toward the creation of effective ensemble. We obtained singers of high capability who were not irreparably encrusted with that strange patina which comes of too much exposure in the limelight."

The first productions of "Cosi Fan Tutte" was so successful that the other operas in the répertoire were put into rehersal, to be prepared with equal care.

Three Productions Are Comic Operas.

Three of the operas are comic—"Cosi Fan Tutte," "The Matrimonial Market," and "Angélique." The other two, "The Coronation of Poppea" and "The Poor Sailor," deal with murder and those other despicable areas of human conduct usually treated with relish by operatic librettists.

Of all the works in this delectable list of musical rarities, funny and grim, Monteverdi's "The Coronation of Poppea" is the most unusual. No opera of anywhere nearly equal antiquity ever has been given in Chicago. Purcell's "Dido and Æneas," heretofore the oldest opera produced here, is nearly fifty years younger.

The original Monteverdi score, as it has survived in Italian libraries, is exceedingly incomplete. All of the vocal parts are recorded in the score, but the orchestral accompaniment consists of absolutely nothing except a bass part. Several musical scholars at one time or another have filled out the harmony and orchestrated the music. The creator of the Salzburg Opera guild's version is Ernst Krenek, Viennese-Czech composer of the once sensational jaz opera, "Jonny Spielt Auf."

As will be seen from the week's schedule, only two of the operas are of full length, and the others will be offered in double and triple bills:

Tonight at 8:15—"Cosi Fan Tutte." [Closing event in Northwestern university History and Enjoyment of Music series.]
Monday evening—"The Matrimonial Market" and "Angélique."
Wednesday evening—"The Poor Sailor," "The Matrimonial Market," and "Angélique."
Thursday evening—"Cosi Fan Tutte."
Saturday matinée—"Cosi Fan Tutte."
Saturday evening—"The Coronation of Poppea."

A wholly different but equally impressive variety of old and new music will be sung in Orchestra hall Monday evening by the St. Olaf Lutheran choir under Dr. F. Melius Christiansen. This world famous choir, one of the fairest flowers in the field of American amateur music, is widely known and admired both for its high standards of performance and for the discriminating taste of its director. No choral director in America has seen his influence spread more widely or more valuably than Dr. Christiansen.

"Hvad Est Du Dog Skjön" .... Grieg
"Misericordias Domini" .... Durante
Cherubim Song .... Glinka
"We Have No Other Guide" .... Schvedoff
Psalm 23 .... Schreck
"Autumn Woods" .... Paul Christiansen
"Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming" .... Praetorius
"Beauty in Humility" .... F. Melius Christiansen
"Lost in the Night" .. F. Melius Christiansen
"Praise to the Lord" .... Peter Söhren
"Beautiful Savior" ... F. Melius Christiansen
"The Three Kings" .... Romeau

Many, though not all, of the items on the program are drawn from the great musical literature that has sprung up in the nurturing warmth of the Lutheran church.

Method Linking High School, College Hailed

By the Rev. John Evans.

More than 10,000 college students were examined this year on their qualifications for admission to the medical schools of the country. The number, however, subsequently enrolled was limited and the ratio of women to men very small. Northwestern university, for example, this year admitted 150 students to its medical school, of which only four were women.

St. Xavier's college for women, 4950 Cottage Grove avenue, in the fall of 1934 effected such curricular changes as would bring the high school studies for the last two years in closer relation with the lower biennium of the college course.

That Martha Anne Burke, graduate of St. Xavier, was among the four women selected for admission to the medical school of Northwestern university is regarded by the faculty as endorsement of the modern attitude toward secondary education integrating the school and college courses.

St. Xavier college was the first Catholic college for girls in the middle west to install the new method by which a student, arrived at the year when specialization should begin, can decide intelligently what studies should be taken for graduation because the cultural foundation has been well established.

With the spread of junior colleges, this educational policy is today familiar to the public. But Sister Camillus, director of general education, pointed out during an interview that it required courage three years ago, when Mother Sophia was president of the college, to take a pioneer step in education and to initiate a curriculum, the wisdom of which parents did not grasp and the aim of which pupils could not comprehend.

"Opposition arose" Sister Camillus explained, "from the fact that people are always fearful of anything novel. It is a human peculiarity to be more afraid of a new idea than a new disease. But without vision there can be no progress, and now after three years the vision that St. Xavier college then had is now the recognized ideal of education."

The faculty committee formed to bring about these changes consisted of Sister Irma, dean; Sister Camillus, then professor of German; Sister Celeste, head of the department of social sciences; Sister Mary Loyola, head of the English department, and Sister Genevieve, then registrar and now president of St. Xavier college.

Before this integration scheme was put in the latter two years of high school did not sufficiently prepare for the first two years of college. Either some study was lacking or a study might be taken over again, and in either case there was waste of time and effort. The committee, consequently, instituted "survey courses" in five subjects—physical sciences, general culture, social sciences, and religion-philosophy—which now constitute the lower biennium.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — [Special.] — With the announcement that Frances Dee has been assigned to leading rôles in two important features, over at Paramount, comes the news of the birth of a son to Arline Judge, now wife of Dan Topping. These things might seem unrelated, but the connection is this, that movie stars no longer have any qualms about losing their screen lure by becoming mothers. True, some adopt them but motherhood, real or by adoption, is not only possible but happily accomplished as part of the life of a movie luminary.

No one used to concede that a film star could get far if she started raising children. In the old silent days, Irene Rich was regarded as a seven days' wonder because she broke into films after having two children.

Frances Dee was just a young star who had done a couple of good things when she married Joel McCrea a few years ago. Joel made no secret of believing that fatherhood and motherhood were something to look forward to. "I don't believe that one's personal life should suspend, even for a period, because of a picture career," Joel told us, not long after his marriage. After the first baby, Joel II., who is now 3, Frances had a much coveted part given her, that of Amelia in the big color production of "Becky Sharp." Almost on the heels of that came other rôles. Then another retirement, and the birth of the second baby this year. Then followed the successful "Wells Fargo" in which Mamma Frances successfully passed for 18.

Joan Bennett is another of those phenomenal mammas. She has two children, the first born when she was 16. Joan Blondell, mother of young Norman Barnes, now 4, is soon to retire and await the heir to Dick Powell's fortunes. Gloria Stuart has not allowed maternity to interfere with her continued screen activities. Norma Shearer entertained the long legged bird twice, only to find a still more enthusiastic public awaiting her return to film work. Sally Eilers, mother of a strapping little fellow, continues to keep the cameras rolling.

Marlene Dietrich Is Another Example.

The most exotic of screen exotics, Marlene Dietrich, was a mamma of a plump young lady of several summers when she broke into films. Adrienne Ames, popular a couple of years ago, was generally conceded to be the best clothes model in films, had a gangling daughter of 10 when she assaulted the film citadels, and made the grade.

Movie stars who don't want to have to go too far from home and Hollywood are discovering Catalina as a big game hunting spot. Old Californians knew about this fifty years ago, when the Bannings and other early settlers used to take their coaches to Wilmington, and thence by boat to the island for the goat hunting. Catalina, it seems boasts a species of mountain goat called a silver tip, with a gray blue beard, that is only found on the west end of the island, and the beast is said to be the most difficult to bag in all the world. Clark Gable and Wally Beery, who take trailers and planes and what not to trek back to the mountains and to the Kaibab forest in Utah for their hunting, have to wait until they have weeks off before they can start. Meanwhile, Andy Devine, Preston Foster, Johnny Weissmuller, and even Eddie Bergen, have been doing it much more quickly over at the island.

Some Directors Act to Give Films Luck.

There are a number of directors in films who think it's good luck for their production to act in at least one scene, even if it's only a walk-on part, or one line. Raoul Walsh always does, usually with his back to the camera. Tay Garnett subscribes to this same bit of studio superstition, and in "The Joy of Living," his current picture, he did a bit as a city editor. The day's pay went to Harry Bowen, veteran stunt man and actor, who has been confined to a sanatorium for several months as the result of an injury that may prevent him from ever working again. Under Screen guild rules, Bowen, to collect a check, had to "stand by," as a guild member, while the director, a nonguild member [since he isn't an actor, but a director] did the work. Bowen was brought from the sanatorium and looked on, then went back in Garnett's limousine, $25 the richer because of Garnett's superstition.

Lucille Ball, radio player, didn't need the money, but it restored her faith in human beings when she got back $50 this week that she loaned Jean Proctor, a girl friend, several years ago when they both were working as models and trying to break in as actresses on the New York stage. The girl was ill, and Lucille helped her with money, took her home with her, and saw she got medical attention. The $50 bill came in the mail, along with the picture of a pretty baby girl named for her.

Good morning!

That stout, earnest, and lovable puss, Jane Withers, will delight her admirers as the little Miss Fixit who falls heir to the forty-five fathers indicated by the title.

Judith is an orphan, whose daddy, member of an explorers' club, has cashed in while hunting overseas and who has named the forty-five remaining members of the Gun and Spear club of New York, as his Judy's guardians. . . .

On the way, the McCoys, a pair of sleight of hand performers, are kind to the child, who, later, insinuates them as servants into the home of the guardian-in-chief, who, according to arrangement, legally adopts her. This is "Uncle" Bunny Carothers. Though the club members are unaware of the fact, the house really belongs to Bunny's nephew, Roger, who merely lets Bunny live with him. . . .

Roger is one grand guy. Judy's devotion to him inspires her to put forth strenuous efforts to thwart his love affair with the beauteous gold digger who lives next door with her mercenary mother. . . . A great many things happen in right short order. Judy makes some pretty bad mistakes in her zeal, but, eventually, truth, crushed to earth, rises with a whoop, and—H. E.!

Thomas Beck as the nephew, Richard Carle as guardian-in-chief, Louise Henry as the gold digger, and Nella Walker as her parent, play up in good shape. The Hartmans depict the McCoys as well as the rôles permit.

This film is one that children will be pretty sure to enjoy.

THE STORY TO DATE

● A shot fired through the window of their London home barely misses Rosemary Bellamy-Pryce and her aunt, affectionately called Boggie. A nephew of Tommy Rostetter, a journalist, persuades him to investigate. Calling to question Rosemary's aunt about possible enemies, they find her bound and unconscious from a blow. Her assailant, she says, was small and shabby and wore black gloves. Tommy suspects her of knowing more than she tells. Rosemary tells Tommy that her uncle, Gavin Bellamy-Pryce, always wears black gloves. Gavin would benefit by the death of Boggie, Rosemary, or Rosemary's vicar father. Gavin was a steerage passenger on the boat returning from India when his brother, who was Boggie's husband, died of heart failure. Capt. Argus, whom Boggie met on the boat, is now in London. Rosemary's father comes to town and appears at a cocktail party given in the hat shop where Rosemary works, owned by Countess Rakovsky. Gavin is with him. Next morning the cleaning woman is found dead.

"Who says this is murder?" she hissed.

Rosemary coolly extricated herself. "I don't know what you've been told," she said. "Clover took strychnine out of a glass with gin in it. That's all we know."

The burning eyes searched the girl's, then turned on Tommy and without a trace of recognition bored holes in him. The countess demanded further details, listened tensely, and relaxed with a smile of bitter, secret triumph.

"De Vries warned me of this," she muttered. "It was to happen in June, but if I wore cat's eyes I should be protected. I have worn cat's eyes—you see?" Ripping off her suede glove she displayed a crimson nailed hand on which a cat's eye gleamed dully in a circlet of brilliants. "Today is the third—and three, as you know, is my lucky number. De Vries is never wrong."

Speaking as though in a trance, Rosemary answered Tommy's question.

"Who's De Vries? O, a tame astrologer she carries round in her pocket. Could you have believed it?" She laughed oddly.

They wandered on aimlessly in the hot, close air, past puddles which reflected the blue sky. Beyond earshot of the group—augmented now by a fishmonger's boy and a sweep—they halted to turn back.

"Wait." Rosemary slid her hand through Tommy's arm. "That glass," she whispered dryly. "Boggie's mistaken about it. You see, Tommy dear, it happened to be mine."

"Yours? Are you quite sure about it?"

"O, quite!"

"But you weren't drinking," he argued with heat. "I heard you say no a dozen times."

"I started shivering," she explained. "It wasn't with cold. Capt. Argus and Grimaldi began badgering me again. It always seems to bother men if you won't drink. Anyhow, I said I'd take a little plain gin, and I poured myself some in a glass. That glass." She paused, her breath spent. "I remember saying I'd fill it up with water from the tap and just gulp it down like medicine."

"Only you didn't do it. Why was that?"

"I put it off. I really do loathe spirits, you know. Then I saw daddy and Uncle Gav about to go, so I ran after you. When I got back I saw the glass standing on the table where I'd left it. I took it back into the lavatory, meaning to mix water with it, and—yes, I distinctly recall setting it down on the shelf while I washed my hands. After that it just passed out of my mind."

"You saw your uncle near you, I suppose?"

"I did. He said nothing, just smiled at me in the queer way he has. I couldn't find anything to say to him."

"Your aunt seems thoroughly convinced it's her glass. You didn't actually see her help herself to the gin?"

"No. She must have done it when the ice bucket got kicked over. I was down on my knees behind the table for several minutes mopping up the mess."

"Tell me this: Why, just now, didn't you correct your aunt's impression?"

She hesitated. "I couldn't decide offhand whether it mightn't make it more awful to know both of us were blacklisted. For that's what it comes to, doesn't it? And then there'd be daddy. It wouldn't do any good to kill me and leave him. O, Tommy," she cried distractedly. "What is one to do?"

Tommy, still staggered by what he had heard, could think of no suitable answer. His immediate impulse—impracticable on a populous corner in Mayfair—was to take her forthwith into his arms.

"Poor old Boggie's not quite herself just lately," Rosemary said suddenly. "I feel the best thing is to be very tactful."

"You mean you'd rather not cross her," he remarked, struck by the embarrassment of her manner. "Now we're getting it. Has there been trouble?"

"Certainly not," she denied with some asperity. "It's only that—how shall I say it? You see, till all this began happening she and I were so comfortable together. We've each led our own life and been quite happy and independent. I suppose it couldn't go on quite the same, with Boggie believing some devil was trying to murder her. One can't blame her for being a bit—well, edgy. I ought to remember and not give her cause to . . . to blow up."

"When?" Tommy asked, his face drawn closer to hers.

"Last night," she admitted, ashamed. "O, it was nothing! She rather went for me for being out so late and not letting her know."

"Nonsense! Of course I didn't."

Tommy said no more as with a thoughtful expression he steered her back toward the shops. Into Anatol's a young man in horn rimmed spectacles was just lithely vanishing. A reporter, obviously.

"See here," Rosemary said desperately. "Our chief concern is daddy. He musn't know, but he must be safeguarded till he goes home. There'll be today and tomorrow . . . I know," she exclaimed with sudden inspiration. "Boggie must take him to lunch and then on to the flicks. Marlene Dietrich at the New Gallery. He'll adore that. Then we'll all three dine together at his hotel and have drinks in the lounge right up till time to send him to bed. That's one day settled. After that. . . ."

"I don't know if your father's the one to worry about. After all, didn't he pass an entire evening in his brother's company and come to no harm?"

"So he did. They had bamboo sprouts and what not at the Chinese restaurant in Greek street, but that doesn't mean he'll go on being safe. It did occur to me that Uncle Gavin might have been intending the strychnine for daddy, but when the opportunity to dish it out to me came along, he just switched over."

At the hat shop entrance Tommy halted.

"I'm going to butt in while that reporter is getting his story. However, I won't be long."

Rosemary walked on and entered the decorating shop. The business between her aunt and the inspector was concluding. Boggie saw the wisdom of Rosemary's suggestions and agreed to take Cuthbert in tow for the rest of the day.

Mrs. Bellamy-Pryce, her jauntiness recovered, sailed off on her mission. Rosemary, having watched her passage down the street, turned to find the inspector's dull blue eyes resting on herself.

"That was very well engineered, Miss Bellamy-Pryce," the calm accents approved. "And now let's hear your version of things. I take it the glass was yours?"

• • •

WHEN the interview was over Rosemary decided to hurry along by taxi to Simpson's, where her father and aunt were lunching. These were the posters which glared at her from the street corners:

MAYFAIR POISONING.
DEATH FOLLOWS COCKTAILS.
STRYCHNINE IN HAT SHOP.

She bought the three papers and anxiously scanned them. In not one did the name of Bellamy-Pryce appear. She breathed a sigh of relief and gratitude. Tommy had managed this. Now her father need not guess the real meaning of Clover's death. Perhaps the whole affair would peter out without ever ruffling the placid surface of his mind. Such was her thought when she watched him working his way through his vast plateful of the celebrated roast beef and giving vague attention to her edited version of the calamity.

The inspector—how uncannily sharp of him to have spotted her secret!—had advised her to say nothing about the glass being hers.

Dinner brought a new shock. The vicar liked being in London at this season. It was his first visit since the big ecclesiastical conference two years ago, and he proposed to make the most of it. He would remain till Saturday.

"But what will you do with yourself, daddy?" wailed Rosemary in despair.

Her head throbbed with the worry of it. To add the final fly sting to her wretchedness, they had hardly found a place in the lounge and settled to their coffee before Capt. Argus, taciturn and in one of his black moods, stalked in to join them. She knew quite well why he had come. It flattered his vanity to play the constant watchdog, but it was particularly disagreeable just now to find him turning up unasked and behaving, for some inexplicable reason, like a sullen hobbedehoy. Oddly enough, his ill temper seemed directed at Boggie. If it had been herself, she could have understood, for last evening she had been decidedly short with him.

She kept her eye on the doors, hoping Tommy would come along. He with his agile wits might solve this latest difficulty—though it was impossible to see how.

Tommy, on the point of quitting his flat, had been surprised by a visit from the inspector. He was glad to see Headcorn, for he was burning to know what steps had been taken. After his first sharp inquiry, however, his face fell with disappointment. Although the inspector had spent an incredibly active day, it would seem that nothing decisive had been accomplished. He was here not to impart information, but to confirm certain details. Tommy repeated what he had hastily sketched that morning.

"Yes, Gavin kept his gloves on. He stood about for several minutes within reach of the bar, and was in the room, I should say, about twenty minutes in all. Of course, there were plenty of others with an equal opportunity. Notably there was Capt. Argus—and I think I mentioned the Italian, who, I'm told, is one of the countess' very especial hangers-on. Foots the bills, I rather suspect. Have you got any replies from your wireless messages?"

"I've heard from the boat, and also from Columbo. There was never anything at all questionable about the judge's death. Shock was pure surmise, not substantiated; and as far as is known the brother remained locked below decks. So you see, Capt. Argus' belief carries no weight. As for Argus himself, Australia house vouches for him in every particular. He comes from Sydney, joined the Anzac forces in '18, and paid his first visit to England shortly after the armistice." The speaker paused, then asked, "Are you still of the opinion that he's fond of the niece?"

Tommy met the dull blue eyes with understanding.

"I am convinced of it," he answered with authority. "The fellow's jealous as hell of every man who looks at her. He was another who wanted her to go out with him last evening. Not likely he'd poison her first, is it? Besides, he went away not knowing whether or not that gin had been drunk. If he'd doctored it and meant it for her, my idea is he'd have made sure some one else didn't get hold of it."

Headcorn assented with a tone which washed the Australian out of all calculations. "Gavin has been under observation since before this happened. I knew he had come home—if, indeed, he went away at all, which I can't yet prove. While he was out with his brother yesterday afternoon one of my men got in and went through his belongings, hoping to locate the Smith & Wesson revolver. It wasn't there. He saw a medicine kit. A phial in it had contained nux vomica tablets—in other words, strychnine—but the phial was empty."

"O!" Tommy was mollified. "And when you talked with the vicar late this afternoon did you hear where—ostensibly at least—Gavin had been, and for how long?"

"He hadn't specified. The vicar had dropped him a line to say he would be in town yesterday morning. Gavin rang up the hotel, mentioning that he'd just got back from a short stay in the country and would come 'round in the afternoon. By this time the vicar had got into touch with his sister-in-law, who had assured him there was nothing whatever to worry about. He did, however, suggest that Gavin come with him to see his daughter at her place of work."

"Then Gavin did know in advance he was going to a cocktail party."

"Yes, it's an important point," replied the inspector without enthusiasm.

"Could anything be made out of the finger prints on the glass?"

"Nothing helpful. Out of the general blur I deciphered those of the actual victim, Miss Bellamy-Pryce, and Miss Tarrant, who had washed relays of glasses and replaced them for use. Gloves or not, there was probably no need to touch the glass at all. The tablets could be dropped in under cover of reaching for something beyond. Right or wrong, we've got to keep a sharp eye on Gavin."

"I should hope so," snapped Tommy. "Can't you arrest him?"

"On what grounds?" retorted the other. "So long as his sister-in-law won't, or can't, admit she's sure. That situation's unchanged."

After a moment's silence the Yard man asked, "What was that remark she made in your hearing to Capt. Argus?"

"The one about her being considered of more use alive than dead?"

"That's it. Here's a possible interpretation: She was left bound and gagged while a certain search was conducted in order that the searcher, not finding what he wanted, could extort information. I don't say it was a knife he was after. Suppose it was a paper of some description, the nature of which it would be damaging to have revealed?"

"She'd hardly keep anything of the kind, would she?"

"It all depends on what it was. I admit it's not easy to think of the right answer, but if we did know it, it might explain her being strongly opposed to bringing this man to justice."

"Granting all this," argued Tommy irascibly, "it still doesn't hang together. She was undoubtedly shot at. How can you account for that?"

"The shots may have been meant only to terrorize. I'll go further. Until this strychnine death occurred I was beginning to wonder if murder was being contemplated at all. O, Well!"

With this Inspector Headcorn said good night.

And the reason for this state of affairs?

O, blast it, that was an easy one! He had fallen in love.

The truth had come to him at 10:35 that morning along the quiet reaches of Brackham place. One sledge hammer sentence had done the damage. It still rang in his ears: "That glass happened to be mine."

How badly was he taken this time? Examining his symptoms, he feared the worst.

In the hurly-burly of the hotel lounge he had little difficulty spotting his friends. Tommy made for them. Argus, he saw, was one of the party—ill at ease, from the look of him. The vicar's influence, perhaps, but at nearer range Tommy thought there was more to it than mere chastened restraint. The Australian, not mingling in the talk, was glowering into his beaker of Bass with an expression of fulminating fury. Something, obviously, had gone wrong.

The two women were being speciously cheerful. The vicar, a pleased smile on his face, sipped an orange squash and let his charmed eyes feast on the stimulating mob.

ROSEMARY had now spied the new arrival.

"O, Tommy! I'm so glad you've come!"

The two men got to their feet, Argus with a bad grace, and Boggie beamed her welcome.

"How nice of you! Jack, another chair."

The murder, Tommy concluded from the warning touch on his knee, was not to be mentioned. The vicar, however, soon broached the subject in his own innocent fashion. He had fished up a newspaper and with pleasant courtesy handed it over.

"Though I dare say you've seen it. Poor, unhappy creature, ending her troubles away from home, no doubt to spare her family inconvenience! It seems strange and rather terrible to think that those who saw her performing her daily tasks can have had so little knowledge of her intention."

At the thought of Clover's mutely borne woes Mr. Bellamy-Pryce grew quite noticeably saddened. A little vaguely he developed his theme. Frequently it was health. Cancer—or neurasthenia.

Yet again, said the vicar interestedly, suicide seemed wholly the outcome of a sudden, mad impulse. What was the expression coined by Poe—it was Poe, surely? O, yes, The Imp of the Perverse. So apt a description of the obscure seizure which compels persons otherwise normal to cast themselves in front of oncoming trafic.

"I don't know why, as I'm saying this, the Westminster cathedral should come into my mind," remarked the speaker, hazily groping. "Possibly because yesterday afternoon, when my brother and I had stopped rather unwisely in the middle of Victoria street to admire the cathedral tower, I very nearly got run over by a bus. We had just dropped in to listen to the very beautiful plainsong."

Boggie's jaw dropped slightly. Rosemary, riveted, was gazing at her father with tense, anguished fixity. Both women might have been watching a young child chasing a ball over a live rail, terrified to call out lest he stumble and be electrocuted. That barely averted accident so mildly mentioned! Gavin had been there. . . .

"Daddy's staying till the end of the week," announced Rosemary suddenly. "He's got shopping to do."

So this explained the situation observed before and rendered more acute by the recent remarks. The vicar had double-crossed them.

"Quite so," declared Mr. Bellamy-Pryce, amiably serene. "I've put it off for a long time. I really must not let the pleasures of London prevent my calling in at Margaret street to be measured for a suit. I understand I'm badly off for surplices—yes, and a hat."

In and out the jammed tables a boy in a green uniform glittering with gilt buttons was weaving, actually bawling as he came, "Mr. Bellamy-Pryce! Mr. Bellamy-Pryce!"

"It's you, Cuthbert. Boy!" she called. "Over here."

The emissary approached. "Lady for you, sir," he declared hoarsely. "Wyting in the lobby. Says it's urgent."

"Dear me!" The vicar looked startled. "Did he say a lady? Most odd. Why"—he consulted his old fashioned watch—"it's nearly ten. Now who can she be?"

• • •

ROSEMARY had risen with resolution.

"I'll go with you, daddy. Tommy, will you come?"

The three wormed through to the clearer air of the foyer. Rosemary cast a stony eye round the loiterers.

"I don't see any lady," she said shortly. "She's not here. Unless—O!" She gave a subdued cry and drew Tommy back behind one of the columns of light. "Look!" she whispered, "if it isn't Nurse Clairborne! What on earth can she want?"

A tall woman of commanding presence had come forward determinedly and was holding low voiced speech with the vicar. She had a stiff backbone, a fresh, hardy complexion, chill gray eyes above high cheekbones, and a chin that brooked no nonsense. Dressed in a severe, well tailored coat and shirt and with a hat, almost smart, admirably adjusted over neat, mouse colored hair, she towered above the unassuming little man now listening with sober attention. Tommy noticed that though her figure was spare and flat chested the hips tended toward what is commonly styled the middle aged spread. Everything about her spoke of the woman who thinks well of herself and ill of other people. She could guard a secret, he decided, yet temper lurked in those pale, compressed lips, ready to flash out if her vanity were attacked.

"Lucid intervals," they heard her saying. "Quite impossible to tell how long it will be before complete coma sets in. However, I've just received word that he wants to see you."

"Tonight? Dear me! Will that be possible?"

"Tomorrow would be better. I, of course, am starting back at once. Shall I expect you about three in the afternoon?"

"Certainly! O, most assuredly! I am greatly obliged to you, nurse. Did he mention my brother?"

"Not at all." The thin lips tightened and red spots suddenly flared over the cheekbones. "Only you. He'll see no one else."

"Well, well!" murmured the vicar dazedly, fingering his fading thatch. "Most surprising. My plans are altered, you see."

"I'll tell Boggie," said the girl in a relieved tone. "If you're getting an early start, you'll want to go to bed now, won't you?"

She found her aunt and Argus deep in conversation. An argument was going on, Boggie explaining and justifying herself. The couple looked up at her approach. She told them quickly what had happened.

"So that's it! Thank God!" Defensively Boggie met her companion's eyes. "So you see, Jack, all this nagging was for nothing. My brother-in-law's going home." Energetically she collected her bag and gloves, and ordered Argus to settle the account. "Does this mean a death bed repentance?" she asked.

Tommy, when they regained the lobby, was speaking of trains.

"The best one, if I remember rightly, leaves Waterloo at 10:10. I was suggesting," he said to Rosemary, "that I come along in my car and make sure your father doesn't miss it. I can also take him to Margaret street—it's quite close—so he can at least buy his hat."

Clearly the vicar shrank from facing his housekeeper minus the needed headpiece. He protested vigorously against giving Mr. Rostetter so much trouble, but his daughter cut him short.

"O, splendid, daddy, dear! Tommy, you're wonderful! Of course he doesn't mind, darling. He'll be here at 9 sharp—won't you, Tommy?—and attend to everything. How well it's working out, isn't it?"

Three of the party understood the joy in her voice. No gap was to remain during which the vicar could run any risks.

"I should have liked to see Gavin again," ventured Mr. Bellamy-Pryce regretfully. "However, it can't be helped. Now, then—what have I done with my key?" He fumbled vaguely in pockets, while Rosemary examined his hat and pronounced it a disgrace. "Can I have been stupid enough to——"

"Didn't you leave it at the desk?"

"Yes, yes, to be sure I did! Over there, I believe."

"Darling, no! On the other side." Rosemary pulled her father back as he ambled confidently toward the tobacco stall. "Wait, I'll get it." She addressed the clerk, was handed an immense key, and before yielding it up idly read aloud the number on the wooden tag attached to it. "Nine hundred and twenty. So you're up in the sky."

"Eh? Quite at the top, I believe. No view, as it happens, because my room, though most comfortable, overlooks an airshaft, but as I'm seldom in it——"

"You'll lock your door, won't you?"

An Open Letter to Sonja Henie

SONJA HENIE

Dear Sonja: When a friend comes up in the midst of great success and whispers that "The hand that offers flowers will tomorrow toss a brick," the friend is rarely popular. But I'll risk it. You have two indexes to that sort of unpleasant thing in your horoscope. But you can at least hold on to some of the pretty coins that shower down for the time being. You are a little too easy-come-easy-going. Perhaps two more of these high-up years—you are of the sudden type, up or down. So don't spend it all. With best wishes, WYNN.

Post Cards from Far Places Bring Seasonal Nostalgia

By COUSIN EVE.

This is the time of the year when post cards come sailing in from far countries, giving one a seasonal nostalgia. What a twinge of the heartstrings over Rome's Spanish steps, deep blue sky, and the violets and early jonquils of the flower market in the Piazza di Spagna! A lovely, haughty Roman principessa has remembered. Another vista is Rumanian, a curious bold landscape with handsome peasant types to intrigue one,

Yet another is a favorite nook on the Lago di Como at Cadenabbia, where the Alps wear snow mantles all the year and the exotic shores of Como are perennial paradise. Exactly at this spot the John Alden Carpenters had the famous papal villa, Balbianella, last spring and cut short their stay for an interesting reason. The villa, once owned by the great Visconti family of Milan, has seen much violence down the centuries and is said to be haunted by the ghost of a murdered cardinal. Many persons have thought they saw the apparition, and the Carpenters, though reticent on the subject, were among them. So they cut their sojourn in two and motored down to the Balokovics' cliffside villa at Eze.

Early next month Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter are sailing for Trieste to make a concert tour with the Balokovics in Jugo-Slavia. Just for the moment they are at Castle Hot Springs in Arizona, where the Sterling Mortons have just arrived for two months. The Arizona season is late this year, as most of the habitués are setting their clocks ahead. Mrs. J. Ogden Armour has been staying in Phoenix, at the Biltmore, for a fortnight, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine, with Mrs. Vernon Booth, left yesterday to join her for a while.

Mrs. Joseph Patterson is cutting Arizona out this year and leaving for Mexico during the week with Mrs. Edward Hasler. Their plans are full of color, charm, and variety.

For us who stay home, a tea tomorrow at the Arts club for the Salzburg Opera guild and Serge Prokofieff. What a lot of fun to meet Paul Csonka, who put the successful Salzburg guild tour over when Toscanini said he couldn't. Alberto Erede, musical director, will be there, too, and all the excellent artists who make up the casts of "Cosi Fan Tutte," "The Marriage Market," and "Angelique." It is certainly a great thing to have Salzburg laid upon our doorstep, and Arts club members should turn out en masse to meet these artists who come so far to brighten our horizon.

A musical event of last week which cast a bright glow was Hans Lange's chamber music soirée in the ornate upper foyer of Orchestra hall. One did not realize that this vaulted, handsome salle had figured in local history as the scene of the first Assembly ball. During intermission in the program Morris Johnston, one of the founders of the Assembly, was reminiscing about the good ball it turned out to be, and the fact that the foyer is even larger than the Blackstone and Drake ballrooms.

Mr. Lange's party had a fashionable, sophisticated audience which was having a good time. Among them were Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, the Laird Bells, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Johnston, Mrs. Arthur Bissell, the Shreve Badgers, Mr. and Mrs. Nitze, John Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kirk, the Walter Brewsters, and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Barnes.

We have been blessed with good things in the theater of late, too—old, perhaps, but nevertheless good. Noel Coward's plays, a potpourri of short whimsicalities, have had smart looking audiences who knew what it was all about. Noel Coward is a versatile fellow who writes, acts, sings and dances, goes in high society, and is a close friend of the duke of Windsor. "Tovarich" and "Edna His Wife" were running side by side ten days ago, the latter being the one man performance of Margaret Ayer Barnes' book by Cornelia Otis Skinner. I liked the book far better than the play, but that is not the point of my narrative, which concerns a luncheon flock of high flying ladies.

They had matinée seats for "Tovarich," and came late, which is the best usage in smart circles, having dallied at table overlong. They arrived in great style in time for the first intermission, and, knowing just where their superfine extra fare seats were located, proceeded to seat themselves with vast indifference to usherettes and what not.

The curtain rose on Miss Skinner doing her bit as Edna, and after a while the patrician party began to wonder. Soon they were whispering among themselves that this blonde did not look much like Leontovich, nor perform like a Russian grand duchess who had taken a job in the kitchen. When the act was nearly over light had dawned and the entire party had struggled into their furs and out of one theater into the other next door!

After this matinée many of Mrs. Walter Ayer's friends called upon her young daughter, Mrs. Ross Beatty Jr., in East Chestnut street. She was having a tea in honor of her mother, here from New York for a few days, and guests as they came in sat around the dining room table in cheerful English style.

Mrs. Ayer has settled in New York since her widowhood a year ago, taking an apartment in upper Madison avenue and picking up the threads of New York life. Mrs. R. Hall McCormick, her mother, was a New Yorker by birth, Sarah Lord Day, and Mrs. Ayer's two sisters, Mildred and Mrs. Nelson Williams, have lived there for years.

Mrs. Ayer happened to be here at the right moment, for her popular and much beloved aunt, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, suddenly was taken to the Presbyterian hospital for an operation and her son Allister sent for. Mrs. McCormick is now, however, out of danger and resting comfortably in the hospital where she has served so many faithful years on the woman's board.

A bit of enchantment was Dr. John Wilson's talk on archæology at the open Friday club meeting at the Fortnightly. Mrs. Chauncey Borland was in the chair and introduced with a few charming phrases the new young curator of the Oriental institute, sitting in the high place left vacant by Dr. James H. Breasted.

It was a marvelous unfolding of the science of man's civilized life, done with simple directness and with amusing references to his own lack of years. He is three months younger than Robert Hutchins, he said.

Dr. Wilson spoke of Schliemann, who began his career as an errand boy in a grocery and became fired with a desire to see the Greece of the classics while he was studying Homer in school. Years later he finally got to the site of ancient Troy, and he was the discoverer and digger of the glorious ruins as they are seen now in the museum at Berlin. Of the various excavations carried on by the University of Chicago Dr. Wilson had much to say, and of the small things that had led to the discovery of thrilling great ruins.

• • •

At Megiddo, the Armageddon of the Bible, a famous British archæologist had pointed out a high hill and a spot to the northwest of its summit. There, he said, must have stood the king's palace, at the highest level and exposed to the northwesterly winds, the only refreshing ones in the terrible heat of this part of Judea.

The scientists dug deep, found the palace and even the limestone flooring in what must have been the king's apartment. In one corner was a small area of clay. There further excavation revealed a cache of beautiful gold objects, evidently hidden by the king when he fled before his enemies, and shown last November at a large tea of a Sunday at the Oriental institute.

Beautiful carved ivory strips found in this place showed that vandals had torn this ivory from metal objects which had been carried away. At one time, it seems, Dr. Breasted was in favor of a corps of Bible students and experts on dead languages on his journeys to the near east. Latterly he had made up his caravans of men trained scientifically for the work. One shall live in hopes of hearing Dr. Wilson soon again.

Mrs. Carter H. Harrison will give an illustrated talk next week before the members of the Friday club with pictures taken by her husband and herself in northern India several years ago. Many pretty pictures these days, and not the least some Italian ones shown by Harold Bodman at an evening soirée at the historical society. Mr. Bodman lives half the year in an enchanting house in Florence, where beauty of sky and scene is the hourly menu. Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey were doing the honors on this occasion, which was a presentation by Italy of war relics for a place in the already fine historical collections.

Franco Fontana, Baron Tremolagir, Admiral Wayne Ellis, and a fashionable gathering added to the importance of the interesting ceremony, which took place in the so-called senate chamber, where guests were seated. Mr. Dewey received a magnificent silk flag from Mme. Mattrino, who had made it, which also will remain in the historical society museum.

The supper room had a charming table at which Mrs. S. H. Shattuck presided. Its black surface had a large centerpiece with Italian colors of red tulips crushed wide open, pale green grapes in great loops and clusters, a few dark luscious avocados, and some big red apples. Simply ripping, my dears, and done by Fay Carter, no less. Mrs. Dewey's frock was a chic one of dark blue with demure sequinned jacket. Mrs. Morris Johnston's lamé costume had a cape. Mrs. Edward Byron Smith's midnight blue wool dinner frock had a gleaming cuirass on the chest, à la Lucien Lelong, and her wrap was a short one of yellow foxes. Mrs. Freeman Hinckley wore black with a cape of silk fringes, and Countess Bolognesi wore ruby velvet. Other guests were Mrs. Clive Runnells, looking very stunning, and Mr. and Mrs. Barrett Wendell, the Newton Perrys, Cecil Barnes, Col. and Mrs. Harold Sperling, Mrs. Oliver Grover, Mrs. Wentworth Field, Mrs. Thomas W. Hinde, Miss Larned, Charles S. Dewey Jr., Miss Elizabeth McCormick, and Robert Hall McCormick.

Apropos of apples as decoration, the "Big Apple" has made people aware that, after all, the apple is a good thing and should have its day. The other night, at a small dinner chez Mrs. George Meeker, the table was so attractively set that the guests all exclaimed. Everything was white, including two Spode compotiers, on each of which rested a large red apple, bottom side up. The ladies present happened all to be in red, including the hostess, who wore ruby velvet, and the effect was épatant!

By Ellen Bruce.

With the current demand for spring suits the blouse naturally is in the spotlight. There is a variety of types from which to choose, depending upon the type of suit as well as on the personality of the wearer. The peasant blouse illustrated, feminine and fluffy, is one of the fashion favorites in the crochet field for spring blouses. The blouse is dressy enough to be worn for an afternoon of bridge or for any tea party. The ever popular mesh pattern makes this one of the simple crochet jobs relished by every woman.

A tiny figure is incorporated in the mesh design which makes this pattern slightly different. It may be perfectly illustrated in the fine crochet cottons around No. 50 or in the extremely fine imported Irish linens and mercerized threads. White or ecru is the favorite choice for suits, with soft dusty pink, blue, and yellow following close behind. The ribbons, tied just below the elbow and around the neck, are in a contrasting color and preferably match the suit.

If you wish instructions for crocheting the openwork peasant blouse illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

Heat Proof Stainless Steel Trays Are New

Heatproof trays of stainless steel for the table are something new. They are decorative, coming in such colors as antique ivory sea green, and Chinese red. In their design they repeat the patterns of matching stainless steel oven dishes that are quite good looking on the table.

Many Women's Organizations Plan Benefits

The St. Louis Symphony orchestra's concert at 3:30 o'clock today in Orchestra hall is sponsored by the Chicago Woman's Musical club as a benefit for its scholarship fund. Each spring the organization holds contests whereby promising young musicians win financial assistance in completing their musical education.

The club, which will celebrate its 25th anniversary next year, is dedicated to fostering good music in Chicago. In the last six years particular attention has been given to encouraging young musicians not only through scholarships, but by arranging debuts for them as well.

Louisa Hoe, young soprano who placed first among women contestants in THE TRIBUNE'S Chicagoland Music Festival last summer, won a scholarship from the Chicago Woman's Musical club two years ago. Mrs. Katherine Conlon Johnson heads the organization, which includes many professional musicians.

Another forthcoming musical event, a performance of the American Opera company Friday evening, Feb. 25, at the Auditorium theater, will benefit Erie Neighborhood house, 1347 West Erie street. "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" will be given that evening. Mr. and Mrs. T. E. D. Bradley, Henry H. Cross, Mrs. William G. Dahl, and Dr. and Mrs. Frank W. Booth are among the board members interested in the benefit.

Destitute older women will be assisted through proceeds of a card party the Mothers' Relief Association for the Aged will give at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday at the Graemere hotel.

A physician's widow, whose only son is dead, has $40 left when a generous scrubwoman takes her to live in two rooms with herself and her four children. This is a situation typical of those brought to the attention of the Mothers' Relief association. The organization's 150 members, through two large card parties and several smaller events each year, raise money to provide homes for aged and impoverished women.

• • •

Founded in 1911, the organization is headed by Miss Betty Lohmueller, recently reelected president for a third year. Mrs. Albert Alles, Mrs. William Molt, Mrs. Florence Russell, and Mrs. N. Bradford Brown form the committee for the party.

Several institutions and other philanthropic projects will share in proceeds of another card party taking place Wednesday. The Bohemian Woman's Civic club will hold its annual party at 1 o'clock that day at the Pilsen park pavilion, 26th street and Albany avenue. Mrs. John A. Cervenka Jr. is chairman.

The Bohemian Orphanage and Old People's Home, the Bohemian Charitable association, St. Joseph's orphanage at Lisle, St. Benedict's Old People's home, and several projects of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs will receive proceeds of the party.

Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, will speak at a regular meeting of the Bohemian Woman's Civic club at 1:30 o'clock tomorrow in the south ballroom of the Stevens hotel. Miss Annetta Cory, teacher at the Haven school, will demonstrate "Value of Rhythm to the Mental Slow Deaf Child," presenting several children. A board meeting will be held at 10 o'clock. A junior club is being organized by Mrs. Allen Hruby, membership chairman.

The busy women who are members of the Alliance of Business and Professional Women of Chicago have picked next Saturday afternoon as the date of their annual card party and tea for the benefit of the Alliance welfare fund. The party will take place in the Boulevard room of the Stevens hotel. Mrs. Elise A. Runyan is finance chairman for the party, and Marie Harrison, Hilma Benson, Allie M. Anderson, Marie Erikson, and Marguerite Heinrichs are others heading committees.

Tiny aprons accompanied announcements of the Andoka Philanthropic club's novelty apron and philanthropy party next Tuesday at the Gray auditorium, 111 West Jackson boulevard. Following a box luncheon at 12:15 o'clock various card games will be played. Every member is to measure her waistline and place a penny for each inch in the pocket of the apron she received. Proceeds will be used to fill baskets for destitute blind persons. Mrs. Henry Vavrinek is chairman of the party.

The Hull House Woman's club will hold a card party at 2 o'clock Wednesday in Bowen hall of Hull house. Mrs. William Saindon is president.

Chicago's Set in Top Flight at Palm Beach

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

Chicago has been decidedly in the social spotlight this week. As the season advances the importance of the colony becomes increasingly evident. Not that Chicagoans here move in a clan, or present a solid phalanx; rather they are to be found "among those present" at every smart gathering in Palm Beach.

Mrs. Charles Harrington Chadwick entertained a representative crowd on Friday of this week at her Villa Today, where Mrs. Marcus Daly of New York is a guest, to compliment Raymond Kanelba, artist of the Ecole de Paris, giving her guests the privilege of a private showing of this gifted artist's work.

The portraits were arranged out on the "portique"—as Mrs. Chadwick calls the loggia of her modern house, and as the brief tropical twilight deepened, floodlights were turned on which vied with the pale glow of the moon on Lake Worth, visible beyond. From some hidden and mysterious source came the ripple of soft music which served as an obbligato to the conversation. Poised on a springboard above a blue-lined swimming pool were two life-size bronzes of a youth and maiden over which a lighted fountain played.

Mr. and Mrs. George Rich, whose marriage was an event of December in Phoenix, Ariz., have been the most extensively fêted couple in the resort this week, some of the largest and most sumptuous parties revolving about them.

On Tuesday night Mrs. James H. Kennedy of Boston, Mrs. Rich's aunt, entertained with a reception for them at Kenlewinai on Ocean boulevard. Mrs. Rich, the former Margaret Crowley of Boston, has spent many seasons down here with Mrs. Kennedy. Mr. Rich is a Chicagoan, and both are popular here.

For the reception Mrs. Rich wore a floor length frock of beige lace with hat of dubonnet straw. Many Chicagoans were noted. There was Mrs. Henry Havens Windsor Jr. in a cape of silver fox and a small black hat; Mrs. Paul Healy in a pink and white outfit, and Mrs. John Greenleaf Alexander in a white ensemble.

On Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. Guernsey Curran Jr. of Rumson, N. J., assembled another cozy little crowd of two hundred for cocktails to compliment the Richs. This party was given at Hillbrook, the attractive British colonial home of the Currans, situated on the highest point in Palm Beach. On Wednesday night Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Graf of Cincinnati gave a dinner party for Mr. and Mrs. Rich. Earlier in the week they had been fêted at a dinner in the Everglades club.

Mrs. Paul Healy, who is equally at home in London, Paris, New York or Chicago, entertained with a gala party Monday night at the Everglades club, having among the fourteen guests Mrs. Townsend McKeever, Mrs. John Greenleaf Alexander and Mrs. John Crerar of Chicago.

Mrs. Kearsey Coates Reed and her mother, Mrs. John G. Shedd, are arriving from Chicago within the next day or so to occupy Mrs. Alexander's house on Via Del Lago. Mrs. Alexander will spend the remainder of the season at the Whitehall.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald McMurray of Chicago entertained with cocktails at the Alba in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Morris and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gifford. Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Logan are among the Chicago patrons of the romany concert to be held next Wednesday. George D. Kirkham of Chicago gave a luncheon Wednesday at the Breakers.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Stillson Hart gave a tea for forty on Wednesday, at their charming villa "Heartsease" on Sea Breeze avenue. Other Chicagoans present included Mr. and Mrs. George Henry High, Mrs. John Chapman, Mrs. John Crerar, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Belden, Mrs. Evan Evans and Mr. and Mrs. Donald McMurray.

Travelers Aid to Sponsor Ice Carnival Event

By Betty Browning.

Runaway boys and grandmothers. A mother suddenly taken ill while traveling with her baby. A school girl who has lost the address of the friend she is to visit. A 4 year old orphan who must journey alone from Czechoslovakia to Joliet to reach her only surviving relatives.

To such bewildered, helpless persons, some 75,000 of them, did the Travelers Aid Society of Chicago lend assistance last year. In order that similar aid may be given to thousands of others the organization is holding one of its rare benefits next Thursday evening. The opening of the ice carnival at the Chicago arena will be sponsored by a committee of women board members, headed by Mrs. Lauren J. Drake.

It was the plight of persons stranded at the time of the gold rush of '49 that first gave impetus to the travelers' aid movement. Judge Bryan Mullanphy, one time mayor of St. Louis, then an outpost on the western frontier, saw the hardships that beset pioneer families, who often got no farther west than Missouri because of death, illness, or loss of funds and equipment.

In 1851 Judge Mullanphy made the first bequest on record for the assistance of travelers, leaving one-third of his property to the city of St. Louis for the relief of "all poor emigrants and travelers coming to St. Louis on their way, bona fide, to settle in the west." The St. Louis Travelers' Aid society bears Judge Mullanphy's name.

Since 1905, when the first Travelers' Aid society was founded in New York, similar bodies have been established in 94 cities. Each organization is autonomous, yet there is close coöperation between societies through the national association founded in 1917. A double globe showing both hemispheres is the symbol of Travelers Aid everywhere, and everywhere it stands for the same type of thorough and considered service.

The Chicago society maintains a staf of representatives at railroad stations and the central bus terminal 16 hours a day every day of the week. Each representative is a trained caseworker, chosen for her resourcefulness and sensitivity to persons in trouble. Those qualifications were stressed by Miss Madeline L. MacGregor, executive secretary of the society, who proceeded to tell a story or two to show why they are indispensable.

A Chicago boy tried to buy a ticket "as far as he could go for $4." The Travelers' Aid worker found he had taken the money from his savings bank and was running away because he said his step-mother treated her own children better than she treated him.

A young nursemaid arrived in Chicago in a coma. Her employer, who had just hired her in Portland, Ore., said she had no money to care for the girl, and was in a hurry to reach New York, so she and her children took the next train east, leaving the girl behind.

Travelers Aid, in the first case, called the boy's father, who readily acknowledged the state of affairs. It was agreed that unless the problem could be worked out at home, the boy should be sent away to school. In the second case Travelers Aid summoned an ambulance and took the girl to a hospital. It was discovered that she had infantile paralysis. Travelers Aid in New York was wired to meet the employer and warn her of the danger to her children. The girl's family in Portland were located after some delay, and the girl's body returned to them.

For runaway children from out of town, Travelers Aid provides shelter at the Chicago Home for the Friendless, or for longer periods, in a foster home. A child is not returned to his home city until the Travelers Aid organization there has investigated the situation from which he has tried to escape. Often the assistance of family and child welfare agencies is invoked in working out any difficulties that may be uncovered before the child is sent back.

The parade of models, imported and American, predicted to be six months in advance of the season, will be followed by dancing to the music of two orchestras in the main ballroom and on the terrace. After visiting the luxurious Boca Raton club Mr. and Mrs. Terrence Dillon [Mary Loretta Snite], whose wedding was the outstanding event last Tuesday, will go on to New York to sail February 23 on the Queen Mary for a European tour. On their return the Dillons will reside in Chicago.

Mrs. Charles Lyon Krum represented the Chicago Woman's club at the thirteenth annual visiting club day last Tuesday at the Miami Women's club, when visiting clubwomen from all over the country were honored at this major seasonal event at the handsome Bayfront clubhouse.

Another Chicagoan prominent in local club activities of the last week was Dr. Helen Lanham, who was a member of the reception committee and program chairman of the salon of the Miami Bookfellows' Library guild on Wednesday. Luncheons, teas, and dinner parties pyramid themselves on the social calendar of this popular guest and her hostess for the entire month. Outstanding among the many parties to be given in her honor are a bridge luncheon next Tuesday to be given at the Hotel Good by Mrs. S. Remembered as the widow of the late Prince Nicholas Engalitcheff, former Russian consul general in Chicago, Princess Engalitcheff is a winter visitor at the Whitman hotel on the beach. This American born princess is being extended many social courtesies. Her last visit to Miami was in 1903.

Second in the line of the five yachts along the county causeway, all too large to be berthed in the city yacht basin, to go cruising this last week was the Frederick J. Fishers' Nakhoda. First to depart from the line which has remained unbroken throughout the season was the Eugene McDonalds' Mizpah, which weighed anchor at dawn last Sunday for a two month seafaring along the South American coast to the Orinoco river. With the Fishers on their cruise to Nassau are Mr. and Mrs. John L. Kellogg and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Savage, who came down from Chicago to be guests of the Fishers aboard their 240 foot floating palace. Prior to their departure on this cruise to Nassau the Fisher party was entertained at Hialeah park. That same afternoon Mr. and Mrs. George Brown were luncheon guests of friends at the clubhouse. On that afternoon Lord Edward Stanley, eldest son of the earl of Derby, was the guest of Col. Joseph Widener. Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. McCulloch were hosts at a luncheon party at their home, following which their entire party attended the races. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Silas Strawn, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Cathcart, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin E. Sunny, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jacobs, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lobdell, and Leonard Florsheim.

Art Institute's East Wing Has Three Exhibits

By Eleanor Jewett.

There are three exhibitions in the east wing galleries of the Art institute which are interesting from different standpoints. The outstanding show, of course, is the Swedish exhibit of early and contemporary art. In this one finds things as primitive as a wooden drinking horn hailing from the days of the Vikings and as modern as the brilliant portraits by Anders Zorn.

The first of the galleries have been devoted to the paintings and drawings of Giambattista and Domenico Tiepolo, two 18th century Venetian painters, who practically closed the brilliant era of painting that made Venice [and Italy] celebrated throughout the world. Neither is as great as the men who were their predecessors, nor have they been given as important a place in history, yet their work is to an extent of interest.

The Italian school is easily recognized in the coloring and composition of the larger canvases. The Madonna and Child is rather lovely were it not for the sullen and indifferent expression the Virgin wears. A Raphael Madonna is invariably a sweeter, warmer, more maternal, and more beautiful figure. The worldly paintings are the most effective and the most pleasing. The young girl giving back her engagement ring, with figures to right and left, is a superb canvas. And there are other, smaller, crowded pictures where for a moment you feel the rich magic that lurks in Venetian painting at its best.

The drawings make a thin line around the walls of two adjacent little galleries. The Punchinello series by Domenico stand out as the brightest efforts; these, and his various animal and bird subjects and an extremely subtle drawing of buildings lent by the Fogg museum of Harvard university. The Giambattista drawings probably are valuable from a student or museum point of view, but it is doubtful whether they will light fires in the breast of the ordinary observer.

The stage decorations and portraits by Nicolas Remisoff are installed in a single gallery. At first glance they have a distinctly childish flavor. They seem to have been rather carelessly contrived with a lack of skill due not so much to indifference as to ignorance. Then, with a realization that this is modern painting, the insinuation as to ignorance slips away and what is left is the fact that this is intentional precosity on the painter's part.

Remisoff is responsible for many of the stunning stage settings for the Chauve Souris and the Russian ballet. These designs are among the most fantastic and colorful paintings in his exhibit. There is a fascinating portrait of his wife extremely well handled, and a charming, simple little portrait of a young girl. The modern qualities seem to ebb and flow as one walks about the gallery, now overwhelming an entire canvas and again subsiding and leaving a picture of almost academic proportions. Those who enjoy modern painting will find many things in this gallery to please them. And those who admire Remisoff for his stage designs will be interested to see these other sides of his craft.

The Hoosier salon same to a close last night in the Marshall Field galleries and leaves us with regret that it could not have been continued another week. The brilliant painting by Charles Sneed Williams, "Scottish Piper," remains as an unforgettable incident in a show that had a good general level and few high points of excellence. The prize of $100 for the outstanding water color in the feature room was awarded to "Sunshine and Shadow" by Clay Kelly, a painting of Mexico, colorful and picturesque. The beautiful lithographs of doors at the University of Chicago done by Mr. Kelly come invariably to mind now when his name is mentioned. An exhibit of his work is planned for the near future in the Club Woman's bureau, Mandel Brothers. The first Catholic prize was awarded to Sister Rufinia of St. Francis convent, Lafayette.

Among the other noteworthy paintings in the Hoosier salon were "My Son" by Walt Louderback. "Flowers in Window" by Edgar Forkner, "Orchard Road" by Lucie Hartrath, "Leaf Laden Stream" by L. O. Griffith, and a number of delightful little canvases.

The retrospective exhibition of paintings and drawings by Rudolph Weisenborn occupies what is probably the most conspicuous spot in Chicago, the large first floor room of 333 North Michigan avenue. Obviously these paintings are modernist in kind. They strike across one's consciousness with the delicacy of a hard swung baseball bat. Most of the canvases are abstractions, exercises in design and color. The few portraits are either definite likenesses or portraits which reveal the sitter through suggestion. The portrait of Mrs. Eve Shapiro is one of the most successful of the latter type.

The comment has been heard that the Weisenborn exhibit looks like WPA art. Of course it does. WPA art is intensely modern and Mr. Weisenborn has himself worked for some time on the WPA staf in Chicago. But there must be no mistake, this painting of his is purely original in manner and in matter. We have no man painting in Chicago today who has more closely followed his own inclinations and his personal convictions in painting than Rudolph Weisenborn. He started to hew to his line some twenty years ago and the chips are still falling in a steady shower in the shade of that first start.

Many of the canvases in the present exhibit have been lent by their owners, so it is clear that Mr. Weisenborn has a public interested enough to purchase his work. Whether you or I like his particular type of picture is immaterial; after all, it demonstrates very vividly a kind of painting being much practiced today, but we can respect the artist for the sincerity and determination with which he has pursued his course.

Another modern art exhibit may be found to March 1 in the Katharine Kuh gallery, Diana Court building, where drawings and sculpture by Archipenko are on view. The drawings are chiefly sketches for possible future sculpture; the sculpture itself is intriguing, particularly the Russian dancing couple and the slim, delicate figure of a headless woman.

In distinct contrast to the last two exhibits is that of recent landscapes by Frank C. Peyraud in the O'Brien galleries, 820 North Michigan avenue. These landscapes are typical of the painter and, in two instances, strike a high level of excellency in execution—the large summer landscape and the smaller autumn picture in which the trees stand clothed in coral, as warm and rich as flame.

Three exhibitions are to be found in the Arts club. There are paintings by Jean Hélion, water colors by Issachar Ryback, and portraits by Pavel Tchelitchew.

Paintings by Mary White Palmer and humorous water colors and caricatures by Peggy Palmer Burrows are on view in the Drake hotel mezzanine gallery, under the auspices of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts. It is a good show.

"PORTRAIT OF MRS. BAGGE"

The Swedish Tercentenary Art exhibition, current at the Art institute through March 6, includes a number of stunning paintings. This charming canvas by Ernst Josephson is one of them, and there are others by Carl Larson, Anders Zorn, and Prince Eugen of equal and greater merit.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Feb. 14.

Leaves of plants contain many thousands of breathing pores which should not be allowed to become obstructed with dust. Wipe the leaves with a soft cloth or sponge and clear water. Soapy water will do no harm. If the fall-planted shrubs were not mulched it still can be done when the ground is free from snow.

Tuesday, Feb. 15.

Potted bulbous plants will force easily from now on. Keep the window filled with them for they are the finest flowering plants for this time of year. Save the bulbs, after gradually ripening, for planting outdoors next fall.

Wednesday, Feb. 16.

Spraying fruit trees should be completed as soon as possible. It is much handier to buy ready mixed material than it is to mix it at home. Send for spray calendars and follow directions. If you want to have good cherries, spray with arsenate of lead just after the calyx falls. Currants, gooseberries, grapes, apples, peaches, plums, cherries, and other fruits must be sprayed to prevent injury from insect pests. It is wise for several neighbors to band together and buy a spraying outfit.

Thursday, Feb. 17.

Some perennials that bloom the first year from seeds sown early are the Iceland poppy, lychnis, shasta daisy, platycodon, gaillardia, and hardy delphinium. Others take longer, blooming the second year from seed. Examples are the canterbury bell, hesperis or dame's rocket, loosestrife, hollyhock, cardinal flower, and equilegia.

Friday, Feb. 18.

If a shrub has grown a lot of old, gnarled wood that seldom, if ever, blooms, thin it out by cutting some of the stems to the ground and cut back the stems remaining. This method will force new growth from the base which later may be cut back for shape. Take care of trees when young, giving them proper scaffolding branches, with the proper length trunk, and little trouble will be encountered later on.

Saturday, Feb. 19.

The amaryllis should be coming along nicely. Give it a light window and when the leaves start to grow, more and more water should be given. It is one of the best flowering plants for the home and may be had in several colors. If the corn plant is growing too tall for keeping in the home, take a saw and cut it back to about eighteen inches, top dress the soil with good, rich soil, or give it an application of plant food, and water. In a short time new growth will start from the stem and the plant will be more attractive than ever.

Music and Art Rule Pasadena for February

By Ruth Billheimer.

PASADENA, CAL.

Friday night Uday Shan-Kar's Hindu ballet brought out tails and ermine wraps for the Huntington Memorial Hospital Clinic auxiliary's annual benefit. In the foyer during intermission many faces familiar to Chicago society were seen, including those of the Richard Illsleys, T. M. Keesters, Hallet Thornes, Mrs. Margaret Marston Daniels, Mrs. C. C. Chickering, the Carlton Swifts, Herbert Cliffords, and Mrs. Arthur C. Thorsen.

Monday night 2,500 persons, from school children to sophisticates, filled the auditorium for the homecoming concert of Roland Gundry, 15 year old violinist and former Pasadena school boy, just back from study in Paris, where he was heralded as "another Menuhin." Among the patrons were the Scott Browns, the Ralph F. Burnhams, the Max Farrands, Mrs. George Ellery Hale, Mrs. John H. Hardin, Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Mixsell, the Edwin Shermans, and Mrs. Hallett Thorne. Young Gundry's appearance was sponsored by teachers and parents of the Pasadena schools, in which the lad's father, Theodore B. Gundry, is a music instructor. Sponsors included Mr. and Mrs. Duke N. Banks, Dr. Andrew Neff, Dr. and Mrs. Theodore G. Soares, and Mrs. C. O. Cornwell, all former Chicagoans.

Tonight the Pasquier trio plays for a select company at one of the regular Coleman chamber concerts in the Pasadena Community playhouse. Marian Anderson, Negro singer, comes on the Elmer Wilson course Feb. 21, and two other Wilson concerts opened the month . . . the Bartlett and Robertson piano duo on the first, and two nights later the west coast première of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess." Both occasions were social as well as musical highlights of February.

Art, too, is bidding for considerable well earned attention this month. Chicago will be proud to learn that when awards were made at the reception held last Sunday by the Pasadena Society of Artists at the Grace Nicholson galleries, John F. Stacy carried off first prize in landscapes with his "Misty Morning on the Seine," and Anna Lee Stacy took an honorable mention for "My Mantel in Paris." [Incidentally, the Tracys are beautifully settled now in their new ménage and the studio with its rose garden view, is all ready for work.] One of Mrs. Stacy's pictures hanging in the February exhibit is the portrait of her husband which she calls "Forty Winks."

Another former Chicagoan in the society is Marion Kavanagh Wachtel, whose "Monterey Coast" in water colors hangs near the Stacy pictures. She also entered two oils, "Topango Hills" and "The Meadow Brook." She has been acting president of the society in the absence of Mrs. Tolles Chamberlain.

Rumor has it that a "Chicago Club of Californians" is being organized by some of the migrators to this clime. Their purpose is entirely informal, thus far, and the only attempt made to gather Chicagoans under one roof on a large scale was an all-Chicago-night at the production of "Old Chicago" in Los Angeles recently. It is said 960 Chicagoans signed the register. Don Ameche was made honorary president, and among those introduced were Mme. Amelita Galli-Curci and her husband, Homer Samuels.

The time of Mrs. Frank E. [Jean Cudahy] Wilhelm's stay here has been all too short for her Pasadena friends. She leaves Tuesday for Chicago after a fortnight's stay with her father, E. A. Cudahy, at Hotel Huntington. Santa Anita, she confesses, has claimed most of her afternoons, and Saturday she was the guest of Mrs. Marshall Neal for luncheon at the Turf club. Tuesday the John S. Cravenses entertained her and her father with luncheon at their South Orange Grove avenue home before motoring Santa Anita-ward. Tomorrow Mrs. Cravens will give a luncheon for sixteen in compliment to the Chicago matron.

Mr. Cudahy expects to remain here another six or eight weeks, and will digress to Santa Barbara and to Coronado for a few days at each place.

Mrs. W. Irving Osborne has joined Mrs. J. F. L. Curtis at the Huntington for the season. Mr. and Mrs. John D. Ames left Friday after a visit at the hotel with his mother, Mrs. Adelaide S. Ames, here until April.

The Ameses and the G. Russell Leonards were in a party piloted by Miss Marjorie Day of the Huntington to the Scottish village, in Glendale, recently for luncheon and thence to "Old Chicago."

Guests at the hotel have been going in for the Big Apple in earnest since the Tuesday night competition started in the taproom. Two guests are chosen as judges each night, and a second prize went to Iris Masters Rogers and her partner, LeRoy Erikson, last week. The Stanley Tuckers of Willoughby, O., were judges. Others taking part were Maj. and Mrs. Ral Parr, Baltimore stable owners, and the Charles Jernegans of Evanston, who have just returned to their home. Mr. Jernegan's accounts of big game hunting in the Yaqui river country of Mexico kept his friends here enthralled, for he joined Mrs. Jernegan at the Huntington after his return from the south. And he has to his credit two mountain lions in the kill! Conrad Poppenheusen, here for an indefinite stay, is at Palm Springs for a brief sojourn. The Sanford Vaughans will be at the Huntington until the end of the month.

Engagement news links the name of Miss Adeline Belcher McCormick, daughter of Mrs. Frank Vail Akin and the late Ralph Wheeler McCormick, and George Willard Edmonds, member of the Santa Barbara Bachelors and grandson of the late Senator Luther Ward of San Diego.

In Coronado Mrs. Charles D. Warren welcomed this week her son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Allyn Warren, from Chicago. With them also was Mrs. Warren's sister, Miss Belle Press, of Chicago. They motored here from Phoenix, Ariz., where they had had their car shipped.

Two Journalism Awards Will Be Given by Matrix

Two Illinois newspaper women Tuesday evening will receive cups for the best news story and the best feature story written during 1937. The presentation will be made at the annual formal Matrix banquet of Alpha Beta, Northwestern university chapter of Theta Sigma Phi honorary sorority for women in journalism, at the Orrington hotel in Evanston.

Mrs. Kenneth Horan.

Genevieve Forbes Herrick will speak, and Mrs. Kenneth Horan, author of "The Longest Night" and "Remember the Day," will be toastmaster.

Kenneth C. Olson, director of the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern university; Mary Kinnavey Moore, former national president of Theta Sigma Phi, and Lucy Rogers Hawkins, editor of Matrix, the organization's national publication, will be judges. Miss Constance McClure is president of the chapter.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

(Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.)

Chicago, May 6, 1889.

Dear Julia: I have been with Martha Junior this afternoon at a school for aspiring women bicycle riders. What do you think of my daughter's learning to ride a "safety wheel," as they are called? There are a good many Chicago ladies who are attempting this form of athletics and Sandy encourages Martha, feeling that it will take her out into the fresh air and give her excellent exercise.

As I sat looking on I saw every stage of progress . . . that of the novice who screamed with terror when the wheel suddenly turned the wrong way and that of the graduate who could sail off, patting her back hair as she rode.

The "professor," natty in knickerbockers, was patient with would-be riders. One 200 pound lady approached him with: "Professor, I'm troubled with what my doctor calls embonpoint, and he thinks bicycle riding will help me. Do you think I can learn?"

The instructor gravely assured her that he could teach any one and she began. She will cut rather an absurd figure, I fear, in the bicycle suit suggested by the instructor. It consists of a blouse, full trousers gathered in below the knee, and over this a kilt skirt to the knee. A cycling cap and cycling shoes complete the costume. However, a tennis suit will really answer the purpose.

We are told that the demand for safety wheels here far exceeds the supply. Manufacturers are running their places night and day and by the end of the season, it is said, there will be over 500 ladies a-wheel on our boulevards.

This evening we had a guest for dinner—a Philadelphia friend of Will's—who knows Hetty Green, the rich and frugal Hetty, in a business way. He told us some stories of her miserliness, which he thinks are true. For instance, when the Reading railway was reorganized she had to send her old certificates to Philadelphia and, finding that the cost of the transfer, which she would pay to Drexel, Morgan & Co., was more than the train fare from New York, she took them herself in her famous reticule.

"Was this curious old lady never young?" I asked. Our guest replied that she was indeed once young and fair, a great belle in New York, where she spent several winters. I wonder if you ever met her. She isn't at all your type. She stayed in a cheap boarding house, our guest said, during these New York visits, paying six dollars a week for her hall bedroom, as her father, who footed her bills then, was "near," too, as New Englanders put it.

On the death of her aunt and her father, in 1865, she inherited a fortune of ten million dollars. Gradually she withdrew from society and concentrated her attention on making money. When she was about 30 she decided to marry and chose E. H. Green as her husband. He seems to have had little to do with the match! She insisted on an ante-nuptial agreement by which he was to support her as if she had no money at all. They have two children, as you doubtless know.

One of our friend's stories was of a New York doctor who was visited several years ago by a shabby woman with a young boy. The child had had an injury to his knee and, said his mother, had been treated by a country doctor. The mother seemed so poor that the New York doctor would not have charged her any fee for his services if he had not been told by a friend that she was the famous financier, Hetty Green, who was always careful not to let it be known that she had any money. On receiving this information the doctor sent a good round bill, which Mrs. Green paid in due time.

She is now worth fifty millions, but spends little of her income, her ambition being to leave her son the richest man in the United States.

She has a good deal of real estate here in Chicago, Will says. How little she must get out of life! With all her millions she is a poor woman.

Much love,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

When Hetty Green died in 1916 at the age of 82 her fortune was estimated at one hundred millions. She and her husband, E. H. Green, had separated and he died in 1902. The estate of E. H. R. Green, son of the famous woman fiancier, was in litigation for some time and has only recently been settled.

Several letters have come to us about St. Xavier's academy the past week. Mrs. Daniel Gallery writes: "Your article on old St. Xavier's was delightful. So many people have spoken to me about it I felt I must tell you. It had a special appeal for me because my mother [Maggie Duffy] was a pupil there in the early days. I am leaving for California on Sunday . . . but am having my TRIBUNE forwarded, for I would not miss you for anything."

From Ottawa, Ill., Mrs. Charles Wheeden writes of a grandaunt, Mother Mary De Chandel, who was an early member of the Chicago Sisters of Mercy, coming here in 1849 and later going to Ottawa, one of a little band of five, to establish the work of the order downstate. A sister of Mrs. Wheeden, Sister Mary Benita, is a member of the community in Ottawa today.

Mrs. E. N. Walsh, Joliet, Ill., commenting on the story of St. Xavier's, tells us that her grandfather, J. P. McDermott, a contractor, built the convent at 29th street and Wabash avenue and it was with the revered Mother Genevieve that he transacted the business of the construction. Mr. McDermott had the contract for building Holy Name cathedral, but died before its completion. His eldest son laid the corner stone.

Jewish Society to Have Dinner on Anniversary

Mrs. Lena Lashkovitz. [De Haven Photo.]

An organization that began in 1903 with seven members, under Mrs. Leona Lashkovitz's leadership, will gather, 400 strong, next Sunday evening to celebrate its thirty-fifth anniversary. The Chicago Ladies' Gmilas Chasodim society, still headed by Mrs. Lashkovitz, will give a banquet that evening in the red room of the Hotel La Salle.

Through the society's efforts in the last thirty-five years hundreds of persons have been enabled to establish themselves in business. Sums ranging from $25 to $300 are lent without interest or security other than a guarantor for the borrower, and such loans as are not repaid are replaced through a charity fund. The income of the organization is derived from dues, donations, the proceeds of an annual dance, and by participation in the "Have a Heart" tag day.

Speakers at the anniversary dinner will be Judge Harry Fisher, Rabbi Ephraim Epstein, and Mrs. Sarah Sherry, vice president of the society, who will talk on the organization's history and activities. Rabbi Menachim B. Sachs will be toastmaster. Mrs. Beatrice Krohn is chairman of the dinner.

Mrs. Lashkovitz recently returned after spending two years in Palestine. Besides heading this society she is organizer and president of the Rabbi Diskind Orphan home there, is also founder president of the Lazacher Abraham Blumberg society of the Hebrew Theological college, and heads a number of other groups.

Another anniversary celebration of the week will be the silver jubilee of the Lechem Laonim Ladies' Aid society at 7:30 o'clock this evening at the First Rumanian Social hall, Douglas boulevard and Millard avenue. Rabbi Abraham Elman will be the principal speaker. New officers will be installed, and there will be a supper, cards and entertainment. Mrs. Rose Harris is president.

The sixth anniversary of the Chicago Club for Crippled Children will be celebrated at 2 o'clock tomorrow at the Palmer house. Prof. Charles A. Stone, head of the department of education at De Paul university, will speak on "Methods of Dealing with Exceptional Children." Mrs. Betty Penchina is president.

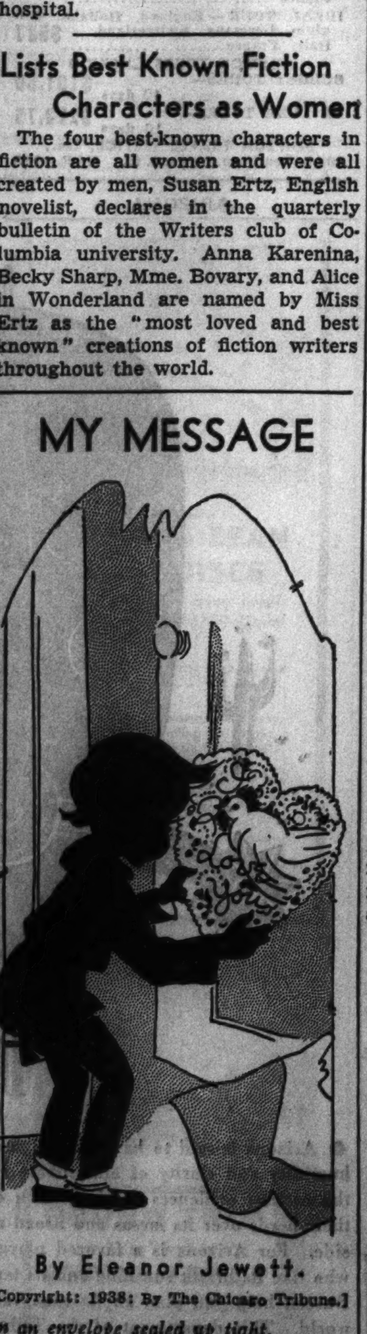
MY MESSAGE



By Eleanor Jewett.

[Copyright: 1938: By The Chicago Tribune.]

In an envelope sealed up tight,
Safely hidden away from sight,
Is something wonderful I shall see
When tomorrow's mail is brought to me!
For Jane has whispered that all her love,
Bound in scarlet and crowned with a dove
That a cupid holds on an outstretched hand
In the midst of a silver paper land—
Is coming to me! I know its true

Four Helpful Devices Make Living Easier

Are you planning to make over your living room? If you want help with the color scheme get a copy of the booklet, "Color Schemes for the Living Room," by Claire Winslow, Tribune stylist in interior decoration. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower. Price, 2 cents. Postpaid, 3 cents.

By Claire Winslow.

We came across four helps for the homemaker the other day, aids that are efficient but not high priced. We'll list them for your convenience.

1. A device to stop drafts and dirt from coming in under the door. Made of metal and fabricated material, it works automatically. When the door is ipened it lifts up out of the way. When it is closed it springs down firmly against the door or floor covering, shutting off all drafts. There is no rubbing, no wear. And your rugs will be kept cleaner and the room warmer if you use this clever, stop-a-draft device. You can easily install it yourself.

2. An efficient cleaner for walls and for painted and enameled surfaces, for floors, table tops, tiling, and refrigerators. This product is made by a firm known for its excellent oil soap. It's gritless, economical, and pleasant to use. And it will do the work. You simply place two or three tablespoons in a gallon of warm water, dip your sponge or cloth in it and wipe off the surface you wish to clean. Rinse with clear, warm water.

3. Have you seen the new aluminum roaster-broiler? This two-in-one utensil serves as broiler or roaster merely by inverting a trivet that comes with it. As a broiler it is smokeless, as the unusually deep pan prevents the heat from reaching the drippings.

It's especially good as an open roaster for modern ranges, and it will take an 8 to 10 pound piece of meat. Also, it's easy to clean. It would make a welcome present for a young homemaker.

• • •

4. If you wonder why your potted plants are not doing well try a neat little gadget called a water mat. You simply soak this specially prepared mat in cold water and place it in a large saucer so that it rests flat on the bottom. Then set your potted plant on it and add enough water to the saucer to cover all but the top of the water mat.

As the water evaporates replace it to this original level. You water your plant at the top in the usual way.

You can get this water mat in three sizes and with or without a green metal saucer. It's not at all expensive.

Party on Thursday to Mark Birthday of Woman's Club

Members of the Chicago Woman's club whose birthdays coincide with that of the club next Thursday, will have a special part in the organization's 62d anniversary celebration that day at headquarters. Mrs. Willett H. Cornwell, president, will have these members as her guests at luncheon.

Mrs. Edward C. Higgins. [Moffett Photo.]

In the morning members of the junior auxiliary will take part in a pageant, "Lives of Famous Women in the Field of Music," to be presented by Mrs. Minna Schmidt, authority on costuming. In the afternoon there will be cards and entertainment in the club theater. Gift and bakery tables will offer wares through the day, and a crystal gazer, a palmist and a graphologist will tell fortunes.

Mrs. Cornwell and Mrs. Harry Hart, treasurer, and two former presidents, Mrs. Harvey Fox and Mrs. Ozora S. Davis, will pour at the tea that will wind up the day's celebration. Mrs. Edward C. Higgins is general chairman.

Women of the Bar to Dramatize Law Case from Dickens

A court of chancery in London in 1827, with women as judge, lawyers, jurors, and court attachés. This will be the picture presented when members of the Women's Bar Association of Illinois dramatize the famous breach of promise trial, Bardell vs. Pickwick, from Dickens' "Pickwick Papers," at their dinner-dance Monday evening, Feb. 21, at the Congress casino. Men members of the bar are being invited to the party.

Jean Smith Evans.

Miriam J. Selker has adapted the play, which will be presented between dance intervals. Hazel M. Fry will play Mrs. Bardell, the plaintif, and Elaine Eckerling, her son. Bess Sullivan Heptig will be the plaintif's attorney. Zita Stone will have the rôle of Pickwick, and Marion L. Marshall will play his attorney.

Frances E. Spooner will play the judge, and Beatrice E. Podell the bailif. May Hazel Crawford, Cynthia Kelly, Marie M. Manderscheid, Coula Psaras, Anna Johnson, and Julia Palermo also will be in the cast.

Costumes of the early 1800's will be worn in the production, which is under the direction of Mrs. Elizabeth Buchhalter. Mrs. Jean Smith Evans heads the committee in charge of the party. Mrs. Kathryn Barasa Rinella is president of the association.

Contract According to Culbertson

Expert Humiliated Over Chicagoans' Fur Coat "Bet"

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1938: By Ely Culbertson.]

In the mass of correspondence that swamped my desk during the recent national bridge examination there was one letter which, it seemed to me, was outstanding in poignancy and appeal. This was the tender little missive:

"I am taking this examination very seriously. I'll let you in on a little secret. I have a double incentive to make good on this examination. Of course it would please me no end to have a certificate of merit from no lesser a person than the one and only Mr. Culbertson, but also I have a bet up with my husband as to just where I'll land in this contest, and if you know anything about these husband and wife arguments over bridge you can appreciate how important it is that I make a good mark. Furthermore, the bet, if I win it, means a new fur coat, which I badly need. In fact, I'm wondering how much longer this contest is going to run, as my chances get slimmer every day and we had our first light snow this week, and you New Yorkers know how very nasty Chicago can be when it starts. There, I've told you my story—be merciful. Mrs. ——, Chicago."

I was profoundly affected by the picture of a faithful, adoring wife running around in a horrible Chicago winter with no better protection against the biting wind than last year's fur coat. Although I am usually uncompromising toward what I conceive to be my duty, I resolved that the poor dear should have her new coat, even if it required a little cheating on my part. Yes, I was conscious that this would be slightly disloyal to my sex. I did think with fleeting pity of the fur-bearing husband, but salved my conscience with the reflection that he was probably rich and stingy.

When the time came to mark the answers I took up this lady's file with the fervent hope that it would be necessary only for me to be lenient—not blind. Imagine my astonishment, if you can, when, marking each answer with the most meticulous propriety [I had figured on doing my "adjusting" later], I found that the shivering lady had rolled up a score of 100 points—par! I can't quite explain it, but I had the distinct sensation of having been double-crossed! Why, it was downright humiliating—I had made a shameful bargain with my conscience, and now it developed that no assistance on my part had been necessary—the perfidious female had actually earned master rank on her own merits! I am, of course, sending her a master's certificate, but I am doing it cold-bloodedly, in dignified silence. Never again will I be softened up by a letter, however appealing, however perfumed.

While on the subject of the examination, I have to report a very alarming fact. At the time this article is written the scoring is still incomplete, but to date there have been five feminine master players to only three in the masculine group. This is very disturbing—all the more so because I was so sure that it would be the other way around that I made a bet with my secretary [female] at odds of five to one. My pecuniary loss will not be severe, but I shudder to think about the covert gloating that will probably take place!

• • •

And now to more pleasant matters! In these days of trial and turmoil, with half the world trying to cut the other half's collective throat, it is nice to read about sportsmanship. The following letter contains an outstanding example:

"Much has been said [and thought] about the bridge player of questionable ethics, so that the following account of one whose tendencies are quite the opposite should not be amiss. I wonder if you ever witnessed an act at the bridge table that gave you more pleasure than the following:

"An acquaintance against whom I have played several times in local matches and his partner were playing a stag foursome in which I participated. Not vulnerable, they had reached a defensive bid of four diamonds against us, which was doubled and redoubled. I took the twelfth and setting trick with my club queen and returned a spade, upon which the declarer called attention to the fact that I had revoked on a spade lead two tricks earlier. The trick was turned and the revoke was acknowledged and the redoubled game scored.

"About half the cards had been played to the next deal when the declarer on the previous hand laid his cards face down on the table with the remark that the claim of a revoke by him had been in error. He recalled that the small club that was played to the trick in question was played by himself. The redoubled game was canceled and the proper penalty credited to our side.

"You may know of many cases where equal sportsmanship was displayed, but among my recollections of ethical acts at the bridge table it wins the blue ribbon—hands down!

"J. W. M., Norfolk, Va."

Before I took a team to Budapest last summer for the world tournament, I mentioned in this column that we would face two of the "toughest" players in the world in the persons of Jellinek and Schneider of the Austrian team of four. After having met and been defeated by this team in the final round, I had no cause to change my opinion. The two mentioned, especially, were really superb. But just to show that even the greatest have feet of clay, I give you the following hand as described by the British Bridge World magazine:

	NORTH
	♠ None ♥ A 10 8 5 2 ♦ A K 9 2 ♣ A J 5 3
WEST ♠ 9 8 5 4 3 ♥ 7 4 3 ♦ 6 ♣ Q 10 6 4		EAST ♠ K Q J 7 ♥ J ♦ J 10 8 7 ♣ K 9 8 2
	SOUTH ♠ A 10 6 2 ♥ K Q 9 6 ♦ Q 5 4 3 ♣ 7

This hand occurred in a recent team of four match, England versus Austria. In one room England, holding the North-South cards, reached and handily fulfilled a six heart contract. In the other room Jellinek [North] and Schneider [South] reached seven hearts, with North declarer. Certainly the contract was a splendid one and they were to be congratulated for their bidding. Unfortunately, upon East's opening of the spade king, the declarer's foot slipped. He decided to set up dummy, hence ruffed the opening lead and later ruffed dummy's two other losing spades, finally reaching a point where he had to depend on a 3-2 break of diamonds. It did not materialize and he was one down.

An ounce more of care would have made an enormous difference. If declarer wanted to play the hand in such a way as to ruff out dummy's losing spades, he could have done so after one important bit of investigation. By far the safest line of play was to win the opening lead with the ace, discarding a diamond from his own hand, and then lay down just one high trump from dummy. If the jack were to fall on this trick [as it actually would, of course] it would not be necessary to depend on a diamond split. The following line would become safe: Lead to the club ace and ruff a club with the heart six. Ruff a spade with the heart five and another club with the heart nine. A low diamond to the ace and the last club ruffed with the heart queen. Now declarer, with the A-10-8 of hearts in his hand and only the 7-4 outstanding, could safely ruff another spade, draw trumps, and claim the balance.

	♠ A 2 ♥ A Q 8 4 ♦ A K 7 ♣ A K Q 3
WEST ♠ 8 ♥ J 10 9 3 ♦ 10 9 8 2 ♣ J 10 9 8		EAST ♠ K J 10 9 7 6 5 4 3 ♥ 5 ♦ Q J ♣ 7
	SOUTH ♠ Q ♥ K 7 6 2 ♦ 6 5 4 3 ♣ 6 5 4 2

East.	South.	West.	North.
4 spades	Pass	Pass	4 no trump
Pass	5 hearts	Pass	Pass
Pass

West opens the spade eight. Can declarer fulfill his five heart contract against the best defense?

ANSWER—Yes, the contract can be fulfilled, but declarer must play superbly. Spade ace wins. Two rounds of hearts and two rounds of clubs reveal bad break in both suits. Ace and king of diamonds are cashed, dropping East's Q-J and indicating that East is now reduced to spades. One more round each of hearts and clubs are led. Then dummy leads spade deuce. East is permitted to hold this trick, declarer discarding a club. It does West no good to ruff with his high trump, so he makes the best discard of the diamond nine. East must return a spade. Declarer discards a diamond, but what can West discard? If he lets go the diamond ten or the club jack, he establishes the remaining card in that suit for declarer. In that case dummy will ruff East's spade and lead the newly established card. Nor can West ruff East's spade, because, if he does, dummy will discard the diamond and dummy's and declarer's trumps will make separately. It is an involved and difficult, but highly ingenious, squeeze.

Variety of Types Found in Estonia

By Mason Warner.

TALLINN, Estonia.—A world traveler has declared no other people are so devoid of national or racial characteristics as the Estonians. It is not difficult to identify British, French, German, Scandinavian or other groups as to their nationality or origin.

Estonians present such a variety of humankind that a score of them would never be lumped together as having the same nationality. No two seem to resemble each other. They may be tall or short, stout or slender, blond or brunette, voluble or reticent in speech, swift or slow in gesture, with different shapes of heads and a variety of facial features.

The majority of Estonians are trilingual. Almost every one past middle age speaks three languages fluently: Estonian, German, and Swedish or Russian. The younger generation endeavors to have Estonian supplant foreign tongues and confines its speech to the native language when possible.

Estonia has been a melting pot for a thousand years. Stone and brick records of her past stand today on the Dom hill. On that commanding point, the ancient Estonians built their Kalev citadel, to be followed by the conquering Danes and their towers and donjons. Then came the German Order of Knights and they constructed their fortresses; the Swedes trailed and erected administrative buildings; the Russians captured the place and added a governor's palace. And now the Estonian republic's parliament building occupies the old site, with Tall Herman tower still standing guard and the ancient walls backing a triumph of modern Baltic architecture.

Perhaps the Estonian people have been changed in appearance as has the Dom hill by the waves of different nationalities.

The women offer greater contrasts than the men of Tallinn. Absolute anarchy prevails in feminine fashions. Seasons of the year, heat or cold, sunshine or cloud—nothing exerts a general prevailing influence. When the populace is out for an evening stroll the variety and divergence in costumes worn makes the scene one of such absorbing interest that a stranger is in danger of walking into a lamp post while gaping at the passing throng.

I noticed two women sauntering along together. One was in a trim tailormade suit of dark blue. Her companion wore a silk dress with a large floral pattern of flaming reds, greens, and yellows.

All colors, all models, short skirts, long skirts, sleeveless, long sleeves—it seemed the women of Tallinn went to Paris, Hollywood, London, Tokio, Peiping, Bangkok and other places far, far away for their styles! The well dressed man in Tallinn did not attempt to corner the colors of the rainbow, but what was done to the style and cut of his trousers, vest and coat apparently was nobody's business. Things just happened. Yet, when all is said, the Estonians make up good looking crowds. The freedom of choice is so unlimited as to be refreshing and pleasing.

One would be pardoned for jumping to the conclusion that where such go-as-you-please costumes were worn on the city streets the bathing beaches might offer something unusual in the way of swimming suits. But they did not. The only noteworthy phase at Pirita, the most popular beach, was the tremendous number of people who could crowd on to such a tiny bit of sandy shore. The sun bathers lying on the beach were packed so closely together that one had to step carefully while making his twisting and turning way to the water.

Within ten minutes' slow walk from Pirita beach are the stately Gothic ruins of the St. Birgitta convent, despoiled and destroyed by the Russians in 1517 when Ivan IV., "the Terrible," was adding Baltic provinces to his domains. The fine old walls still standing are appealing subjects for tourist photographers.

Like other convents founded by St. Birgitta, this one admitted monks as well as nuns, all being under the supervision of the abbess. The sexes were segregated; the nuns' cells were along the north wall, and today a wild vine creeps over the south wall, along which were the cells of the monks.

The Tallinn town market looks big enough to supply a city five times its size with food. It occupies about five large city blocks and farmers for many miles around drive in with flowers, fruits, vegetables, cheese, butter, eggs, chickens, and other farm products.

Horses and wagons have not been displaced by motor vehicles in Estonia. The horses are small, and so are the wagons—just about half size. The market presents a lively and colorful scene every week-day morning from dawn to noon. At 12 o'clock trading ceases as promptly as it does when the gong sounds at 1:15 on the Chicago Board of Trade. In half an hour the entire market area is cleared of every last particle of dirt, débris and refuse—so clean that it does not seem possible a thousand or more horses and wagons and their loads of foods were occupying the space such a brief time before.

Cost of living is low in Estonia. Eggs are sold by the pair, at 2 to 4 cents for two, according to size and weight. Nothing is sold in dozens. Many things are sold in tens. Fat, juicy dill pickles cost about 7 cents for 10. Instead of pints and pounds, the metric system is the rule, and the housewife buys by the liter and kilogram.

I quote prices in United States currency, roughly computed because exact figuring of exchange of money and the difference in weights and measures produces a lot of unimportant fractions. Sugar peas are about 3 cents a pound. They are so sweet that men and women fill pocket or purse with them and can be seen shelling and munching them raw in street cars or on park benches. They are cooked in the pods, which are tender and delicious.

Beef, pork, and veal sell at the same price, 10 to 13 cents a pound in summer. At the height of their season strawberries, raspberries, gooseberries, blueberries, white and black currants sell for 25 to 40 senti a pound—3 to 5 cents.

A housewife does her shopping in person. Nothing is delivered, so she carries a mesh shopping bag or basket. Her first stop is in the flower section and she never fails to purchase a bunch of posies from the gorgeous displays. There is no haggling over price, but selection is painstakingly made, whether the purchase be flowers, fruits, vegetables, or meats.

In addition to peas cooked in the pod like string beans, Tallinn's swankiest restaurant serves coffee on an ornate metal stand, with a candle burning under the pot to keep the beverage hot until poured into the cup.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

What's your travel problem? Address queries regarding where to go, how to get there, costs, and accommodations to the Travelers' Guide, Chicago Tribune, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

What is the favorite sport of the natives of Porto Rico?—M. M.

Cockfighting. It is to that island what bullfighting is to Spain. However, Porto Rico has many other sports, including fishing, swimming, yachting, horseback riding, golf, and tennis.

What are some of the principal holidays in Norway?—F. W.

Labor day, May 1; Independence day, May 17, and Midsummer eve, June 23.

Aug. 1 to 5.

On our trip to Scotland this summer we wish to visit the grave of Highland Mary, who was immortalized by Robert Burns. Can you tell us where it is?—G. F. W.

At Greenock on the Clyde.

My husband and I intend to visit Caracas, capital of Venezuela, this spring, and would like to know something about it before we go there.—A. J. R.

It lies 3,000 feet above sea level, so that, even though it is in the tropics, its climate is that of perpetual spring. It is surrounded by a cordon of blue-green mountains, their slopes covered with sugar plantations and coffee groves. The river Juaire courses through the center of the city. They journey from the port of La Guaira, at the foot of the mountains, where the cruising steamers call, affords some of the finest views in the entire Caribbean. As the crow flies, the distance is only seven miles, but over the serpentine road taken by the autos it is twenty-three miles.

Yes. A fairly steady tradewind blows about the shores, catching and filling all sails in its path.

History and archeology agree that the first cities or towns were built by the Sumerians in the Tigris-Euphrates valley perhaps as early as 4500 B. C. Towns and villages stand on some of these sites today, but none can be pointed out as existing continuously. Damascus, on an oasis in Syria, has the general reputation of being the world's oldest city in continuous existence. It is mentioned in Genesis as already being a town in the days of Abraham, probably 2000 B. C. A reasonably good case can be made out for Cairo as the site of a city or town for more than 2,400 years, but it is not certain that small breaks in the continuity did not occur. On the edge of Cairo today are the ruins of Heliopolis, founded some 3,000 years before Christ. It had a continuous run until Roman times, but finally fell into ruin.

When does the Wagner festival season open in Bayreuth?—C. H.

No.

Biblical Ruins Near Dead Sea Lure Scholar

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—(AP)—A survey by airplane of the historic southern Transjordania region has been made by Dr. Nelson Glueck, director of the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem.

Dr. Glueck has made several important discoveries by this modern method, but he places such exploration secondary to exploration by foot. Some few sites were discovered on this flight, he says, but many more sites found during exploration by foot were not visible from the air.

An ancient Roman road was among the finds observed from the air. Dr. Glueck said it looked "like a new, wide and skillfully built highway" which went from the top of the Moabite plateau to the foothills bordering the Dead sea. Familiar with all modern roads in southern Transjordania, the director said he was at a loss for a moment to understand how a highway suddenly had been built by the government.

A reference to his map revealed it was a Roman road, which, although smooth in appearance, was actually rough and broken in many places. The entire width, length, and course of the road, which hitherto had not been known, was observed from the air and traces of the road, not distinguishable from the desert to a person on foot, were clearly discernible from the airplane.

The air survey was made possible by the assistance of the British air officer commanding Palestine and Transjordania operations. The results were announced by Prof. Millar Burrows of the Yale divinity school.

Dr. Glueck believes that another important find was the site of the last fortress forming the most southerly link in the chain of border fortresses guarding the eastern frontier of the ancient kingdom of Moab.

"It was a very large walled site, which, to judge from its general appearance, might well be an early bronze age or early iron age site," he said.

• • •

Nothing new was revealed in a flight over the cultivable areas on the east side of the Dead sea. He described the fields as "most impressive."

With proper care and some amount of drainage, he said, the area probably supported at times in the past considerable numbers of people, in comparison with the handful of families that live there now. A careful examination of the adjacent areas of the Dead sea itself revealed no traces of buried ruins beneath the surface of the waters.

"It may be," Dr. Glueck said, "that the waters of the Dead sea have covered the cities of Sodom, Gomorrah, and Zoar and left over them in the course of millennia saline deposits impenetrable by the eye. It is our belief, however, that Zoar may yet be found on terra firma. It is probably so covered with accretions of later ages that it will be found, if at all, only by accident."

TUMWATER CANYON.

To the Travel Editor.—Feb. 4.—Several years ago I had the pleasure of witnessing a grand display of nature. After leaving Leavenworth, Wash., on the Stevens Pass highway one fine October morning, we entered Tumwater canyon.

To the left, just beside the highway, were the dashing, foaming, tumbling waters of the Wenatchee river. There was scarcely room enough for the river and the highway as we first entered the canyon.

Most of the trees found there were evergreens, but as we went farther up the canyon we found alders, aspens, and the beauties of them all—the maples. As we looked toward the mountain, towering nearly a mile above us, they graduated in color from yellow to deep red. They were not in solid masses, but in spots wherever they could find enough soil and protection to take root.

Although this wonderful spectacle resembled a crazy quilt, it gave me the impression of a rich Joseph's coat, featuring all the colors of the rainbow. To give it a still more wonderful setting, there lay a soft fringe of snow on the very summit, giving it a lace cap effect.

By watching carefully one could see a dark shadow passing behind a bush here and there as the deer softly and silently stole away. One could also hear the splash of Mrs. Beaver as she slipped into the river, or catch the gleam of speckled trout in quest of their breakfast.

RALPH DUBEL, Woodinville, Wash.

To the ones who didn't, we'd like to express our gratitude through your columns. We were so glad to hear from all of you. I am indebted to each one for many moments of happiness and for a Christmas that was merry in spite of being shut in. I would like to answer many letters, but I am not strong enough yet. So I take this means of saying to these friends and to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, "Sincere thanks, and a Happy New Year."

READERS' REQUESTS.

To the Travel Editor.—Feb. 1.—I am compiling material for a unique type of "armchair" travel book, and while I realize that shut-ins take precedence on the mailing lists of your readers, I should appreciate hearing from those who would coöperate in mailing cards, luggage stickers [hotel or foreign railway], pamphlets, etc., from out of the way places these sojourners happen to visit.

ROSALYN V. KURTZ, 1307 Foster avenue, Chicago.

THEY'D ENJOY LETTERS.

To the Travel Editor.—Feb. 7.—Will you please enter the name of James Hutton, 1416 North 8th street, Springfield, Ill., on the list of shut-ins who would appreciate postal cards or notes from travelers? He has spent the last thirteen years of his life in bed, being a sufferer from arthritis. He cannot turn his head from right to left.

A FRIEND.

Oak Park, Ill., Jan. 26.—To the Travel Editor: I should greatly appreciate your including the name of Mrs. Rose L. Mayo, 2041 West Roosevelt road, Chicago, on your list to receive mail from your readers. It would make the new year brighter for a shut-in.

ELIZABETH HALL.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—To the Travel Editor: I would appreciate your putting my name on your list to receive cards and literature. Owing to my age [84], I am something of a shut-in. My address is 1924 North Sawyer avenue.

C. W. MAINS.

To the Travel Editor.—Feb. 9.—Two women who are invalids would enjoy hearing from any one who is traveling and who would send them cards or letters. One is Mrs. C. S. Duckworth, route 1, box 32, Midland, Tex., and the other is Mrs. G. W. Wilson, box 464, Farmington, N. M. Thank you.

AN ILLINOIS FRIEND.

To the Travel Editor.—Feb. 3.—Will you kindly enter the name of Bryce J. Foran, 1929 Fillmore street, Hollywood, Fla., on your list of shut-ins? He is 18 and has been a shut-in for three years with heart trouble. His mail means a great deal to him. Cards or short letters would be such a joy.

MRS. S. G.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—To the Travel Editor: Will you please place the name of Mrs. Barbara Kleuck, 6418 North Oakley avenue, Chicago, on your list to receive letters and cards? She has been in bed for more than a year because of arthritis. She has a son about 2 years old. I know she will be very happy to hear from any one, and it will help her endure the long hours while she is a shut-in.

MORE OR LESS PERSONAL

Fifty years ago Thomas Cook established his first Chicago office. Today E. O. O'Connor, Chicago manager for Cook's, announces the opening of new offices at 16 N. Michigan avenue. There are two floors, joined by a private elevator, the first housing the foreign exchange department, information department, and consultation offices, and the second the rates department, manager's office, and agents' department which serves out of town clients. The new rooms afford much more space than was available in the former address at 350 N. Michigan avenue.

Travelogues of the week: "Around the Mediterranean" will be the subject of Miss Clara E. Laughlin's talk on Thursday afternoon at the Old Heidelberg restaurant. On Friday at 11 a. m. at the Fair store Sam Campbell will show his own color movie of the north woods to illustrate a talk on "The Philosopher of the Forest." John Hutter will give a lecture at the Hibbard school, Ainslie street and Sawyer avenue, on Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. on "Over the Andes and Down the Magdalena." On Thursday John D. Lippy Jr. will talk at the Allerton hotel at 8:30 p. m. on "The Highway Traveler." At the Art institute today at 3:45 p. m. Miss Helen Parker will discuss "Off the Main Highways in France."

A meeting of the Bons Vivants will be held tomorrow night at 6:30 o'clock at the Kungsholm restaurant. After dinner Gus Anderson will show films and talk on countries he has visited.

William Tell's Town.

It was at Altdorf, near the south end of Lake Lucerne, Switzerland, that William Tell shot the apple off his son's head. Tell was born in Burglen, a mile distant from Altdorf. Rossini composed most of his opera, "Guillaume Tell," at Brunnen, Switzerland.

Arabian Gents Prefer Blondes

JERUSALEM, Palestine. — (AP) — Movie patrons in Palestine, where 60 languages are spoken, hear or read a number of them at each performance. The feature picture, which may be in English, French, German, and occasionally Russian, usually is preceded by a newsreel in Hebrew and another in French.

Translations in two languages are carried on a running strip at the side of the screen, and frequently there is a translation in a third language. American talkies seem to be the most popular. Translations in Hebrew and German are projected in the Jewish theaters.

Arabs like American westerns. Bedouins ride in for miles to attend an American "horse opera" in which they cheer the blonde heroine and hiss the varmint trying to steal her father's cattle.

Travelers Will Greet Spring on Adriatic Shore

When the S. S. Champlain sets out on a Mediterranean and Adriatic cruise March 12 it will include two cities that for the first time have been placed on such an itinerary. They are Vienna and Budapest. An excursion from Venice will give the cruise members an opportunity to visit these gay European capitals before the influx of summer visitors begins.

Unlike most Mediterranean voyages, this one will confine itself to the western Mediterranean and the Adriatic. Although the trip will be relatively short [thirty-three days], it will be possible to include visits to more places along the shores of these historic seas than are usually made by any but the full length winter Mediterranean cruises.

Leaving New York, the ship will call first at Madeira, proceeding to Casablanca, Morocco. Then to Gibraltar, Algiers, and Tunis. Next comes Athens. Ragusa will be visited. There will be the Venice and Vienna and Budapest excursions already mentioned, followed by calls at Messina, Naples, and Villefranche, the cruise ending at Marseilles. Westbound passage to New York can be taken on any ship of the French line except the Normandie sailing before June 15, and for a slight extra charge on that ship if desired.

Spring is an ideal time to visit the beautiful lands around the Mediterranean and Adriatic, and this promises to be a most interesting trip.

Lake Defies Law.

FALLON, Nev.—[U. P.]—Soda lake, formed in an old crater by irrigation ditch seepage, can't decide its own level. During dry seasons the lake rises, though ditches are nearly empty. During wet periods, with ditches bank full, it declines. Engineers still are trying to determine why.

Going Somewhere?

William C. Neven, passenger trafic manager of the American Scantic line, arrived from New York last week to be host to a group of Chicago travel agents at a luncheon at the Illinois Athletic club. Mr. Neven told the agents advanced bookings already placed with his line show the Scandinavian countries are holding their great popularity with American summer travelers. He announced the Scanpenn, the Scanyork, the Scanstates, and the Scanmail have each been remodeled so every cabin has either an adjoining bath or shower. The line's schedule for the coming season offers regular sailings of the "Scan" boats on 42 day cruises to the North Cape calling at Copenhagen, Gdynia, Stockholm, and Helsingfors.

A huge ice stage has been manufactured in the Orange Bowl stadium at Miami, where Sonja Henie will appear in a revue this coming week. In a tropical setting winter visitors there will have the novel pleasure of watching a fascinating northern sport. Over 1,000 gallons of brine will be pumped through a network of pipes every minute to keep the ice frozen.

On June 4 the new 17,000 ton flagship of the Norwegian-American line, the Oslofjord, will make its maiden voyage to this country, arriving in New York on June 13. With the Stavangerfjord it will provide the only direct service between Norway and the United States. It will carry 800 passengers and is the highest powered vessel ever designed for propulsion with geared Diesel engines.

F. H. Baird, passenger trafic manager, says the Florida Sunbeam, New York Central's fast train to the south, carried more Florida bound passengers during January than it did during the corresponding period a year ago.

A simple frame house at Perikbonka in the Lake St. John district, Quebec, Canada, immortalized in Louis Hemon's story, "Maria Chapdelaine," will be converted into a museum. Eva Bouchard, typical French-Canadian farm woman characterized in the book, lived in the little white washed home the government plans to restore and fill with objects typifying the country.

The French Riviera is one of the few places in Europe where luxuriant flowers and parasol pines rub elbows with swooping snow fields. This month Nice celebrates its 60th carnival amidst showers of blossoms, confetti, singing, and grotesque costumes. The visitor can have the delightful experience of joining in this happy celebration, then hopping a train for a short jaunt—sometimes as short as two hours—to partake of ski fun in a resort of the Maritime Alps.

Society Formed to Bury Pagans

BERLIN.—(AP)—To day out "ancestral cult places" for burying nonbelievers instead of in cemeteries is the aim of a new paganistic funeral society founded at Bremen.

The society's prospectus says the disposal of the dead is still too closely controled by the churches, which have it in their power to refuse service to nonreligious folk.

The plan is, therefore, to reserve "cult places" throughout the reich, where funeral ceremonies can be conducted without restriction in the ancient Germanic style.

Curacao Island of West Indies Has Dutch Air

A bit of Holland has been transported to the turquoise waters of the Caribbean and has become popular with cruise travelers en route to South America or Nassau. It is the island of Curacao, largest and most important of the sextette known as the Netherlands West Indies. Three—Curacao, Aruba, and Bonaire—belong to the Leeward Islands; the remainder to the Windward chain.

Although Curacao has made great progress since it became an important refining center for the newly developed and amazingly rich oil fields of Maracaibo in Venezuela, forty miles distant, the island is today one of the most unspoiled and quaint spots in the West Indies. The population, which is in excess of 50,000, represents about forty different races. Although Dutch is the official language, Spanish and English are both spoken, particularly by the upper classes; and the natives speak a jargon called "Papiamentoe," which is a weird mixture of Dutch, Spanish, English, French, Portuguese, and Indian.

Willemstad, the capital and chief port, is spread along a waterfront which is usually lined with tiny sailing sloops filled with bright hued fruit from the markets of Venezuela, and piles of fish gleaming like armour in the sun. The port has what seems to be a canal running through the center. This canal is in reality a channel leading from the sea through the town to a huge land locked basin behind the city where vessels anchor to be refueled or to load oil.

The channel is lined with wharves where passengers and cargo are landed. Branching from it, a smaller canal strikes off at right angles, cutting the city again. Both are spanned by pontoon bridges. One of the pontoons of the bridge which crosses the main channel is a steam launch. At the approach of a vessel the launch races merrily away swinging the bridge around until it is parallel with the shore, leaving behind a crowd of annoyed pedestrians who were in the act of crossing.

Those canals and their quaint bridges and the windmills rising above them immediately suggest Holland. The delicately tinted red roofed houses have curving eaves, tiny peaks, and gables which proclaim their Dutch ancestry. The many different types of costumes encountered on the streets and the trademarks on the merchandise found in the shops—which incidentally are a paradise for bargain hunters—reveal the fact that in this Dutch setting are gathered races from all over the earth, for Willemstad is a crossroads town where in 1935 more than 5,700 ships flying the flags of all nations dropped anchor.

There are two bathing beaches within twenty minutes distance from the town at Jan Thiel and Piscadera Bay which offer fine bathing. The nearby grotto of Hato is interesting with its series of weird caves and grottoes.

A Sign on a Saint.

As a novel way of attracting customers to his inn, the proprietor of the Golden Otter, near Granna, Sweden, exhibits at public fairs a wooden saint, says Sydney A. Clark in "Sweden on Fifty Dollars." Around the blessed neck of the saint hangs a sign: "I am satisfied with the Golden Otter. I want to go back."

Americans Buy Land in Bermuda

HAMILTON, Bermuda,—Since regular air service was established with Bermuda last spring the coral island of the Atlantic has become a commuter's paradise. More and more peopeople are using this means of travel in order to attend to business transactions in the United States and yet have the pleasure of living in a subtropical land only five hours distant. This air service may have been the reason for the greatest volume of real estate business in the history of the island.

A report made by the Royal Bermuda Gazette and Colonist Daily states that during 1937 more than seventy-four applications were made by aliens to the governor in council for permission to purchase property in Bermuda. Of this number sixty-seven were made by Americans. As is customary, no information is available concerning the disposition of these applications, but, assuming that all were granted, approximately 150 acres became the property of aliens in the last year.

Land acquisition in Bermuda is not an easy process for aliens. The application must be published in the press in case there might be objections and the governor initiates a thorough investigation of the applicant's reputation. These restrictions, in effect since 1907, have tended to stabilize real estate values and to forestall a land boom.

Of Bermuda's 12,500 acres, only 2,000 may be held by aliens at any one time, a limit set by the alien act of 1926. At present about 1,100 acres are owned by foreigners, most of them Americans.

The report stated: "Reliable figures furnished by a prominent real estate operator show that a rough average price per acre for property sold recently in Bermuda is £500, so that aliens last year paid about £75,000, or approximately $375,000, for land here."

DETOUR

By FREDERIC BABCOCK

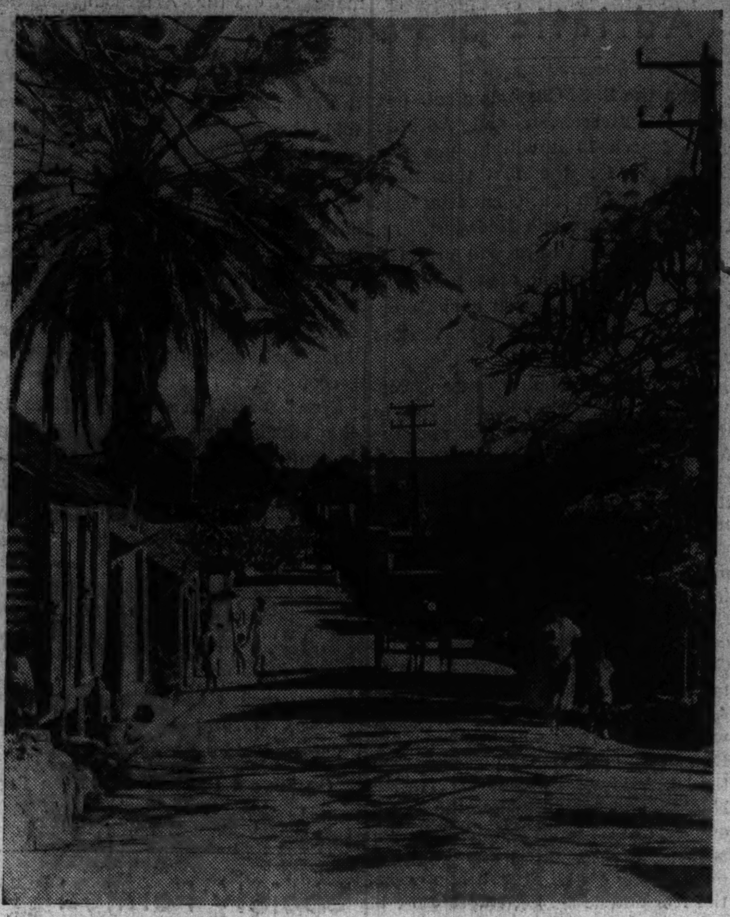
On board the Gripsholm, Somewhere in the Caribbean.—[Special.]—We are on one of those trips that everybody dreams about and once in a lifetime, perhaps, gets to take. . . . We are on our way to a new world below the equator, and before we return to Chicago we shall have toured clear around South America, with everything from the sizzling tropics to the chilly Antarctic on our itinerary. . . . We hope to learn a lot of things about the continent that, to most of us, heretofore has been only a vague triangle dangling from the southern tip of North America.

● Ever since Ferdinand Magellan discovered those straits just this side of Cape Horn, the voyage to the southernmost outpost of civilization has stirred the imagination of travelers. . . . The clipper ships and the whalers used to go adventuring there, and they had plenty of difficulties. . . . Nowadays the trip is made on cruises on luxury liners with a minimum of danger and discomfort. . . . This winter three such liners—more than ever before—are opening up this field to the globe trotter.

● Old time navigators sneer at these ships as "floating hotels." . . They like to pretend that they'd rather go on a freighter, eat salt pork, and sleep in a hammock. . . . Maybe so, but this traveler has other ideas. . . . A floating white castle such as this motorliner is a travel revelation in itself. . . . The Gripsholm is a bit of Sweden; it is more like a moving island than a gallivanting hotel.

● North America was bleak and forbidding when we left. . . . It was a real experience to cross the gangplank and leave behind all thoughts of winter weariness. . . . For eight weeks we'll have nothing much to occupy our minds except sightseeing in El Dorado. . . . What ever became of that business recession? . . . Are the Japs still saving China from the Chinese? . . . Who finally won the war in Spain [or does anybody ever win any war]? . . . Did the A. F. of L. succeed in swallowing the C. I. O., or vice versa? . . . Is it true that the so-called civilized world—or at least that part of it lying north of the equator—once more is engaged in a mad race to see who can build the biggest battleships? . . . We hear rumors to that effect, but we are not disturbed. . . . Down here nothing matters. . . . Nothing, that is, except such things as the Southern cross by night and sun-splashed islands by day.

● Nassau, a brown rock in a sapphire sea, was the first stop. All the familiar sights were there, but, somehow, they never seem to pall. . . . Once more the pleas of the diving boys, the vendors, and the cab drivers. . . . The din gets a little tiresome after a while, but it's easy to escape from the downtown area to the quietude of the coral shores and the tropical gardens. . . . The city of itching palms gives way to the country of royal palms. . . . Paradise beach, Emerald beach, and the grounds surrounding the British Colonial and Fort Montagu hotels are doing business at the same old stand, and they're just as glorious as ever. . . . So are the crotons, hibiscus, and flowering shrubs. . . . And the ocean front, looking like a soft scarf of oriental blue. . . . Unhurried Nassau, lazy, smiling, and saturated with sunshine. . . . It isn't the busiest port in the world, but you'll never find a more satisfactory climate. . . . Echo from Gilbert and Sullivan's "Pinafore": "What, never? Well, hardly ever!"



Nassau, sun drenched island lying in the blue waters that surround the West Indies, has its native section, Grant's Town. Life flows in leisurely fashion along this street, where nobody hurries.

It Takes All Kinds of Tribesmen to Make a Province

KUNMING, Yunnan Province, China.—(AP)—Forty-eight tribes, varying from the head chopping Lolos to the cultured Lungchings, who send their children to the big cities to school, inhabit the 146,700 squares miles of China's Yunnan province.

Differences in dialects, religions and customs—added to the almost total lack of communications—have kept the tribes separate. Members of one tribe, it is said, challenge tigers and leopards while armed only with spears. Others cling to an old custom of cutting off their parents' heads when they die.

BEG YOUR PARDON

In the travel article by Mason Warner, which was published Feb. 6, the city of Tallinn, Estonia, was called "Riga under the czars." This should have read "Revel under the czars." Riga is the present capital of Latvia. Tallinn was once Revel.

VAGABOND'S DIARY

Denmark, not as large as West Virginia. . . . The oldest kingdom in Europe. . . . The little old grandfather of the nations, and full of yarns of Viking days. . . . The land of Shakespeare's "Hamlet." . . . Of Hans Christian Andersen's tales. . . . Birthplace of Thorwaldsen, Holberg, and Bering. . . . Of Jacob Riis, Drachman, Nexo, and Rasmussen. . . . One-third of the country consists of hundreds of islands, many uninhabited. . . . A land of scientific farms . . . owned by the folk who farm them . . . A land where extreme poverty is virtually unknown. . . . Much loved by tourists, who roam from the sights of Copenhagen and Odense to the dunes of Skagen.

● Norway, majestic land of the north. . . . Twelve thousand miles of fjords unequaled anywhere else in the world. . . . Rugged mountain masses, glaciers, snowfields. . . . Paradise of the winter sports folk. . . . Where the ski was born. . . . Warmed by the Gulf stream, it is never too cold for enjoyment. . . . Like its neighbors, Finland and Sweden, it is a glorious country for the midnight sun. . . . In some parts farmers reach their farms by the aid of ladders laid up the mountains. . . . Land of Ibsen, Grieg, and Bjornson. . . . Of Amundsen, Nansen, and Knut Hamsun. . . . Has more potential water power than any land of Europe. . . . Prehistoric remains go back 8,000 years. . . . Enough to occupy the minds of tourists from Oslo to the North cape for many summers.

● Sweden, land of Nobel, Ericsson, and Linnaeus. . . . Country of many "firsts." . . . First to recognize the United States. . . . First to penetrate "the northeast passage" . . . In America 500 years before Columbus. . . . Its copper company at Falun the oldest business on earth; established in 1225. . . . A thousand and one miles from the flower decked meadows of tourist hunted Skane to wild, romantic Abiske in the north. . . . Stockholm of the isles, girted by seas and forests. . . . Gothenburg's canal, the world's finest inland voyage." . . . Old castles, forest fringed lakes, the midnight sun, the aurora borealis.

● Estonia, little Baltic republic. . . . Half the size of Indiana. . . . Lowlands covered with forests. . . . Most of the population engaged in farming. . . . The Doctor's Diary

One Physician's Fight Against Syphilis

A Dramatic Record of Human Frailty

Foreword — With this page The Tribune begins the publication of an unusual document. Bearing the title "The Doctor's Diary," it is a physician's honest and nontechnical account of his observations as a specialist in the treatment of syphilis. ● The purpose in publishing it is to bring home to the individual that he has an important contribution to make in the war against this insidious plague. He can begin it by designating himself as an honest and open-minded observer on all matters of health. Not an observer who will report on others, but one who will study himself with respect to syphilis and all other diseases. ● The Tribune believes that "The Doctor's Diary" will inspire the general reader to this duty to society. The picture to be presented may be shocking. But it is not nearly so shocking as the discovery that an individual has become the victim of precisely this malady. ● For these reasons it is considered necessary to preach this plain sermon.

(Copyright: 1938: The Chicago Tribune.)

OCT. 3.—I am a doctor. My training qualifies me as a skin specialist, but since I opened my office I have had only a few skin disease patients. The rest were all venereal cases. My friends had told me it would be like that. Now I know they were right and I no longer hope to be able to treat only skin ailments. Nevertheless my practice is interesting.

Today a middle-aged man came into my office. He looked like a well-to-do salesman. I soon found that he had an infection. I had to question him insistently, however, before he would admit he was married and had been maintaining a sweetheart on the side for years. He was sure he could not have caught his affliction from her.

"Bring her here and let me examine her," I said. The woman came. She was a typical coquette. Her diamonds glittered; her sable neckpiece dangled down her back. She had on in all several thousand dollars' worth of adornments.

The microscope confirmed my suspicions. Of course, her disillusioned lover was incensed and the break between them is now irreparable. The worst is that he may have infected his wife. I made an appointment for her tomorrow.

Oct. 4.—The wife has just now left. It is as I suspected. But I am interested in this case less as a doctor than as a student of human nature. I was still busy in my bedroom early this morning when Ludovica, my housekeeper, rapped and said there was a woman out in the office. "She is very plain," she said. "She looks like a scrubwoman, or something." When I saw her I thought the same, for she did not even have on a hat, and sat there in a much-worn work dress.

"Why do you wish to see me?" I asked.

"Your husband? You must be mistaken."

"Why, yes, doctor—that was my husband. He was here yesterday and said I should come today."

So this plain, impoverished woman without even a hat was the wife; and the woman in diamonds and sables, the mistress! Such a contrast I shall not soon forget.

Oct. 5.—My prosperous friend, Baron von L——, who is affectionately known as "Beau Eugene," called on me today about an affliction he had. He seemed annoyed when I told him that the treatment would take weeks—perhaps months. He could not understand why he should have to undergo such discomfort, for he had not "had anything," as he put it, for over seventeen years. The dear man thought that when he was rid of his infection he was rid of its after-effects.

I met Beau Eugene many years ago at a dinner given by a local government official. My companion at the table whispered that Beau Eugene was a millionaire manufacturer and the most notorious Don Juan in town, "in spite of his charming wife," who was also present. I observed this wealthy Don Juan with interest. He sat across the table from me and next to a very lovely girl. His wealth must have influenced our hostess to assign him this unsophisticated creature, for there was a sufficiency of elderly married ladies in the party. The company did not seem to see anything odd in this arrangement; they were evidently accustomed to his philanderings.

But the girl! She knew all about her partner and resembled some wild thing that goes circling about the bait in curiosity, terror, and fascinated premonition. The looks of admiration, shyness, and desire she stole at him were plainly prophetic of the outcome.

He meanwhile proceeded systematically with his purpose, keeping the conversation in an undertone. She would look down the length of the table from time to time, now blushing, now laughing, toying with dangerous and delicious fancies. Despite his graying hair, he possessed all the charm that a man needs in order to turn a woman's head. There was no suggestion in his face of the life he was known to lead. He looked his forty-five years, but the manly beauty of his features had not suffered. Large, black, (Continued on page four.)

Hollywood, Cal.

ANY newspaper man will tell you that the most interesting part of the game is in the field of interviews. This is easy enough to understand, because an interview is equivalent to a biographical study at close range, and most of us enjoy biographies. You learn a lot about human nature in years of interviewing the celebrities of the hour, but the one solid lesson you take away is the firm conviction that "the bigger they are, the nicer they are."

Any writer will tell you that the truly important people of the world are the least affected and in many respects the most naive. The minute you encounter pompousness or irritation or affectation, make up your mind to it that the exhibitor is wearing the royal purple uneasily. In other words, there is a bit of phony in him or her, for there is no pretense to the really big people. These reminiscences of celebrities interviewed in Hollywood, on Broadway, in sport, in politics, and in Europe are submitted in the hope that they will interest you over your Sunday coffee.

Tex Rickard, when he reached Chicago for the Dempsey-Tunney fight, was amazed at two things—first, that the midwest, trained by great department stores, had bought out Soldiers' field by MAIL order; second, that Chicagoans asked for his autograph. We played golf at Edgewater Beach, and he signed the register as G. L. Rickard. The minute, however, he was addressed as "Tex," golfers crowded around him, and all during the round he talked of it. The greatest showman of our generation, internationally celebrated, was a lesson in modesty and good manners. He was in many respects the most fascinating personality I ever have met.

H. G. Wells startled me by coming backstage at Loew's State theater and cheerfully sitting in an improvised seat in the orchestra pit when ushers couldn't find a seat for him. The late John D. Rockefeller, plain as an old shoe, complained only once, because in describing his famous golf match with George F. Baker I said that Baker had won, 1 up. Rockefeller sent the card of the match and wrote on it: "If you will check the scores you'll see that my medal score was two strokes better than his." Postmaster General Jim Farley asked somewhat timidly if I'd mention his young daughters. The best part of Carole Lombard's interviews have to be deleted because of her breezy phrasing. Clark Gable enjoyed relating how the studio iced him after he laid an egg in "Parnell." Babe Ruth is a sharp, concise talker, but you are always startled when he whips out a snuffbox, inhales some, and explodes into a ker-choo. Kay Francis is a born rebel.

Katharine Hepburn talks frankly and honestly about her career, but freezes up when love is mentioned. I interviewed Joan Blondell at noon and was with her for an hour; that night I met her and had to be introduced (and she looked very vague about the whole thing). Joan Crawford goes out of her way to give credit to N. T. G. and others who aided her years ago, and scrawls her appreciation in longhand when an article appears. Jack Dempsey likes to recall that the day Jeffries and Johnson were fighting at Reno in 1910 he was training in his cellar for his first fight. He says that he never looked full at Jess Willard at Toledo, because he didn't want to be scared by his size.

Darryl Zanuck is the best listener in Hollywood. Any one with an idea can get his ear. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne are the most generous of critics. He believes that vaudeville is the truest expression of the theater, and his proudest boast is that he spotted Burns and Allen as comers a year before the critics hailed them. Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, stolid and phlegmatic, is a defiance of all laws of athletics that stress mental alertness. Myrna Loy has the greatest natural dignity of any woman I've ever interviewed. Miriam Hopkins is the most highly strung. Jeanette MacDonald has the keenest business sense. Martha Raye is a free, untrammeled spirit from another generation. Mary Livingstone, always under severe nervous tension, has the greatest sense of fair play of any woman I've met and never compromises with it. George Raft has a great fund of human charity in his makeup. He gets more jobs out here for more people than any other single individual.

William Powell has the manners and instincts of a cavalier where women are concerned. His courtesy and attention to older women indicate that his mother must have been a very unusual person.

Walter Wanger chews gum so loudly that he'd drive you nuts. George M. Cohan would rather talk about the late Woodrow Wilson than himself. Irving Berlin will confess that Hollywood gives him a terrific inferiority complex. Both Berlin and Alice Faye, born in May, are hypersensitive. (I thought that was reserved for my month, September.) Connie Bennett says that her main fault is an inability to conceal her dislike for certain persons who get on her nerves, and wishes that she were tactful instead of honest. Louis B. Mayer has an amazing memory for faces and names—powerful flattery.

Don Ameche has the liveliest sense of appreciation in this town. Groucho Marx is the greatest sentimentalist, although he denies it indignantly. Gary Cooper's most vivid recollection is of a river that ran berserk and almost drowned the entire Cooper family in Montana. Claudette Colbert always says, "Now, you won't print this?" Edgar Bergen will tell you of the time a prop pistol in his act saved him from a stickup at a tiny midwestern railroad station. He says that an hour later he was so nervous that the flesh on his kneecaps jumped up and down.

• • •

Douglas Fairbanks has the nicest smile of the male celebs. Loretta Young spends most of her spare money on orphanage kids. Lupe Velez is the deadliest mimic in Hollywood, and her impressions of the femme stars are tipped in acid. Eddie Cantor is very helpful to interviewers, with a fund of good ideas. Robert Taylor is a very swell kid, plain-spoken, pleasant. Norma Shearer is much more gorgeous than you expect. (She, her sister, Mrs. Howard Hawks, and her brother, Douglas Shearer, are the nicest family trio out here, with the exception of Loretta, Polly Ann, and Sally Young.)

Most thrilling experience was that with Sir John Lavery, famous Irish painter, in London. His reminiscences of Rodin and others he had known were a great book come to life.

Voice of the Movie Fan

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have been a constant reader of your column for a long time. But I have never attempted to write in before and tell you how much I enjoy it. I think it's grand! I have just seen the movie "Second Honeymoon." I was very much impressed by the performance of Marjorie Weaver. Where did she pop up from? She is pretty and a good actress as well as having lots of personality. Would you please print a picture of her? I wish you would put my letter in your Sunday column. Here's hoping Marjorie Weaver will be a great star soon. Lots of luck! EVALYN JENSEN.
Battle Creek, Mich.

MARJORIE WEAVER
Work in "Second Honeymoon" Praised.

Editor's note: Marjorie did do nice work, and here's a picture of her. I hope you continue to enjoy the column.

Dear Mae Tinée: You asked for it very strongly in today's Tribune, so here goes.

I have read your column regularly for a long time. I have admired your presentation, organization, and constant endeavor to please—to present fully, with all honesty. I have not always agreed with you on your estimates, but I can't blame you, for the box office shows that far more agree with you than with me.

I did not see all the pictures you rate as the year's best, but I saw most of them, and only "Conquest" remains on my "must" list of those few I haven't seen.

Early in 1937 I saw two pictures that I rate with the all-time greatest. They are not on your list. One is "Rembrandt," the other "Romeo and Juliet." The other picture of the year I rank with the really great is "The Good Earth," which is on your list. On the other hand, I rank "Topper" and "Carnival of Flanders" very high in the year's list. "A Hundred Men and a Girl" I enjoyed very much (Deanna Durbin does something to me), but the picture itself was far too much hash for listing as great. I have been a season ticket holder to the Chicago Symphony orchestra for a long time, and as a true lover of classical music I protested strongly against Stokowski's cheapening of great music in that show.

I listed my all-time ten greatest the other day. They are: "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "City Lights," "Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Ruggles of Red Gap," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Rembrandt," "Romeo and Juliet," "Of Human Bondage," "The Good Earth," "The Cradle Song" (another you gave a poor rating), "Variety," and "Escape Me Never."

Of those you list this year I agree fully only with "Lloyds of London," "Lost Horizon," "Captains Courageous," "Life of Emile Zola," "Dead End," "Stella Dallas," "Elephant Boy," and "Prisoner of Zenda," besides "The Good Earth." As noted before, I wish to reserve on "Conquest," as I am exceedingly fond of Greta Garbo and have great respect for Boyer.

I feel that Charles Laughton stands head and shoulders and waist above other actors, with the big exception of Lon Chaney and the possible exception of Charles Chaplin and Emil Jannings. A very pleasing recent development has been the quality shown by a few male stars, i. e., Leslie Howard, Paul Muni, Spencer Tracy, Charles Boyer, Gary Cooper, Fredric March, and Clark Gable. They all have produced much mediocre material, but they have done what I call very good acting. The Barrymores are to me the puzzle of Hollywood. Their work, in my estimation, ranges from very poor to exceptionally good.

The actresses are different in my eyes. All but a very few present something that puts them over, some photographic quality or personality excellence or peculiarity, but few are truly great actresses. I don't believe any compare with Laughton, and only Norma Shearer, Elisabeth Bergner, Helen Hayes, Luise Rainer, Bette Davis, and, most of all, Dorothea Wieck, have put in truly great acting jobs.

Despite this declaration, Garbo is still my favorite, and I will go to see Irene Dunne, Ann Harding, Carole Lombard, Madeleine Carroll, Annabella, and Barbara Stanwyck as quickly as I will go to see any of the above.

I know I am in a minority in my opinions, but I would like to know, how numerous is that minority? I would be very grateful to know the answer to this question. Sincerely, JAMES E. HYATT.

Editor's note: An interesting letter. Thank you for it. I don't believe it will be possible for me to answer your question as to the "minority" who think as you do, but you probably have plenty of company. Come again!

Dear Miss Tinée: Will you please advise me whether or not it was Barbara Stanwyck who played in "So Big" perhaps seven or eight years ago? My husband and I are having a friendly argument concerning same, and he insists it was Irene Dunne.

Thanking you in advance, I am
MRS. J. A. KUSEL,
Coldwater, Mich.

Editor's note: Don't make him mad by saying I told you so, but you win. Barbara Stanwyck played in the sound version and Colleen Moore in the silent adaptation of "So Big." Come again!

Dear Miss Tinée: Hats off to that simply swell actor, Don Ameche! He's terrific! He certainly is my favorite, because he acts in every way naturally. That's more than I can say for most actors.

Campus—a Haven of Romance?

Northwestern, Noted for Pretty Girls, Has High Scholastic, Matrimonial Rating

By MARCIA WINN

Foreword This is the third of a series of four articles on the questions, "What part does romance play in college life today, and what is its subsequent effect on marriage?" The first two articles dealt with the University of Illinois and Smith college. Today's instalment discusses the social side of student life at Northwestern university, a coeducational institution.

FROM the romantic point of view things are picking up at Northwestern university. After some years of struggle, with Cupid always the loser, the great university by the lake at last has more men as students than women.

To the layman this may seem relatively unimportant. Is not the purpose of a university, as Cardinal Newman once said, to teach its students to think? Why, then, should a ratio of 57 women to 43 men some two decades ago have sent the coeds into tremors of anxiety?

Can the explanation be found in the fact that few university students care to devote their time solely to higher thought?

You will find, if you search as diligently as Diogenes, students whose thoughts never stray toward romance or toward the shapely ankles of the coed in the fifth seat down the aile. But they are so far in the minority, at Northwestern as at any coeducational university, that they need not be considered.

During the years 1917-'23 coeds first began to outnumber the men. Many a coed, disillusioned when a year of ardent study produced no romantic gallant for her side, transferred to a university where men far outnumbered the women.

University officials, equally distraught, went into deep conferences. How, without making an issue of it, could they discourage woman students? The solution finally came as neatly as a household expense book. Budgeting. Women would be placed on the quota basis.

As a result the ratio now has been reversed. There are 25 men to each 19 coeds on the Evanston campus, or a little more than a man and a quarter to each girl. And student life again is tranquil.

Northwestern, however, is an anomaly among universities. It is metropolitan and it is suburban. It is as quiet as its elm-shaded acres and still beaches stretching along the shores of Lake Michigan, and it is as syncopated and sophisticated as the night club district of Chicago.

The heterogeneity of its student body makes for this as much as the proximity of Chicago. The 4,500 students on the Evanston campus come from every state in the Union and many foreign countries, yet 44 per cent live in Chicago or along the north shore and commute to classes. President Walter Dill Scott estimates that a thousand students motor to class daily, while the elevated lines disgorge them by the hundreds.

Two tangible results of these factors stand out: (1) The academic standing is high, a 3.9 average; and (2) school spirit is low and college life as such is negligible. The scholastic standing is attributed by some observers to the commuting students, on the theory that they apply themselves more vigorously to study under home rule. College life, they say, partially leaves when the commuters do; the remainder of it may be found in Chicago proper, where resident students come to play.

Northwestern is and long has been noted for its pretty girls. This possibly dates back to those lean years when men were scarce and the girls instituted the policy, new to coeducation, of appearing well groomed instead of raffish, well dressed instead of tousled; alluring and feminine, even in a decade when feminism was rampant and the terror of the universities.

The average coed at Northwestern today is 5 feet 4½ inches tall and weighs 120 pounds. Her waist, somewhat thicker than that of her mother, is 25.9 inches. Her hair is brown and at present trailing her shoulder blades in some variation of the ubiquitous page-boy bob. Her eyes are blue, her stockings sheer.

In roaming around the campus she rarely wears a hat. A flamboyant peasant scarf, immigrant variety, that shrieks its colors across the snow, is her chief concession to winter breezes. She wears sweaters and skirts, soiled brown and white saddle shoes, bright woolen socks over her stockings, and red or green woolly mitts on her hands.

But look again. That hair in its page-boy scallops, is waved into careful casualness. It is clean, tidy. Her nails are manicured. She has on lipstick, powder, rouge, but no mascara. The seams of her stockings are straight. Her clothes, if not expensive, look it. And the face above is generally bright, alert, intelligent.

You will not see her carrying many books, for that is not the thing to do, but she probably will have one tucked under her arm. And her grades will be better than those of the hatless young collegian in slacks, shapeless suede shoes, and gayly striped football socks with whom she is strolling.

This is the average coed at school. At night, however, if she has a date, she is a scintillant sophisticate. Her heels are French and her hat is veiled; if she is going dancing, and she usually is, she wears a diaphanous formal.

Unlike the Illinois coed, Northwestern girls rarely date morning, noon, and night. Four dates a week are about all even the most popular coed can muster, possibly because her likes are more sophisticated—and far more expensive—than those of the girls at Illinois.

• • •

The man she likes to date is six feet tall, with curly brown hair, brown eyes, and what she terms a "V-man" physique, somewhat on the Strongheart order.

What she gets in the average Northwestern man, however, is 5 feet 10¾ inches tall. He weighs 156 pounds and has a 30.8-inch waist.

He wants his girl to be blonde if possible, with long hair and blue eyes. She should reach just to his nose and have a svelte figure. She must dress in the height of fashion, in revealing clothes, and without a girdle, please.

He wants her as intelligent as he, to like art and swing music, to prefer the movies to the stage (but she, alas, does not), to be talkative, sophisticated, and frank, but never, never esthetic.

"You can sum it all up like this," one boy volunteered. "She's gotta be peppy, intelligent, pretty, a good dancer, and a good sport. You know—be ready to do anything. Knows what to do in any situation."

What no man dared suggest was a thought close to his heart; that is, that the ideal date would be less expensive than she is at Northwestern, for the Northwestern coed, being a sophisticated miss who loves the bright lights and a little beer, is an expensive companion. If you take her out, take her in an automobile, please. Not the elevated. And she really prefers, when she steps out, to go to the Congress Casino, the Stevens hotel, the Edgewater Beach hotel, or the Blackhawk.

That may explain why possibly half the Northwestern coeds date Chicagoans, men more adult than their classmates, and men able, incidentally, to foot the bill of $10 or so which her evening's entertainment may cost.

Many Chicago hotels, however, cater to the college students with special Friday night rates of $1.10 a couple or $1 a person minimum cover charge. In this case the evening may cost only $3.50 if you are careful.

"That's $2 for wherever you go, either for minimum charge or cover charge," one explained. "A dollar to eat on afterward and 50 cents for miscellaneous cigarets and candy."

"But how about gas for your car?" another inquired. "That's another dollar anyway. You must dance somewhere in Evanston!"

"Well, I guess I do," the first replied, crestfallen.

• • •

The various dances and balls sponsored by fraternities and sororities are even more costly. Each group (there are 18 sororities, with 900 members, and 20 fraternities, with 983 members) has two formal dances a year, one in the winter, one in the spring. These usually are held in Chicago, at the Drake hotel, the Electric club, the Lake Shore Athletic club, or similar spots.

For each of these, and for the university's gorgeous Navy ball, Junior prom, Senior ball, and Interfraternity ball, all annual affairs, corsages are requisite for the coeds. Whether officially permitted or not, they are there, at an average cost of $1.50.

To cope with this costliness, which virtually takes all dancing from the reach of the poor boy (and although many coeds come from wealthy families, especially those from along Chicago's north shore, the Northwestern man traditionally comes to college with "a lether jacket and a pair of corduroy pants"), or the boy who is not a member of a fraternity, the university officially has stepped in.

Frequent dances, informal in nature, now are held at Patten gymnasium under university sponsorship. The prices range from 25 cents to $1 a couple. Other dances are held at the Orrington hotel, also at $1 a couple. Not only, officials claim, does it give all students an opportunity for dancing, but it keeps them on the campus—and out of Chicago.

When not dancing the students turn to roller skates, bridge, or beer as required activities.

For beer, or other liquors, coeds and man students usually drive out to what they term "west campus" ("we call it that because you always find all your friends there"), a thick cluster of smoke-filled taverns on Dempster street west of McCormick road and far removed from dry Evanston.

Club Cherie in Morton Grove, four miles west on Dempster, is a popular rendezvous here, as is Arnie's White Front tavern, which makes up in inexpensive beer what it lacks in beauty. The Cormain, at the corner of Main street and McCormick road, has the added attractions of a private upstairs dining room and an open porch for summer dancing.

For gambling the students go to the 3500 club, west on Church street in Niles Center, located in what an optimistic real estate dealer once named the College Hill district. Selina Tully's Little club, with 15-cent beer and 30-cent liquor, also is popular, as is the Villa Moderne.

Cheaper drinks may be had south of Evanston on Howard street. The Club Silhouette boasts a nightly floor show, a "hot" five-piece swing band, and a long, long bar. The Ship, near Clark street and Howard, meeting place for atmosphere seekers, has a nautical interior, with a man attired in a sailor suit pounding away at the piano (he plays by ear) at all hours.

The Doctor's Diary

fiery eyes; full, sensual lips; strong white teeth; close-clipped mustache; high-bridged, aristocratic nose—These assured him an easy preëminence over the young gentlemen at the big dinner. He was free of self-consciousness and affectation, and his personality was vigorously masculine.

Whenever I glanced across at his wife a little farther down, I could not but notice how slyly yet keenly she kept an eye on her husband. She conversed as if in a trance. Her mind was never off the couple opposite me, yet I could discern no trace of jealousy in her sensitive face.

At the end of the dinner we men went into the smoking room. Soon Beau Eugene joined us and I found myself in conversation with him. He was cultured, well read, versatile, interested in the arts, of perfect social ease, and with independence of judgment. Now and then his talk betrayed a certain harshness of temperament—a sort of cynical brutality.

After that dinner I continued to see Beau Eugene and his family occasionally, for they were the most stimulating people I had encountered in this town. The first time I called on them at their own house the Baroness von L.— received me, because her husband was away on a business trip to Paris. Among men these "business trips to Paris" usually are not taken too literally. The drawing-room in which we talked was furnished and decorated with all the elegance of a palace.

She was gracious but noticeably cool. She radiated ease, experience, self-confidence. They say her relatives used to call her "the icicle." But beautiful she was despite her thirty years—or because of them—with a mature blonde loveliness. She was taller than most women and beautifully proportioned. Her skin was delicately rosy, and her hair had the grayish-yellow cast of the Nordics. Her eyes were almond shaped, deep blue, and very steady. Her nose might have been a little less pointed. Her mouth and chin were classic, though not without energy. She spoke quietly and with assurance.

Usually I can tell within ten minutes whether a woman is intelligent or not, and I was sure the baroness was intelligent. But I was not clear as to her liking me. I sensed a bit of antagonism in her, and could not say what might be the reason. But how could a man prefer other women to her!

Nov. 1.—I spent a miserable night last night. I was opening a patient's abcess yesterday and laid the lancet aside while I bandaged the wound. I must have slipped on the polished floor and, without looking, grabbed the edge of the stand where the instrument lay. At any rate I cut my thumb on the point of it, while it was still foul. I washed out the little wound at once with ether and alcohol and cauterized it with a platinum wire. I didn't give the occurrence much thought but went to bed tired after my day's work.

At midnight I woke up and was hopelessly unable to go to sleep again. Involuntarily I began to brood about my little misadventure and to ponder on the unpleasant knowledge, that blood is the prime carrier of the syphilitic virus. And then I thought of the dentist that had infected himself in pulling a tooth and acquired the disease despite everything he did, and of an unfortunate woman patient of mine for whom a pinprick (by a pin that had just been held in her seamstress's mouth) had become the cause of tragedy. I turned hot all over and felt the perspiration oozing from me. The thought that my case was like theirs made further rest impossible. Not till then had I appreciated the desperateness of the danger I was in. I closed my eyes and tried forcing myself to sleep. In vain; I could only toss from side to side. This morning I felt as if I had been broken on the wheel. My mirror showed me a sickly-yellow, flabby face. I look years older.

• • •

Nov. 4.—I have hardly eaten or drunk for three days. I cannot dispel the fear that I am infected. I catch myself examining my thumb twenty times a day, and looking for the coating on the tonsils. Now and then the little wound begins to itch or throb, and I feel a strange tenseness in my whole right hand. It is fortunate that I have had to work and talk to my patients. I sought distraction in a new line of study. It was of no use.

"A little seamstress . . . going through her coquettish squirmings in her effort to attract a male eye." (Tribune Studio photos.)

Even in the theater I have no peace of mind. I go wandering about half the night like Ahasuerus fleeing from himself. I am deathly tired yet afraid to go to bed for fear of a nervous breakdown. I have always wanted someone around me, yet now I hate everybody that lingers too long. The situation is intolerable. I used to fancy I understood the spiritual collapse, the mental agony, of my patients. It was a foolish belief. Never did I imagine the torture that lies in danger and its prolonged uncertainty. No one can imagine it who has not been in the hell that I am in. And when the dread symptoms definitely appear—God give me strength to hold out!

Nov. 6.—I begin to shun people. I feel like a sick wolf that crawls into its den to die. Poor Ludovica goes about in tears. I hardly speak even to her. She thinks I am dissatisfied with her. I tell her it is irritability and vexation. She is a faithful soul. I hear her creeping past my door nights. She thinks it is some secret trouble. Whenever I hear the bedroom door creak open I close my eyes and pretend to snore gently. Then she comes in and stands at the foot of the bed and looks at me. And I feel her touch my forehead to see if her "big boy" has fever. She always calls me that when there is nobody else around. It is the maternal instinct emerging. She renounced marriage and motherhood, but the destiny that nature has fixed for women is now having its way.

Nov. 13.—"Yes, dear doctor," I say to myself, "if you are a savior, then save yourself." In the past it always seemed entirely natural that the great majority of cases recovered easily and completely, and I honestly fancied I could heal some of my broken patients by assuring them that their troubles were curable. And often I could not restrain a superior smile when they were afraid to believe it.

Then again I tell myself that I came by my infection innocently and do not need to reproach myself as others reproach themselves who caught it from a woman in a moment of delirium. I tell myself that I am like a soldier meeting his death on the battlefield in the fulfillment of his duty. And this seems to be the only thought that has any comfort in it. But the uncertainty is undermining my resistance.

• • •

Nov. 18.—Last night I slept fairly well. The sore on my thumb is healing up, but the twitching in my fingers is still there. This uncertainty is terrible. Ten times a day I go and examine my mouth, my lips, my gums, my throat in the mirror. Then I strip and go over my whole body for the rust-colored spots.

Every new case of syphilis excites me. Today there came a circus performer — a professional athlete—a young, powerful, healthy-looking fellow. He had a sore on his lip the size of a pin head that had been there four weeks and felt hard to the touch. It looked suspicious.

"The Doctor's Diary" is based on an original translation of "Die Gottesgeissel" (The Scourge of God), by H. C. Peterson (Ph. D., Leipzig). Because of the widespread interest in the subject of the diary, readers may wish to comment in letters. These should be addressed to the Editor of the Graphic Section and should be brief, so that the best of them can be printed.

Nov. 20.—The Wassermann test has come through, and a rash is beginning to appear on the man's chest. There is no doubt that he has it. He got infected by a kiss. He was brave enough; only his large, good-natured blue eyes began to swim. Then he drew a deep breath.

"Thank God!" he said.

"That is nothing to thank God for!" I said, astonished. "It's always a bad business."

"I know it, doctor. But can't you understand the state a fellow gets into after he has had the dread of syphilis with him day by day for twenty years? Can you understand why I have to get drunk at the end of every month, so that I can forget, and then grab the first woman I see? Believe me, a fellow that gets drunk regularly always has something troubling him. Every drinker has a secret that drives him. And then, when I am sober, my worry comes back, and the fear sets in again and keeps up for weeks and weeks, until I have to get drunk again. And can't you see why I thank God the matter is settled now? It's the end of fear. The certainty is bad. I must give up my profession. The last couple of weeks I've been feeling my strength slipping. I'm no longer as sure of myself as I need to be. But the anxiety after each wild night was worse. I'll do everything that you order! but thank God that I am done with fear."

I understood better than he would ever imagine and shook his hand as he left—I shake hands very seldom ordinarily—and thought: Yes, if you knew the state of mind I am in! How shall I react when certainty comes? Thank God, too—perhaps?

Nov. 25.—Beau Eugene is practically over his recent affliction now, and comes to my office very seldom. But I did chance to see him in an unguarded moment this morning.

A little seamstress was walking along the sidewalk in front of me. I knew her because she had once been a patient of mine. I knew that she had syphilis and that she continued to pick up men to supplement the meager wages she earned over the sewing table.

As I watched her going through her coquettish squirmings in her effort to attract a male eye, I almost collided with Beau Eugene. But he was blind, bewitched, and had no sense for anyone but the little seamstress. He did not see me. But I shall never forget the one glimpse I got of him. His eyes were those of a beast of prey as he hurried along behind the dainty, youthful figure of the woman. His face bore a sharp, ugly, lecherous, unspeakably feline expression. I thought of a black cat that I had once seen on board a ship. The cat's eyes were exactly like his as she was creeping up on an exhausted starling that had taken refuge on one of the ship's bitts. So violent was her rapacity that her jaws worked sideways against each other as if she had lost control over them. So, too, had Beau Eugene obviously lost control over his facial expression.

"Ten times a day I examine my mouth, my lips, my gums, my throat in the mirror . . . I look years older."

Dec. 4.—Little by little I am becoming apathetic about my fate. The incessant brooding exhausts one, so that one gets stupid. I move about like a machine, eat like a machine, and do my daily tasks like a machine. If I could only sleep like a machine! But I have a terror of the night. And then there is the dread that somebody will notice something. I am obsessed with the feeling that my acquaintances look at me strangely, that something about me is out of order, for I must have changed my personality completely.

I think I ought to force myself out among people more. Nothing has shown itself to betray me so far, but I fancy I notice a certain weakness in my legs. I get tired easily and am losing weight—in fact I've lost ten pounds in these four weeks of terror. Bad symptoms!

Last night I lay awake, thinking how I should have to reshape my existence when the disease should break out. In my mind's eye I saw my god-children and my nephews and nieces running to meet me when I came on a visit, and my relatives coming to greet me and myself thrusting them away gently, because I was infected. And the children regarding me with big round eyes and wondering why I was so different and so unfriendly—I being the one who always used to pick them up and romp with them. Then I decided to give up my practice and emigrate and not come near my people for years, until I should be out of every danger.

Dec. 6.—This cannot go on much longer. Thirty-six endless days, and no change so far in the little wound, which has entirely healed up. I suppose I have examined this thumb of mine more times in these thirty-six days than my face before the mirror in thirty-six years. I am somewhat calmer. A Wassermann test turned out negative. But that means nothing; the next one may be positive. For syphilis is the trickiest and most slinking of all the maladies in the world. I have had three men under treatment with pronounced symptoms of this disease, who could not remember ever having had an ulcer, or a scratch, or any least abrasion that might have given entrance to the infection.

I must pull myself together and go out and see my friends. Brooding is literally suicidal for persons in my condition. Max Lange, a close friend, asked me this morning to go and call on his brother; his sister-in-law wished to meet me. "Old chap," he said, "either you are in love, or you have become profound . . ."

I think I will go tomorrow. And on Sunday I am invited to a dinner at Beau Eugene's. I wonder how that will come off.

Skiing to Beauty

New Gadget Develops Grace

By ELEANOR NANGLE

DO YOU know that you can ride right to your goal of the body beautiful on the ski bicycle? You don't ride in a literal sense, since the ski bicycle is a stationary one, but when you work on it you get all the beautifying benefits of skiing—and more—with none of the discomfort of snow down the back of your neck.

The ski machine, as used in a Chicago beauty establishment, has magic properties. The shapeless can develop divine figures; the awkward can achieve grace and balance; the stout can trim themselves down to sylphlike lines.

Every muscle of the body can be toned on the ski machine. Feet are strapped to the two ski-shaped pedals and all work is done with the heels flat. To work on it you must find perfect balance, must learn to stand with weight evenly divided, knees slightly flexed, pelvis tilted, shoulders relaxed. As you pedal, hips are always kept on the same level as though you were sitting on a bicycle. If you think that doesn't give a much-needed "pull" in the muscles of abdomen, hips, thighs, knees, and calves, you're in for disillusionment. Do this regularly and the spindly shanks are rounded, or, if it's reduction you're after, heavy hips, thighs, and legs are made slim.

Besides, it's fun. The machine originated in Europe, where women who go in heavily for winter sports first used it to train for the season. Preliminary work on the ski bicycle got their muscles so beautifully toned there was no need for liniment after their outdoor exercise.

Balance, of course, is important in skiing. But no more so than it is in beauty of carriage and grace of movement. It wasn't long before continental women realized that the ski machine was much more than a machine to train on. It can be used to beautify any figure and to maintain it at its perfect state of streamlined roundness.

The ski bicycle even can be utilized to assist in bust development. It has arm stretchers, working on the pully and weight lifting principle, which can be used in many of the coördinated movements.

Working on the bicycle develops coördination, which is the secret of grace. It limbers one and reshapes both the thin and the unstylish stouts. All women dissatisfied with their figures please note!

Valentine's Day Cookies

On this Valentine cookie plate you see date marguerites, sugar cookie hearts, and Valentine macaroons made with condensed milk, coconut, cherries, and corn flakes.

Fresh strawberry shortcake may be served in mid-February, now that frozen berries are available. This is one of the loveliest of Valentine desserts.

By MARY MEADE

TOMORROW is the day to write verses to your Valentine. But the chances are your true love would be more impressed and more readily won by an edible sentiment—Valentine cookies or strawberry shortcake, for example.

This plate of cookies is a sample of quick work in making sweets with sweetened condensed milk. The marguerites are round crackers spread with date topping and decorated with piped icing hearts. A can of sweetened condensed milk, ¼ cup molasses, and 1 cup finely chopped dates make enough topping for forty crackers. You simply cook milk and molasses together in a heavy saucepan for five minutes, stirring constantly, then cool and blend in the dates.

The sugar cookies were made with the same thick, sweet milk, and their frosting was decorated by maraschino cherry slices. Macaroons were simple. Two cups corn flakes, 1 cup coconut, 1 cup drained and halved sour cherries, and ½ cup sweetened condensed milk were blended, dropped by spoonfuls on a buttered baking sheet, and baked at 350 degrees for 10 minutes. The recipe just given makes two dozen macaroons.

Frozen berries make strawberry shortcake taste as fresh as the best summer-time dessert. The old-fashioned shortcake made with buttery baking powder biscuits still is the favorite. The biscuits may be shaped with a heart-shaped cutter in honor of St. Valentine for tomorrow's dinner. There should be plenty of plain or whipped cream to accompany the shortcake.

Spectacular Niagara

1 Always spectacular, Niagara falls seems to breed in humans a craving to be spectacular with it. Even in winter, with its flow stopped by freezing weather, Niagara has a silent beauty that attracts thousands. This winter the ice provided the newest thrill, collapse of famous Falls View bridge, link between the American and Canadian towns.

2 Niagara lures many self-styled daredevils into dangerous and often fatal stunts. First to ride over the brink and come out of the rapids alive was Anna Edson Taylor. She made the trip on her forty-third birthday in 1901, in the barrel by which she stands.

4 Most famous of Niagara stunters was Blondin, real name Jean Francois Gravelet, who first walked across the falls on a cable. Blondin was a financially valuable attraction between 1855 and '60.

5 Precursor of the span that has just collapsed was this suspension bridge, seen here at its dedication in 1899. A short time later the great steel arch was added and the suspension cables removed. Niagara gorge was first spanned after a boy named Homan Walsh had landed a kite on the opposite bank, providing a fragile but useful link.

6 Steve Peere, a painter who assisted in another man's earlier attempt, crossing Niagara gorge in 1873. He was found dead under the cable a short time after this successful feat, and the story was told that he had attempted a night crossing wearing shoes.

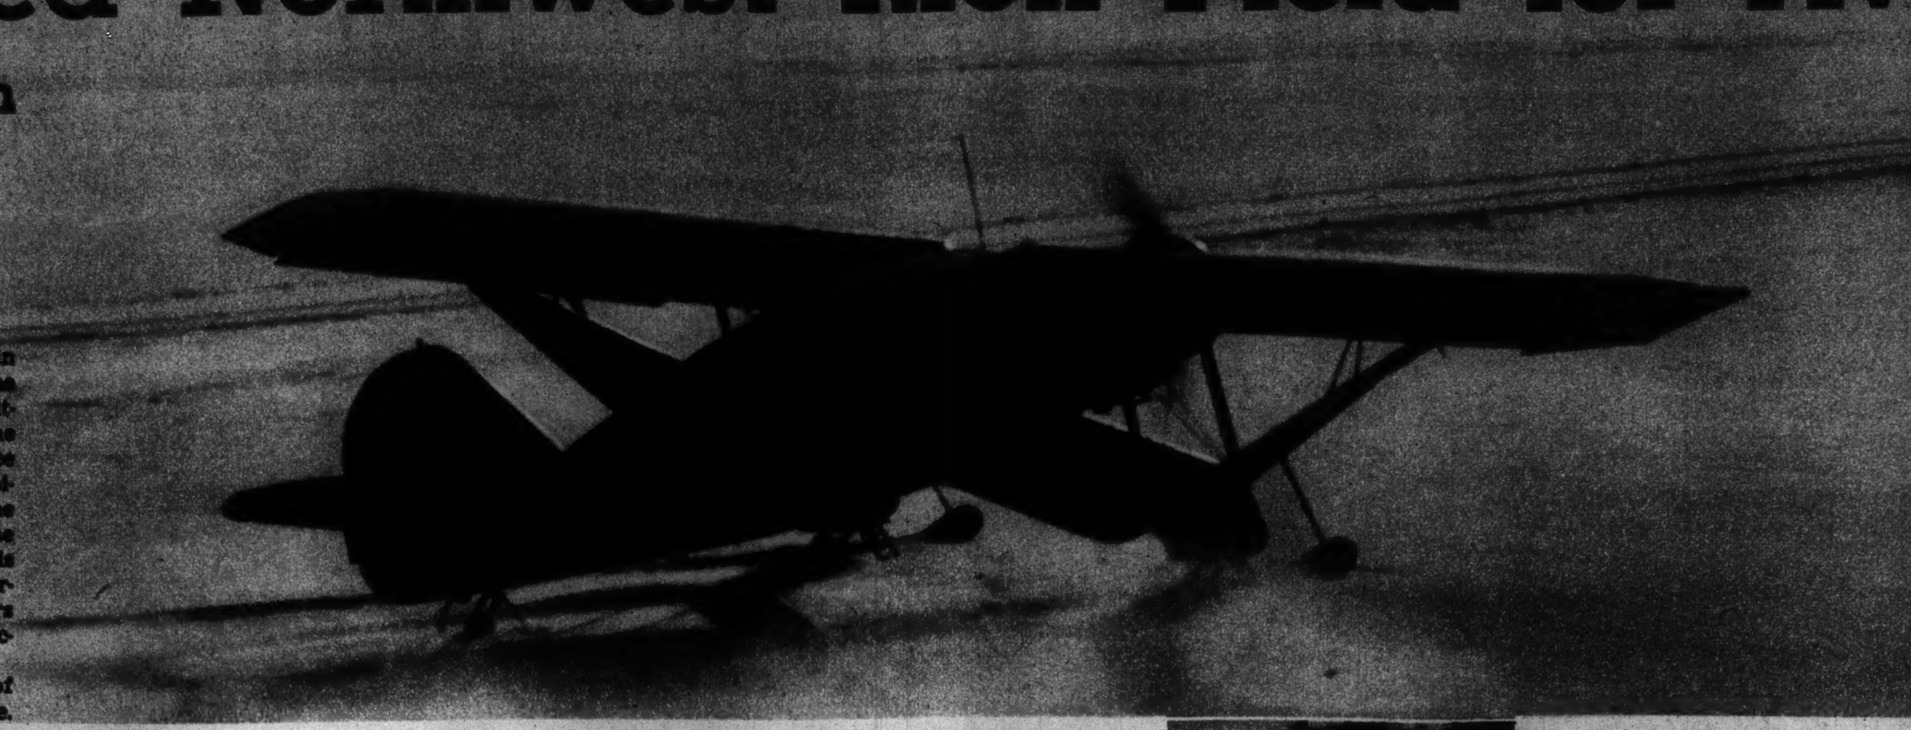
Rugged Northwest Rich Field for Aviation

Planes Can Conquer Nature

By WAYNE THOMIS



IT HAS BEEN axiomatic in aviation that the airplane gives the best account of itself in regions where only the most primitive forms of surface transportation exist. The tropical jungle, the frozen north, the barren deserts—these are the places where the airplane is without a peer. It scorns surface obstacles and conquers space and time in a truly miraculous fashion.

The Northwest Territories of Canada are just such a place. And here in the years since the world war the airplane has won a position for itself on a purely utilitarian basis. At speeds ranging from 80 to 125 miles an hour an airplane covers in sixty minutes the distance that is hard won in a fortnight of surface travel. Deep snows, bitterest cold, high winds, all insurmountable obstacles in the deep wilderness, do not stop the airplane.

As a result all Canada, and in fact all the north, has turned to the airplane as its most natural and usual mode of travel. Trappers, Indians, prospectors, traders, mining executives and geologists, and government agents of all sorts, who never see an automobile, a paved road, a motor bus, or even a railroad train from year's end to year's end, are habitual users of planes.

Indeed, so thoroughly has the north turned to the airplane to supply most of its human needs that the scattered charter, contract, and barnstorming pilots of Canada in the year 1936—the last for which complete figures are available—hauled three times as much freight and express as was carried by air in the entire United States in that same year, and two and a half times more than was carried by all United States domestic air lines in the year 1937.

In actual weight the Canadian pilots, flying for the most part small single-engined planes which operate on pontoons in summer and skis in winter, carried 12,500 tons of freight and express in 1936. This is 25,000,000 pounds. American express and freight figures for 1936 amounted to 8,350,000 pounds and in 1937 to 10,028,000 pounds.

In every other respect the Canadian pilots fell far behind the records for miles flown, passengers carried, and pounds of mail carried by United States lines. It should be remembered, however, that the Canadian flying was done without the aid of government mail contracts, in types of airplanes now considered obsolete in the United States, and over some of the wildest country in the world, where airports and beacons do not exist.

From a humble beginning—the flying of prospectors into the territories—the airplane has come to fulfill many purposes in Canada. Not only does the airplane carry mail and passengers, but it is in many cases the sole source of supplies and communication with the outside world. A number of tiny communities scattered through the wilds from Aklavik in the northernmost Yukon to Cameron bay on Great Bear lake and Fort Reliance on the Great Slave lake are wholly dependent upon the airplane during the winter.

• • •

Food, medicines, letters and newspapers, credits, etc., are flown in during the winter, and gold, silver, pitchblende—the mineral from which radium is refined—and furs are flown out. The trafic still is growing, and with the formation of Canadian National Airways the expansion should be rapid.

Most of the flying in Canada is done in small single-engined airplanes. A list of licensed machines shows that the following planes are among the most popular: Fairchild 71, Stearman 4EM, Junkers W34, Junkers Ju52, both single and tri motored; Stinson Reliants; Bellancas, both Pacemaker and Freighter models, and Fokkers of half a dozen different series.

All these planes save perhaps the Bellanca Freighters are considered obsolete in the United States. All of them, however, are sturdy machines, capable of operation with a minimum of maintenance and easily changed from floats to skis for both summer and winter operations. Most of the machines are powered with Wasp or Hornet engines ranging from 300 to 750 horsepower. Most of them are capable of carrying a substantial pay load.

Canadian flying places a real premium on the carrying capacity of an airplane. Much of the weight which a machine can carry as revenue-producing load in the United States is of necessity given over to carrying supplies which will enable Canadian airmen to walk out of the wilderness if they have difficulties in flight.

Standard equipment on all airplanes flying in the Northwest Territories includes blankets, snowshoes or skis for the crew, concentrated food for a month or more, an ax, a rifle and cartridges, sleeping bags, and waterproof tarpaulins. These things are the bare essentials necessary for sustaining life in the wilds in case of a crash or forced landing.

Time and minor accidents have shown that these things are the minimum of equipment which should be carried. Then planes operating in the Territories usually must carry enough fuel to take them to their destination and return, for facilities for refueling are lacking. Gasoline is found at the railheads and nowhere else.

After the fuel and special crew equipment are aboard the airplanes are ready to take their pay load. This may be small or large, depending on the airplane, the distance to be covered, and other factors. A saving element is the fact that a two-hour flight is about the average for the smaller ships. Thus it is necessary to carry only from four to five hours' fuel. The remainder of the load can be increased accordingly.

• • •

Difficulties of flying in low temperatures can hardly be appreciated by those who have not had experience in the north. It is necessary in winter to heat an engine for from one to two hours with a blow torch under a special hood before starting. Once started, it is necessary to take off almost at once, otherwise the oil at idling speeds rapidly cools and circulation ceases.

Upon landing, oil is drained immediately. Pilots say that after a flight oil will freeze solid while it is running from the crankcase into containers. Fire is an ever-present danger around wooden or fabric covered airplanes, especially if they are oil-soaked, when heating engines.

Supose you want to begin flying at 7 o'clock in the morning in dead of winter. The outside temperature is about 40 below. At 5 a. m. you hustle out to the ship, which has been left staked down for the night, and rig the engine heater and start your blow torch. Inside once more, you put the oil container on the stove to simmer.

Then your packing begins, and the stowing of the load. Meanwhile your skis, frozen in for the night, are chopped out. After the engine is properly warmed you bring out the oil on the run and rapidly pour it into the hot engine. As soon as the oil cap is in place and you are clear the engine is started. Then you must take off, or the oil and engine will cool.

For months at a time ships never see a hangar and all work on them must be done outdoors in the subzero temperatures.

Most of the flying consists of dropping prospectors into the back country near some cache or lake which they make as their base. Return trips are made carrying furs, gold, etc. In 1936 a typical large freight contract was carried out by Canadian Airways, Ltd. This was the movement of 700 tons of freight from Gold Pines to the site of the Argosy gold mines, a distance of 70 miles. One hour in the air, a week of hard travel by dog team.

Using Junkers machines with specially large doors for admitting heavy pieces of machinery, drums of oil for fuel, etc., the company completed the work in less than sixty days. Engines, engine parts, dismantled crushers, rollers, and mill parts all were part of this load, which also included food staples, ammunition, clothing, etc.—all the supplies necessary for a season's work, in fact.

In recent years this type of freighting has become even more common. All winter long a Bellanca Freighter with a 750-h.p. Wright Cyclone engine drones through the skies from Waterways, Alta., to the Eldorado Gold Mines, Ltd., base on the eastern shores of Great Bear lake, some 1,500 miles to the northward.

This big ship lands on skis on the ice of the lake with a 2,000-pound load of foodstuffs on an average of twice a week. On the southward journey it carries sacks of pitchblende—the raw mineral from which radium is refined—on the first leg of a 4,000-mile journey to the Eldorado refining mills at Port Hope on Lake Ontario. South of Waterways the ore goes by rail.

• • •

The Eldorado mine is perhaps a perfect example of the type of industry which finds a need for the airplane in the arctic. Pitchblende, a rare ore worth $85 a ton, was discovered on Great Bear lake in 1930. This is one of the world's largest deposits, and it has given Canada virtually a monopoly on the production of radium, which is valued at $70,000 a gram.

The big problem was to get equipment and supplies into the mine. For two months in summer the Mackenzie river was navigable, but this short season was not long enough for shipment of even the heavy mining and partial refining machinery needed. The airplane was called in. Summer and winter, then, for the last seven years the planes have supplied the basic service to the Eldorado mines, augmented during the summer by boats.

The seven years of work have put the mines at Cameron bay, Great Bear lake, on a solid production basis. The rock taken from these mines contains silver, copper, and uranium in addition to the radium. The first steps in refinement are taken at the mine, where the ore is crushed and most of the nonmetallic content is sifted out. This partially refined ore is pitchblende, and six and a half tons of pitchblende are needed to produce one gram of radium.

With the latter months of 1937 the mines were sending by air an average of 25 tons of pitchblende a month, from which the Port Hope refineries were extracting four grams of radium.

The plane will fly the dismantled smelter to the Argosy gold mines, 70 miles away across the most desolate swamp land, in an hour. More than 1,000 tons of freight was moved by air from this lake during the summer season of 1937.

Three Gasolineless Automobiles

SUBSTITUTES for gasoline as automobile fuel have been developed in three countries almost simultaneously. In England a former forestry official in four hours adapted his 24-horsepower car into a wood burner. The carbonized gas gives him 50 miles on 75 pounds of wood blocks, costing about 15 cents.

Recently Georges Monnet, French minister of agriculture, appeared with a charcoal-burning car. Like the wood burner, it obtained gas from the new fuel and introduced it to the motor through an adapter. Forty cents' worth of fuel will propel it more than 60 miles.

The third auto is being displayed in Italy. It is run on acetylene gas obtained from granular calcium carbide stored in a rear trunk. The gas is fed to a special carburetor.

The three cars are quite similar, storing fuel in rear trunks and utilizing the gas by means of special adapters.

Establishes Gigantic Naval Base at Singapore

By SAM BREWER

London, England.

ARMED with 18-inch guns that can hurl two-ton shells thirty miles, Great Britain's new 100-million-dollar Singapore naval base is scheduled to be dedicated tomorrow after a series of elaborate war games intended to demonstrate its invulnerability.

This strongest of British naval bases in the east, upon which 50 million dollars already has been spent, lies on the northern side of Singapore Island, the same island upon which the city of Singapore itself is located. The naval base, which commands the only direct sea connection between the North Pacific ocean and the Indian ocean, through Singapore strait, actually is hidden inland on the two-mile-wide strait of Jahore, which separates Singapore Island from the mainland of the tip of the Malay peninsula.

Literally hewn out of 3,200 acres of snake-infested swamp land and rubber groves during the last ten years, the base has taken the form of a strongly protected anchorage for a great fleet, and five miles of dockyards, with cranes, machine shops, warehouses, offices, and everything necessary for the repair and maintenance of any fleet that the British might wish to base there. It is there that the huge floating drydock, built in England and towed out to the orient in sections nine years ago, is located. And it is there, too, that the superdrydock, 1,000 feet long and 130 feet wide and big enough to accommodate two battleships at one time, has been built. In fact, it is the opening of this great drydock which is listed as the principal feature of the dedication ceremonies scheduled for tomorrow.

The Strait of Jahore to the west of the new naval base is not navigable. To the east lies a twelve-mile-long channel to the open sea. This channel can be navigated by the largest vessels afloat. There is room in it for the entire British navy to lie at anchor. The channel mouth is protected from both sides by powerful batteries, and additional guns are placed upon an island that lies midway in the channel. As mentioned before, there are 18-inch guns included among the defenses of this naval base. The British government has admitted as much. These guns are said to be the most powerful engines of destruction that the world has seen. They do not, however, constitute the whole of the big-gun defenses, since it has been revealed that there are also 15-inch guns in positions around the channel that leads to the naval base. Also among the defenses is the old monitor Terror with its two powerful 15-inch naval guns. The vessel no longer is adequate as a fighting ship, but in its new rôle as a floating fort it is at least as powerful as its equivalent on land, and it has the advantage of mobility.

Fuel stores available at the base are estimated at 1,250,000 tons, or half a year's supply for normal fleet operations. Between the fortifications at the mouth of the channel and the naval base inland is a new air base, which is becoming one of the most important of the empire's defenses.

Lying half-way between India and China and constituting the most important halting place on the British trade route to the far east, the city of Singapore, just behind which is the new naval base, long has been considered in a significant light by the British. Today, however, it has taken on a new importance in the British mind as the Japanese threat grows. Hongkong is the British naval base closest to Japan, but Hongkong is little more than an outpost. Singapore, with its strong new naval base, is the main line of British defense in the east. And British strategists have warned that Japan is headed for Singapore.

Most outspoken of them all, Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton said at a London dinner recently:

The same General Hamilton, speaking as former inspector general of overseas forces, has declared:

"A land army can lay siege to and capture Singapore exactly as Port Arthur was captured. It is too near the main power of Japan and too far from ours."

Others disagree with the general in his belief that Singapore could be taken by siege. It is common here to speak of the Singapore base as the most powerful in the world. Because experts in the past called it vulnerable, the government has taken steps to eliminate its weaknesses. Not only is it considered today as a strategic position from which a fleet or fleets could operate, but it also is looked upon as adequately situated and defended to repel an attack by land. Yet the base itself has no great military value without the ships that would operate from it.

But without it the British could not hope to fight effectively in the far east. The mission of the base is to provide a supply and repair center for the biggest fleet Britain might put into the orient.

Without the base the fleet would be worthless. On it chiefly depend the defense, if any, of British interests in China, of British trade with China, of Borneo's rich oil deposits, New Guinea's gold mines, and all of Australia and New Zealand.

Besides that, the British are bound under various agreements dating back to a secret treaty in 1846 to protect the Dutch East Indies against aggression. If Japan tried to seize them for their riches in oil and other supplies, any British opposition would have to be based on Singapore.

Arms Stronghold of Orient with 18-Inch Guns

Next to Japan itself, the biggest worry of the British at the moment is Siam. Japan has been cultivating the friendship of the Siamese for some years. With trade treaties and various bargains the Japanese have virtually taken the country's trade away from occidental powers. Japanese officers are the instructors in the army and navy.

Under the "Kra" plan, as it is called, the Japanese are said to dream of taking India in case of war by sending troops across Siam, out of reach of Singapore, and short-circuiting the famous base. There has been talk of a canal across the isthmus, but nothing has been done yet.

Recently the Siamese announced that they intended to build a new naval base at Satahib, within easy reach of Singapore. Their own navy numbers only thirty small craft, but it would be handy for the Japanese if they were allowed to use it.

On the aerial side the Siamese already are four times as strong as the normal British air force strength at Singapore. They have more than 200 first-line planes, including up-to-date Glenn Martin bombers and other American craft. They have announced their intention of buying still more long-range bombers.

Finally, there is talk of a formal Siamese-Japanese alliance, which persists in spite of official denials.

To counter these threats the British have been building up air strength at and around Singapore. Penang, at the north of the Malay peninsula, is being built into a powerful outpost. More than $5,000,000 is being spent on making it an air base, with a $64,000 seaplane base, used in peace time by Imperial Airways, included in it. Batteries are being installed and barracks built, and defense forces of volunteers are being recruited among the natives.

Seven new R. A. F. stations around Singapore are being planned, and it is reported that the air force stationed there will be increased soon from four squadrons to seven.

• • •

While, as aforementioned, Hongkong is looked upon as a remote naval outpost rather than a base of great strength, yet work is progressing at this time with the object of making its land defenses more secure. Up until now Hongkong has depended in the main on warships to defend it.

Australia, too, is doing a bit by developing defenses and base facilities at Port Darwin, and a 50,000-ton drydock for Sydney is being discussed. Next year for the first time the British navy will coöperate with the Australians in a series of combined exercises to test that dominion's defenses.

Nearer to England, bases are being strengthened at Malta and Gibraltar, and Cyprus is being considered as another potentially important base. Malta is much stronger than when the Italians frightened the British during the Ethiopian crisis two years ago, and the British believe now they can hold it against almost any attack.

Gibraltar's Prince of Wales drydock is to be enlarged to about the size of Singapore's. Though the Rock's defenses are said to be already among the world's strongest, they also are being quietly strengthened.

Heat—How Does It Go Places?

Iron flowing from a furnace to ladles. The molecules of iron are vibrating with such large amplitude of motion that the cohesive forces that characterize the solid have failed. Hence the fluidity.

WHAT IS HEAT and how does it get from place to place? Today we are able to answer this question simply and picturesquely but less than a hundred years ago there were rival theories and opposing schools of thought—scientific men were at loggerheads on the question.

That heat flowed from place to place was commonplace knowledge. Perhaps it was a fluid that flowed from hot to cold objects. This was the central idea of the Caloric theory which assumed that heat was an elastic, indestructible fluid dubbed "caloric." To account for the flow of heat from hot to cold bodies when placed in contact, this fluid was supposed to possess the property that different parts of it repelled each other. As to whether caloric possessed weight, opinions were divided. Because the fluid was indestructible, caloric lost by one body was always gained by another. What a strange fluid that possessed such unusual properties!

Objections to this concept of heat quickly arose, for things got hot by pounding and friction. Primitive peoples started fires by rubbing two pieces of wood and both became hot. Whence the fluid? Again, a bicycle pump will become heated during operation. This caloric theory was soon replaced by a mechanical picture—the molecular hypothesis of molecules in motion, a truly elegant theory because of its extreme simplicity and versatility.

• • •

Things became hot whenever the energy of the random motions of the molecules (kinetic energy) was increased. The two pieces of wood became hot because by rubbing the kinetic energy of the molecules was increased. This molecular hypothesis offered the simplest explanation to a number of puzzling phenomena. The molecules of a gas confined to a given volume are in a state of continual motion, vigorously bombarding the walls of the container and thus giving rise to pressure. The hotter the gas, the greater the average speed of the molecules and the greater the pressure on the walls. For hydrogen gas at room temperature and atmospheric pressure, the average of speed of the hydrogen molecule is about 4,000 miles per hour! Thus, to the physicist, temperature of a gas is determined by the average kinetic energy of random motion of the molecules.

Does this concept of heat and temperature agree with man's primitive notions of hot and cold? The answer, fortunately, is yes. If the molecules are moving more energetically in one piece of iron than in another the temperature of the first is higher than that of the second. Further, if the hot iron were touched by the finger the molecules of the skin would be more vigorously bombarded than by the cooler iron, hence creating the sensation of a difference in temperature.

In terms of these fundamental ideas the various mechanisms whereby heat flows from one system to another are easy to understand.

Local winds, the warm gulf stream, the operation of a hot air or hot water furnace are practical examples of what one would label "transmission of heat by convection currents." When a mass of gas is heated locally by the hot iron grates of a furnace, what actually occurs is that the air molecules absorb energy from the more energetic hot iron molecules and thus acquire more rapid motions. The heated mass of gas, occupying a volume larger than that prior to its bombardment, is lighter and hence rises. Such a continuous process gives rise to the familiar warm convection currents.

What, however, occurs in a solid whose molecules and atoms are not permitted to move about with any freedom comparable to that of air molecules? One may heat an end of a glass rod to white heat before an appreciable change in temperature takes place at the other end. Again in the case of wood heat is communicated so slowly that parts of it may actually be afire while other parts may be comparatively cool!

The physicist's picture of what is occurring within, say, a piece of iron, one end of which is heated, is this: The molecules of iron in the heated end are vibrating rapidly and making large excursions from fixed positions in space and thus undergo collisions with the cooler and hence slower vibrating molecules, which absorb a part of this motion. These molecules in turn collide with their neighbors and so on until the whole mass of iron becomes heated. Whenever the molecules vibrate with a sufficiently large amplitude the cohesive forces that tenaciously keep the iron molecules within the confines of the solid fail and iron becomes a fluid.

Drawing representing hydrogen molecules in motion. The energy of the random motions of these molecules is heat. The more rapidly they move the higher the temperature. At room temperature the hydrogen molecule is moving with a speed of 4,000 miles an hour.

Not all solids behave like glass or wood—copper, silver, and aluminum, to cite a few, conduct heat with remarkable rapidity. What the physicists have shown is that those solids that are good conductors of heat are also the best known conductors of electricity! This, they concluded, was no mere coincidence. The agent that was responsible for the conduction of electricity must also be involved in heat conduction. This agent has been identified as the negative electron. In a solid such as copper these negative electrons meander about within the boundary of the solid, colliding with the fixed copper atoms. Not only is heat transmitted by collisions between the neighboring atoms of copper as explained above, but heat is also carried by the wandering motions of these relatively free electrons. Substances of which sulphur, glass, wood are typical examples are electrical and heat insulators; here the electrons are tightly bound to their parent atoms.

There remains one mode of transmitting heat that has proved to be most fascinating to the scientist, for through its study he has learned many of the marvelous subtleties of nature. It is a fact of common knowledge that the earth receives its heat, so necessary for the maintenance of life, from the sun. Astronomers have shown that between the atmosphere of the earth and that of the sun a distance of some 93,000,000 miles space is practically devoid of matter. Heat in the sense that the word has been thus far used cannot be transmitted from the sun to the earth simply because there is no material carrier. What, then, is the mechanism?

Every hot object, whether it be the sun or a red-hot poker, radiates energy in a form of waves that the physicists technically call "electromagnetic waves." Radio waves, X-rays, visible light are electromagnetic in character. Whenever this radiation is absorbed by the skin, the molecules in the skin are violently agitated and the sensation of heat transmitted to the brain. Thus heat, as the scientist has defined it, manifests itself only when the radiation is absorbed.

Just what the atomic process of emission and absorption of radiation is is an astonishing story that will be told next week. Can you imagine that an ice cube placed in sunlight radiates energy to the sun! Of course, the amount radiated per unit area depends on the fourth power of their temperatures, so that the sun radiates at least ten millions of times that on an ice cube.

Mostly About Dogs

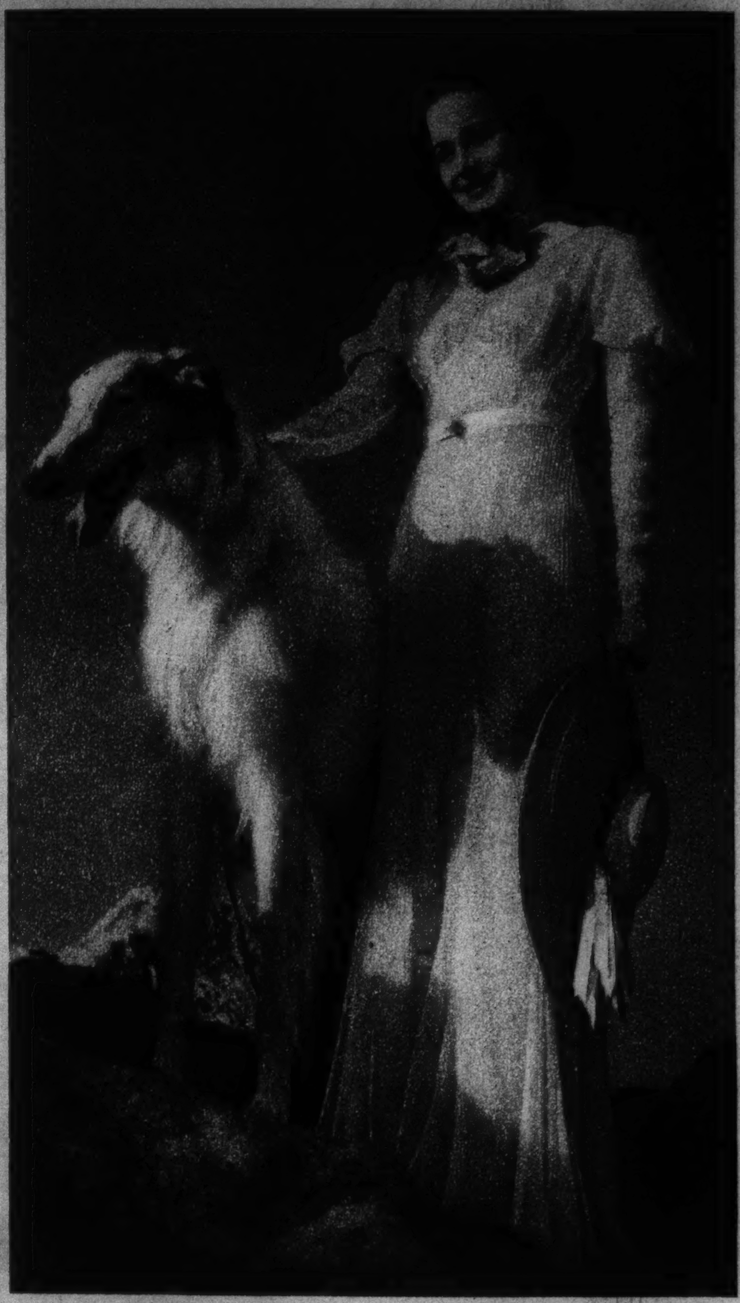
Diagnosis of Skin Ills Is Hard



Peter the Great, a borzoi (or Russian wolfhound) that received much favorable comment for his work in a recent motion picture, graciously poses with Olivia De Havilland, actress.

ON RECENT visits to several small-animal hospitals we went with the veterinarians to look at dogs then being treated for skin trouble. Seeing the cases of dermatitis due to internal conditions in the dog and the cases of true mange (a skin eruption caused by mange mites) reminded us again of the difficulty facing the average dog owner when he attempts to diagnose the type of skin trouble his dog may have.

Another reminder that skin troubles in dogs are an annoyance to not only the dogs themselves but also to the owner was the fact that our Clumber spaniel, Carnforth Tobias, then was being treated for a skin eruption. Having seen cases of sarcoptic mange, we were sure that Toby had that form of skin trouble. But such was not the case. A thorough examination plus the use of the microscope proved that the spaniel had a dermatitis caused not by a tiny parasite but by internal conditions.

No week passes that we do not get many letters which read like this:

"My dog is scratching himself all the time. He has mange. He has bad places on his skin, and his hair is coming out. Can you tell me what to do for this dog?"

There isn't much variation in these letters except in some of the details involving symptoms. All of them illustrate one important point about skin troubles in dogs—the average dog owner is not qualified to make an accurate diagnosis of the trouble, because not many can tell the difference between true mange (caused by a tiny parasite that burrows into the skin) and dermatitis, eczema, or whatever you wish to call trouble produced by some internal ailment. It takes a trained man to make an accurate differentiation between them. Many times we have seen dog owners delay in asking medical advice about treatment of their pets that were afflicted with skin trouble, meanwhile treating their dogs with liquids or ointments which were wholly inadequate to cure the trouble. Sometimes they were treating the dog for one kind of skin eruption when the pup was suffering from another.

This Sealyham terrier, a champion in both England and America, recently moved from the east to the middle west. His name is Hillsome Speedwings. Speedwings (whose kennel name is Binky) registered many wins in 1937 dog shows. He is owned by Dr. Noel S. Young, a member of the board of the American Sealyham Terrier club.

Roughly speaking, skin troubles may be divided into two classes:

1. Those that are caused by parasites, or little "bugs," such as fleas, lice, ticks, and mange mites. In turn we divide mange into sarcoptic and folicular. We looked at one of the follicular mange mites the other day. A veterinarian had it on a slide which was placed under a microscope. One look at the little bug and we resolved never to delay in a case of skin trouble among our dogs! It certainly is a forbidding little animal when viewed through the lens of a microscope.

2. Those that are caused by internal conditions in the dog. There is practically no limit to the nature of these disturbances. Two common causes are faulty diet and intestinal worms. A serious intestinal disturbance also may cause a skin eruption.

We asked one veterinarian to outline his procedure when he starts to diagnose the cause of a skin eruption. Here is what he said:

"First of all we check the diet of the dog. Malnutrition, unbalanced diet, general care—all of these things have to be looked into. We cannot forget that most diets are faulty. Next the dog's skin is examined for visible parasites, as, for example, fleas or lice. In some cases (such as mange mites) the parasites are so small that we can't see them with the naked eye. When we have suspicions of mange we take skin scrapings and put them under a microscope."

It is quite obvious that in a case of true mange (not the so-called red mange, which is the name given to a sort of eczema) the average dog owner hardly is able to tell which is which. He needs a microscope to be absolutely sure. (Letters which we receive from dog owners invariably state that their pets have mange. But in many cases the trouble doubtless is eczema.)

So our tip to owners whose dogs have developed skin disturbances is this: If your pet has inflamed patches on his skin, don't be too sure that it is mange and start treating it with a mange remedy. More than likely it is not true mange, but a form of dermatitis that requires a very different treatment. Correct diagnosis is half the battle in skin eruptions. Better be sure to get a correct diagnosis from a good veterinarian.

DOG NOTE

Welsh Corgis, the long-bodied dogs which are rare in this country, are rapidly gaining favor in England. The reason for this steady rise in popularity is because of the prominence given the breed by Britain's royal family. The princesses have two Corgis as pets and are often photographed with their dogs. We notice that some department stores in large cities are selling "dog dolls" made to look like Corgis, and in one store we saw a combination dog and doll evidently representing one of the English princesses with her dog. The Corgi is used by Welsh farmers to aid in herding cattle.

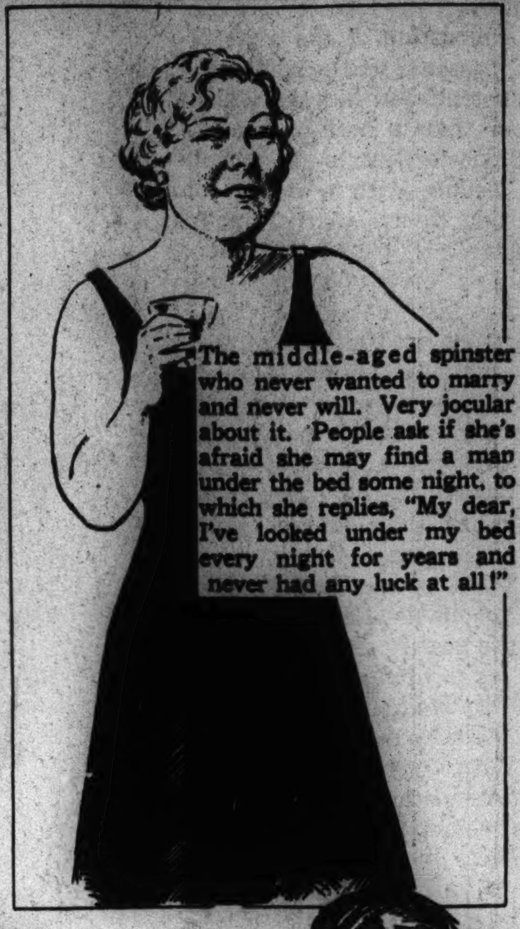
MIDDLE AGE

By W. E. Hill

Copyright, 1938, by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

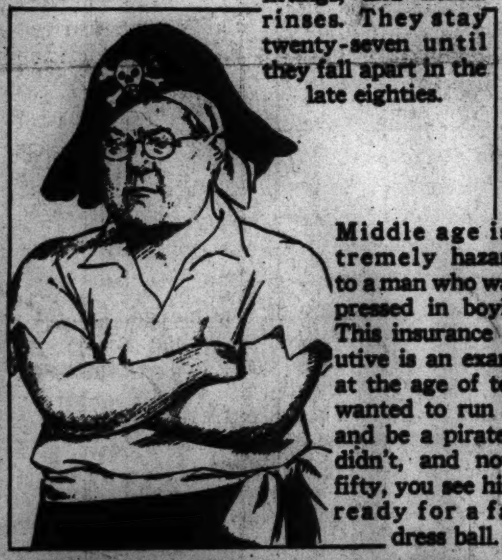
The late forties is that period of wedded bliss when husband and wife decide they can't stand sharing the same bathroom any longer. He spends too much time shaving, and she keeps him waiting while she cold creams, and there are harsh words.



The middle-aged spinster who never wanted to marry and never will. Very jocular about it. People ask if she's afraid she may find a man under the bed some night, to which she replies, "My dear, I've looked under my bed every night for years and never had any luck at all!"

Some girls manage to skip middle age entirely, aided and abetted by facials, liftings, and henna rinses. They stay twenty-seven until they fall apart in the late eighties.

"Are you an iconoclast, Dr. Mudd?" This lovely matron suddenly realized that middle age had crept up on her and that she was getting in a terrible rut. So she is flirting outrageously with her dinner partner, a local dentist. Just to make sure the old charm is still potent.



Middle age is extremely hazardous to a man who was repressed in boyhood. This insurance executive is an example; at the age of ten he wanted to run away and be a pirate, but didn't, and now at fifty, you see him all ready for a fancy dress ball.

Middle-aged bachelors go in for hobbies and collect things, such as stamps, ship models, Sandwich glass and dogs. A dog collector drives widows and bachelor girls nearly wild. They can't understand how Tom or Larry can devote his life to "those dogs," when he should marry some nice girl, etc., etc.

Youthful forty-five. Charles began beauing the local debs around 1912, and is still doing it, when they will let him. Feels twenty, acts twenty, and almost looks twenty with the light behind him early in the evening. Makes the twenty-year-olds feel pretty aged when with him.

Ship Shapes

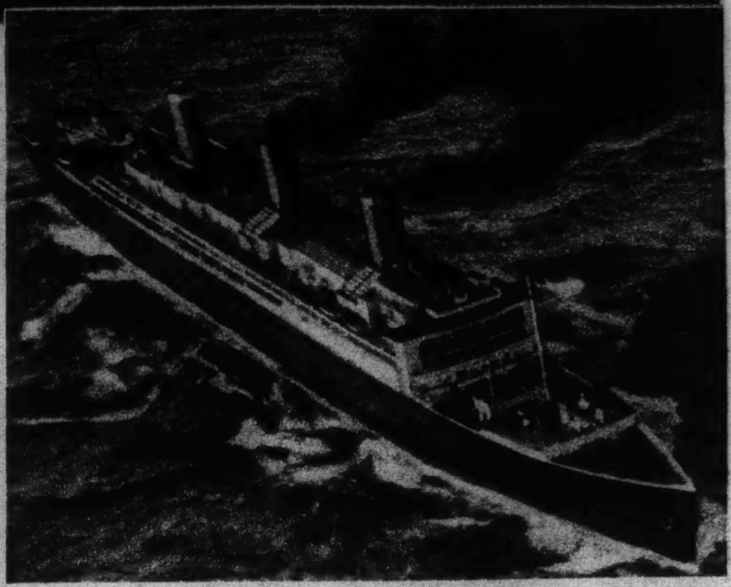
(Associated Press photos.)

2 As new shapes appear on the maritime horizon, an old one disappears. At right the Leviathan steams to a Scotland scrap heap. Built as the Vaterland by German interests in 1914, confiscated by America, it had a speed of 23 knots, length of 950 feet.



Campus Romance?

Ninety per cent of the coeds smoke, and most of them drink. If man students imbibe too heavily, friends generally manage to sober them up before they return to the campus. Reason: many fraternities fine their inebriated members $50.

The coeds say they confine their dating to the week-end, as university rules require them to be in dormitory or sorority house by 10:30 p. m. on week nights. On Friday and Saturday they may stay out until 2 a. m., and 11 p. m. on Sunday. All formal dances must be over by 2 a. m.

Northwestern's reputation as a matrimonial center is generally conceded to be superb, but no supporting statistics are available. Although officials, including President Scott, admit that the correlation between coeducation and marriage probably is high at Northwestern, no surveys have been made.

In former years Waukegan marriages, performed secretly and suddenly, were not uncommon. So frequent were they that the university came out with an official frown upon marriages during the school year unless with parental consent. Illinois' new three-day marriage law, coupled with the frown, has squelched this effectually.

Even Crown Point, Ind., formerly was not too far distant for Northwestern students. That, too, in view of recent action by the state of Indiana, seems to be at an end.

A few secret marriages still take place during the school year, students say, but only a few. The inaccessibility of Gretna Greens is a harsh barrier. A rash of engagements, however, is announced each spring.

• • •

Only in the biographical records kept by the Stewart Howe Alumni association, an organization binding together the Greek letter societies, was it possible to make even a slight survey of marriages. This, dealing only with sorority and fraternity members, cannot be considered typical of the university as a whole, as the unaffiliated students (from whose student days romance is often barred by lack of funds) are in preponderance.

The records over a period of fifty years of Northwestern graduates, members of two typical sororities and fraternities, indicate that one out of every three Northwestern men marries a Northwestern coed. One out of every four coeds, by the same records, marries a Northwestern man.

As long ago as 1872, these records show, Northwestern men married girls from Northwestern Female college. They show also a marriage rate for coeds running as high (in the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority) as 88 per cent.

"We do considerable to promote social life here, and marriages among the alumni are very common," President Scott mused happily. "We started out as a men's school—it was too early for coeducation then—but Evanston soon organized a separate institution for women. Pretty soon we just took it over.

"Now, let's see. The president of the university"—smilingly—"married a classmate. The business manager married a girl in school with him. The secretary of the board of trustees married a classmate. That's a pretty big percentage right there, and you'll find," he concluded, "a good many more among the trustees and the faculty alone."

Unknown Model Immortalized

Tiepolo, Venetian Artist, Painted Her Often

NUMEROUS TIMES does the face of the young woman shown in the accompanying pictures appear in the famous murals and other works of the celebrated Venetian painter, Giovanni Battista Tiepolo.

● Who this woman was no one today apparently knows. What influence she may have had upon the last truly great master of the Venetian school likewise remains unanswered. That she was a young woman of finely molded classic features and of no little physical charm is proved in the various poses of her that still are found in the world's leading galleries. A model par excellence, she remains today an immortal mystery woman of art.

● Tiepolo, who painted her so often, has been dead more than 167 years, yet his works survive as a living force in the world of creative art, growing more valuable year by year. At the Art Institute of Chicago there is on exhibition, and will continue on exhibition until March 6, a collection of many of the most famous drawings, prints, and paintings of Tiepolo, as well as those of one of his sons, Domenico. Tiepolo had another son, Lorenzo, who also was an artist, but almost nothing is known of him and his works.

● The most celebrated collections of America and Europe have lent works by the Tiepolos, father and son, to make this exhibition in Chicago the first extensive showing of the art of this famous pair. Giovanni Battista Tiepolo preëminently was a painter of frescoes, and to view his works in their utmost splendor one must visit Venice, Würzburg, and Madrid. In the Chicago exhibition, however, the lover of art can obtain a clear conception of the style of the Venetian master from the brilliantly executed sketches for murals, which give more than a hint of his extraordinary ability to fill a wall or a ceiling with a design of whirling figures carried out in touches of exquisite atmospheric color. Among the Art institute's own possessions are Tiepolo's studies for the famous Gesuati ceiling (Ryerson collection), the four superb canvases depicting episodes in the romance of Tasso's Rinaldo and Armida (James Deering bequest), and earlier works of the master. Other museums at home and abroad, as mentioned before, have contributed in the form of loans to make the Chicago Tiepolo exhibition one of distinction.

(Lent to the Art Institute of Chicago by K. W. Bachstitz, The Hague.)

● Tiepolo the father was born in Venice, April 5, 1696, and was famous as a painter by the thirties of the following century. The first of his principal works that can be dated with certainty are the beautiful decorations of the Villa Valmerana at Vicenza. During the years from 1750 to 1753 Tiepolo was in Würzburg, Germany, engaged in decorating the episcopal (later the royal) palace of that city. He returned to Venice in 1754 to become director of the academy there. In 1763 he was summoned to Spain by King Charles III. to decorate the royal palace. It was in Madrid that he executed most of his famous etchings. He died in Madrid, March 22, 1770. Biographers record that he was married at the age of 23 to Cecilia, sister of Francesco Guardi, another famous Venetian painter.

● Domenico, the elder son of Giovanni Battista Tiepolo, was born in 1727 and died in 1804. He was an original, creative artist in his own right. After his father's death he developed his own style and became especially famous for delightful pictures of "Punchinello" subjects.

(Lent to the Art Institute of Chicago by the Springfield, Mass., Museum of Fine Art.)

How to Ease a Cold Quickly—Relieve Throat Soreness Almost Instantly

One of the best and quickest ways to relieve the misery of a cold is this: Ease aches and soreness with genuine Bayer Aspirin — if you do not improve promptly, see your family doctor.

The moment you feel a cold coming on take 2 Bayer tablets. Repeat, if necessary, according to directions.

If you have a sore throat with your cold, crush and dissolve three BAYER tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice.

The Bayer Aspirin you take internally will aid in reducing the fever and pains which usually accompany colds. The gargle will provide almost instant relief from rawness and pain, acting like a local anesthetic on the irritated membrane of your throat.

Try this way. Your doctor, we believe, will endorse it. For it is a quick, effective means of relief. Ask for Bayer Aspirin by the full name at your druggist's — not for "aspirin" alone.

"What are you getting with your Lincoln-Zephyr V-12?"

Fair question.

Some fair answers: A New York judge drove 4000 miles to Florida and return, and averaged 16.5 miles per gallon.

A State official on vacation in mountain country checked his trip at 18.2 miles per gallon, and did the last quarter of the way at 20 miles per gallon.

The only "twelve" at medium price has many other unique points of excellence. The body structure in closed models is the only one of its kind — steel panels welded to a rigid steel framework of the truss-type.

Safety and comfort are welded in also. The flowing ride is a new, relaxing rhythm. This car takes you to far places with an ease not known before.

If your price range is the medium-price field, why get less than this brilliant twelve-cylinder performer offers? Lincoln Motor Company, builders of the Lincoln V-12 and the Lincoln-Zephyr V-12.

DOCTORS long have known that severe periodic functional pain is not natural to most women. For thousands more, science has found a way to make it unnecessary. Most women who try Midol find it permits them to go through the days of menstruation physically and mentally carefree. Midol is offered for this sole purpose. It acts quickly. In all but unusual instances it brings definite relief. Many women declare they have no pain at all — or even discomfort—since they learned to rely on Midol.

"My Throat Had to 'Take It' More Than My Chin"

1. "PUNCHES CAN BE PULLED on the screen," says Robert Taylor, "but there's no faking a yell. That's why a 'brawling' scene is often much harder on the throat than on the chin. In my picture 'Yank at Oxford' I get into one swell brawl. That scene took two solid days to film. As a result . . .

2. "MY VOICE AND THROAT got a terrific workout. It was a relief to be able to relax between 'takes' with a Lucky. Some of the English members of the cast were interested that I smoked in the middle of such throat-taxing work. But I explained to them about Luckies and . . .

3. "BELIEVE ME, OUR ENGLISH FRIENDS go for Luckies! Herbert Marshall, Madeleine Carroll and others of the British colony in Hollywood have been Lucky Strike fans for years, of course. But in England itself, I found a great many new converts to Luckies. Well — I pointed out to them that . . .

4. "THE TOBACCO EXPERTS themselves prefer Luckies, 2 to 1. And I also mentioned the 'Toasting' process which helps make Luckies easy on the throat." (Correct, Mr. Taylor . . . and the reason is that the process "It's Toasted" removes certain throat irritants found in all tobacco.)
